Without having his mind clear up sufficiently to tell a dependable story as to how he received his injuries, Michael Shugrue, 58, of 330 West Thames street, watchman at the Thamesville plant of the American Woolen company, died Sunday morning at 7.30 at the Backus hospital. He had recovered from a fracture of the skull, but heart and kidney trouble which developed brought on his death.

Mr. Shugrue was found Saturday, December 29th, last, at the Thamesville mill in an unconscious condition and he was rushed to the Backus hospital where it was found that he was suffering from a badly fractured skull. Since that time he had improved slightly and at one time said he thought two men had assaulted him, but his story was not taken as truth owing to his condition. At other times he was unconscious.

Andrew Shutkowski of High street, who gave up his job as fireman at the Thamesville plant the day before the alleged assault, was arrested on suspicion but the evidence that could be produced tended to show that it was unlikely that he had committed the assault.

Mr. Shugrue was born in Ireland about 58 years ago and came to Norwich when a young man, making his home here since that time. In 1890 he was united in marriage with Miss Johanna O'Connell, who died in 1910. Surviving are three sons, John J., and William J. Shugrue of Hartford, and Francis J. Shugrue of Baltimore; two sisters, Mrs. Patrick McGuire of Chicago, Ill., and Miss Mary Shugrue of Norwich, also one brother, James Shugrue of Ireland.

Mr. Shugrue was a member of St. Patrick's church and of the Holy Name society of that parish, also of the Hibernian society. He was a faithful workman, a man of quiet habits and had many friends in this city who will learn of his death with regret.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Joseph W. King

The life of Eliza C. Hide, wife of Joseph W. King, came to a close Sunday morning at 6.45 o'clock in this city as the result of a shock suffered one week ago.

Mrs. King was found lying unconscious on the floor in the kitchen of her home at No. 3 Summit street on Sunday morning, Jan. 20, by her son Charles J. King of 46 Spring street who had gone to the house, as was his habit, to bring dinner to his mother. Mr. King arrived at the house shortly before noon and not getting any response when he rapped at the door looked into the bedroom window, the shades being up. He then went to the kitchen window and looking in saw his mother lying on the floor.

Rushing back to his home he called his wife and returned to the house pushing the door in with his feet. His wife and several neighbors rushed into the house and Mr. King ran to telephone for a doctor. Upon the arrival of a doctor it was advised that Mrs. King be taken to the Backus hospital where everything possible was done to save her life but to no avail.

Mrs. King had suffered one shock in December and was preparing to make her home with her son when she suffered the second shock.

Mrs. King was born in Colchester on September 15, 1848 the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hide but had made her home in Norwich for about 60 years, her girlhood days being spent in a house not far from her last home on Summit street. The family resided on the West Side for many years, later going to the East Side.

After her marriage to Joseph W. King the family resided in Greeneville and later returned to the West Side, making their home at 3 Summit St. Mr. King who is a veteran of the Civil War is now at the Soldier's Home at Noroton, having lived there since September 1923, Mrs. King living alone.

Besides her husband she is survived by one son, Charles J. King, well known antique dealer and one daughter Mrs. William Douglass, both of Norwich; seven grand children, Joseph C. King, Mrs. Anna May Rankin, Charles J. King, Jr., Thera, Francis, John and Leonard R. King all of Norwich, also one great grandson, Robert Roy Rankin of Norwich.

For a number of years she was a member of Christ Episcopal church but had been forced to give up regular attendance at church because of her health.

Mrs. King was a woman of likeable qualities and she will be sadly missed by many who knew her. Those who survive have the sympathy of friends in their loss of a loving and kind mother, whose chief joy was in her home.

Mrs. Amanda B. Spalding.

After a long illness, which she bore with patience and fortitude, Mrs. Amanda Williams Benjamin Spalding, the widow of Henry Adams Spalding, passed away Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock at her home, 110 Washington street. Mrs. Spalding, who had a distinguished colonial ancestry, was the daughter of the late Capt. George G. Benjamin and Elizabeth Avery and was born in Poquetanuck, but for many years had been a resident of Norwich. For a number of years her residence had been on Washington street, where a cousin, Miss Grace S. Benjamin, made her home with Mrs. Spalding. She was an attendant at Christ Episcopal church, but retained her membership in St. James church, Poquetanuck. Although her life was a quiet one, her sympathies were broad and her interests reached out in many philanthropic ways in generous measure, and she took pleasure in responding to charitable appeals in a way that most frequently did not reveal her helpful participation in worthy causes.

Park Church Music

Sunday morning at Park Church the anthem was "By the Rivers of Babylon," by Barnes. At the offertory "O, Love, That Will Not Let Me Go," Cuthbert-Harris, was sung, under direction of chorister Eben Learned. Both numbers afforded most pleasing solo opportunities for Mrs. Arthur E. Story, soprano of the quartet.

FINLAND WINS OLYMPIC SKATING TITLE, NORWAY SECOND, AMERICA 3RD

Chamonix, France, Jan. 27 (By the A. P.)—Finland has carried off first honors in the speed skating events of the winter Olympic games. Norway came second and the United States third.

There were four events contested yesterday and today. Charles Jewtraw, of Lake Placid, N. Y., International champion, captured the 500 metre sprint in 44 seconds; Thunberg of Finnland, won the 1,500 and 5,000 metre events, while Skutnabb, also of Finland, took the 10,000 metre event.

The scoring by points was: Finland 45 1-2; Norway 35 1-2; United States 11; Sweden 1.

Today the Finns and Norwegians had it virtually all their own way, the 1,500 and 10,000 metre races. The American skaters failed to add a single point to their count of Saturday. America's 11 points were scored on that day through Jewtraw's victory, and the capture of sixth place by Bialis in the 5,000 metres.

Thunberg, the Finnish world champion, was easily the star of the meet. He showed ease of motion and smooth action. Reeling off lap after lap, apparently without exertion in 42 seconds in the distance races, the laps being 400 metres around. His two victories came without his having to extend himself to the limit of his speed, and seemingly he finished second in the 10,000 metres only out of courtesy to his compatriot, Skutnabb.

Thunberg has received an invitation from the international Skating Union to participate in the American championships in February, and he may leave with the American team, headed by Manager Taylor, tomorrow.

The American boys were very popular throughout the games, their unassuming behaviour making them great favorites with the crowd. The games were a success from every standpoint; the attendance was large, the weather conditions ideal and the ice as hard as flint.

In the 1,500 metres the Americans made rather a poor showing, failing to get a single man in the point-taking column. Norway and Finland divided the honors, Norway getting four men in the first six. In winning this event Thunberg covered the distance in 2 minutes 20 4-5 seconds, coming within four seconds of Mathiesen's world record.

Larsen, Norway, third; Skutnabb, of Finland, fourth; Stroem, Norway, fifth; Olsen, Norway, sixth; Harry Keskey, Chicago, seventh; Charles Jewtraw, Lake Placid, and Joe Moore, New York, tied for eighth, Gorman of Canada was eleventh, and William Steinmetz, Chicago, twelfth.

Keskey made the fastest time of the four Americans—2 minutes, 30 seconds flat. Jewtraw and Moore tied for eighth place in 2 minutes, 31 3-5 seconds, while Steinmetz covered the distance in 2 minutes 36 seconds.

Moore defeated Gorman of Canada, while Moens, of Norway, defeated Steinmetz. Olsen defeated Jewtraw in 2 minutes 29 1-5 seconds.

In the first heat of the 10,000 metres, Joe Moore defeated Harry Keskey, the winner's time being 19 minutes 36 1-5 seconds, against the loser's 19 minutes 45 1-5 seconds. Numerous scratches brought the two Americans together and each fought as hard as though pitted against a representative of another nation. Both were very tired at the end.

Strom of Norway defeated Valentine Bialis, Saranac Lake, with 18 minutes 18 3-5 seconds to his credit, as compared with Bialis' 18 minutes 30 4-5 seconds.

Paulsen, Norway, won from Richard Donovan, Saranac, with 18 minutes 13 seconds, against Donovan's 18 minutes 57 seconds.

The results of the 10,000 metres follow:

Skutnabb, Finland, first; time 18 minutes 4 4-5 seconds.

Thunberg, Finland, second; time 18 minutes 7 4-5 seconds.

Larsen, Norway, 18 minutes, 12 1-5.

Paulsen, Norway, 18 minutes, 18.

Stroem, Norway, 18 minutes, 18 3-5.

Moens, Norway, 18 minutes, 19.

The standing of the Americans in his event was: Bialis, eighth; Donovan, ninth; Moore, twelfth; Keskey, thirteenth.

France failed by two seconds to get into the scoring column when Juaglia, finished seventh, behind Hodgens. The entire stand cheered the Frenchman on in his desperate effort to score a point for France, but he just failed to make it.

GISLER'S SIGHT IS VERY MUCH IMPROVED, HE SAYS

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 27.—Geofge H. Sisler, manager of the St. Louis Americans, who has been out of the game because of defective vision, declared in a letter received here that he is working out daily in California and that when the team reports for spring training, he hopes to be in a position to play.

The letter states that his workouts consist of batting, catching, throwing, and running.

"I don't want to say that I positively will be able to play," the letter says. "And I certainly would not say that I will not be able to play. In fact, in my own mind, I am sure that everything eventually is going to get all right, but just exactly when I do not know."

The letter says that his vision impairment bothers him more in batting than in catching.

BERGER WINS FIRST PLACE IN SKI EVENT

Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., Jan. 27.—Norman Berger of Montreal, Canadian skiing champion, today won first place in an international amateur skiing meet at Briarcliff Lodge held on snow imported from the Adirondack mountains. He totaled 126 points with jumps of 110, 106 and 106 feet. Twenty-five American, Canadian, Norwegian and Swedish jumpers participated.

Leonard Le Han of Montreal, was second, with 121 points, and Frank McKinnon, third, with 120 1-2. Of the American entries, Irwin Wener of Briarcliff Manor, finished first in fourth place. Martin Jensen, sixth, was the greatest scorer for the Norwegians, and Eric Wilson, eighth, was the highest of the Swedes.

Arthur Gravel of McGill university, Canada, in a jump broke his left arm when he crashed into a motion picture camera.

PLAINFIELD TAKES EASY GAME FROM FT. WRIGHT

Fort Wright stepped out of its class Friday night when it met the fast Plainfield quintet at the Community House, going down to defeat by the score of 41 to 11.

The score does not signify the oneness of the contest as Plainfield, after the first few minutes of play, used the visiting aggregation for a workout.

Belair was the leading scorer for Plainfield with five field goals and two fouls. Provost made a couple of spectacular baskets, caging the ball from the center of the floor.

The whole Plainfield team played whirlwind basketball, showing some of the best teamwork seen on the Plainfield court this season.

Creatte for Fort Wright played well scoring 10 of their 11 points.

In the preliminary game the Buddies defeated the Central Village A. C. by the score of 14 to 11 in a fast and interesting game.

The Plainfield team has been strengthened by the addition of Harry Mills at center and with this added strength feel confident in the outcome of Friday night's contest.

CLAIMS FIRPO HAS SIGNED WITH WILLS

New York, Jan. 27—(By the A. P.)—Lewis Raymond, representative of a newly organized New York syndicate, announced tonight receipt of word from Buenos Aires that Luis Angel Firpo had accepted the syndicate's offer to $250,000 for a 15-round match with Harry Wills, negro heavyweight next July. Wills, he added, already has accepted an offer for a similar amount.

According to Raymond, who declared the syndicate had several millionaire backers, it is proposed to stage the fight in Brooklyn, where options are held on several pieces of property. It is planned to erect an arena seating 100,000 on one of these.

Hugh Gartland, of Newark, N. J., who conveyed the syndicate's offer to Firpo, notified William McCarney, Firpo's American representative, that the Argentine pugilist had accepted the terms.

Firpo and Wills, according to Raymond, each was offered $250,000 and 25 per cent of the motion picture receipts, each with a privilege of 25 per cent. of the gate receipts in lieu of the guarantee. Paddy Mullins, Wills' manager, has accepted, Raymond said, and contracts are expected to be signed within a month.

Members of the syndicate according to Raymond are withholding their names until final articles have been signed.

FIRPO RECEIVES BIG OFFER TO OPEN NEW STADIUM

Buenos Aires, Jan. 27. (By the A. P.)—It is reported here that Luis who said yesterday that he had refused the offer of Tex Rickard to match Firpo, the Argentine heavyweight pugilist, has received an offer of $250,000 for a fight to be held at a "giant boxing festival" which is to inaugurate a large stadium in the United States.

Firpo declared today that he had been tendered a purse of 300,000 pesos by Senor Ratinoff, of Santiago, Chile, for a bout with the Chilean heavyweight Romero, but that he had declined it owing to the fact that he intends to leave as soon as possible for the United States. Firpo asserted that he did not care what the South American boxing federation might do in the way of taking away his championship if he does not meet Romero.

"My game is broader than the South American championship," said Firpo laughingly. "They can do with that title what they please so long as I am competing for world championship honors with men in Jack Dempsey's class."

Firpo is continuing his training for bouts with "Farmer" Lodge, the American heavyweight, and Erminio Spalla, the Italian fighter.

COLUMBIA AND CORNELL TIE IN COLLEGE BASKETBALL

New York, Jan. 27 (By the A. P.)—Columbia and Cornell, with two victories and two defeats each, are deadlocked at the pinnacle of the Intercollegiate Basketball league at the conclusion of the third week's play in the college wheel. Pennsylvania and Dartmouth, with one defeat and one victory each, are on even terms in the battle for third place while Yale and Princeton, each with one victory and two defeats, are sharing cellar honors.

Cornell's impressive victory over Princeton last night enabled the Ithacans to share the league lead while the Tigers, who downed Yale in the only other league contest of the week, were shunted into last place with the Elis, most of whose hopes of repeating their 1923 championship victory have gone glimmering.

The race thus far is one of the closest in the league's history with indications that the quintet that can win away from home will win the title. So far home fives have been victorious in every game.

Mid-year examinations will keep all the teams idle this week, no games being scheduled until February 9 when Pennsylvania will invade Ithaca for a clash with Cornell.

Sam Pite, Yale forward, has taken the individual scoring honors from Farer of Columbia, who held the edge last week. Pite scored 13 points against Princeton and his total for his three games is 27, three more than Farer, who was idle. Capron, of Cornell, and Kneass, of Penn. are tied for third place, each with 21 points. Kiaess, of Princeton, and Wedell, of Cornell, are deadlocked in the struggle to break into the first five, each having scored 19 in three starts.

The team standing, showing point totals, follows:

	W.	L.	Pts. Scrd.	Pts. Opp.	P.C.
Columbia	2	1	78	64	.667
Cornell	2	1	71	58	.667
Pennsylvania	1	1	48	47	.500
Dartmouth	1	1	33	37	.500
Yale	1	2	62	75	.333
Princeton	1	2	75	86	.333

BATTERY E WINS HARD GAME FROM MANCHESTER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, R. I., Jan. 27.—It took more than zero weather to keep the basketball fans away from the state armory on Dixon street in Westerly Saturday night, when the Battery E, 243rd Field Artillery took the Manchester Red Men basketball players into camp with a score of 24 to 14. The first half was a closely fought period which ended Manchester 10, Battery E 8. It was in the second period that the real speed of a basketball game was shown. Shortman caged the ball for the basket which tied the score and also the one which gave them the lead. The Manchester boys made a poor showing for after caging a basket which again tied the score they were only successful in shooting one more basket for the rest of the game. On the other hand a regular whirlwind followed of baskets caged by Shortman, Plympton and two for Torrey, one of which was made after an excellent one-hand stop of a passed ball. The pace set by the Battery boys was evident by too speedy for the visitors. So closely were the men covered that many laughable plays resulted as the men rolled on the floor.

On next Saturday evening the Shamrock basketball team of Roxbury, Mass., will be the opponents of Battery E at the state armory on Dixon street. The proceeds for last Saturday night's game go into the Hiker fund for the memorial to be erected in Wilcox park. The usual dance followed Saturday evening's game and was largely attended.

The summary of the game:

SPORT NOTES

The East Texas baseball league has decided upon an eight-club circuit for next season.

Athletes of Texas A. and M. College may not be "praying colonels," but they have a Bible as head coach.

Roger Bresnahan is said to have Gainsville, Fla., in mind as a training camp for his Toledo Mud Hens this spring.

Oregon outdoor life and sports are to be illustrated at a four-day exhibition to be held in Portland during February.

Recently the centenary of Rugby football was celebrated in England. It would however, appear from discovery recently made in Athens that the game is much older. During an investigation of the wall of Themisticles, erected 478 B. C. statue base of still earlier date was found built into the wall. It bears two bas-reliefs one of six youths playing hockey, and another of six youths playing Rugby.

FIRE IN THE MERIDEN BRANCH OF SWIFT & CO.

Meriden, Jan. 27—Fire tonight gutted the office and part of the store rooms of the Meriden branch of Swift & Company, with a loss estimated at from $20,000 to $50,000, depending upon the extent to which the large supply of meat and provisions might have been damaged by smoke and water.

Starting in the basement from an unknown cause, probably an overheated boiler, the fire quickly swept through the front part of the building. Firemen working under severe weather conditions were successful in keeping the flames from the ammonia refrigerating system and from spreading into a large adjoining furniture house. The Meriden Permanent Loan and Building association on the other side of the fire also was endangered as the flames leaped high above the roof, but was not damaged.

MATTERS BEFORE THE UNITED MINE WORKERS

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 27.—(By the A. P.)—Adjournment of the United Mine Workers of America convention before the end of this week, was in sight today, following announcement that the scale committee has virtually completed its deliberations and is ready to report. Although President Frank Farrington, of the Illinois district, who heads this important committee, said all members were sworn to secrecy, it was the general impression that they would follow the recommendaton of International President Lewis and advise a renewal of the present wage scale for a term of four years.

This report will stir the insurgents to protest. They have sent in resolutions demanding a 30 per cent. increase and a six hour five day week. They will fight hard for this latter item, and as it was included in the demands of the last convention., it is probable it may be included. According to President Lewis, however, there is no hope at this time of getting shorter hours.

Tomorrow morning, opening the second week of the convention, President Lewis will call for the final report of the credential committee. Insurgents have planned another demonstration when the report on Alexander Howatt's appeal for reinstatement is heard, and again on the appeal of Thomas Myerscough, of Pittsburgh, Pa., expelled for membership in the "progressive miners' committee." However, as the insurgents have been given a full hearing in the convention, and have been defeated on every more, by a vote of approximately 10 to 1, it is unlikely that any further demonstration will last long.

Amendments to the constitution will be considered tomorrow. The committee on constitution, will make its report. Resolutions demanding that the editor of The Mine Workers' Journal, convention officials and committee be elected instead of appointed, is one of the important changes sought by the insurgents. Among other resolutions are several asking that the constitution be amended to permit members to belong to the Ku Klux Klan.

British Open Golf Champion

Arthur G. Havers, British Open golf champion, who is now touring the United States. A match of international importance will be played with Gene Sarazen in California late in January.

SARAZEN BEATS HAVERS 5 UP IN FINAL HALF OF THEIR MATCH

Los Angeles, Jan. 27—(By the A. P.)—Gene Sarazen, American professional golf champion defeated Arthur Havers, British open titleholder, five up and four to go, in a 72-hole match for the unofficial world's professional championship, begun in San Francisco Friday and completed at the Hillcrest Country Club course here this afternoon.

Sarazen came out of the first 36 holes round in San Francisco with a lead of three holes, and this he increased to five during the last 18 holes today, checkmating Havers at the end of the sixty-eighth hole.

Sarazen made the final 14 holes in 56, Havers in 59. Cards for the day's holes: Sarazen 129, Havers 133; cards for the entire 68 holes, Sarazen 280, Havers 286

Havers halved eight holes of the final 36 this morning and threatened with one down, at the end of the eighth hole to tie the match, but the American took the next two, returning to his lead of 2 up.

Poor putting but good approach featured today's flight. The British champion held the advantage of more accurate approach in direction, but frequently was short. At times the putting was amateurish. In the twenty-first Sarazen missed four foot putts while most of Havers' were short.

The tall champion from the British Isles really lost the chance of winning the unofficial world title by missing a four foot putt in the fifth hole of the afternoon play when he tapped it short. He repeated the performance identically on the sixth. These two placed Sarazen four up.

"He deserved to win," Havers said in complimenting the American champion.

"I had a lot better luck on the greens than Havers did," was Sarazen's counter.

By winning, Sarazen preserved his record of never having lost an important match play.

The following cards tell the story:

Morning play—

Sarazen 445, 544 553—39—544, 454, 544—34—72, par 2.

Havers 534, 544, 444—38—542, 454, 544—36—74.

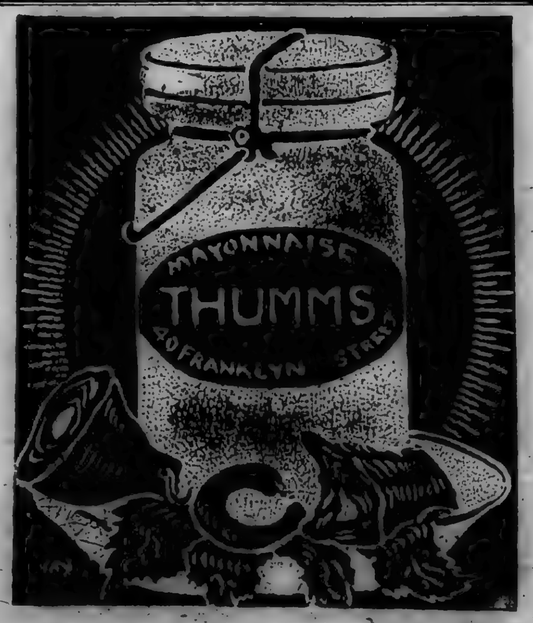
Afternoon play—

Sarazen 435, 453, 454—37—344, 44—19—56—128, par 126.

Havers 424, 554, 444—37—553, 45—23—68—133.

Sarazen made six birdies during the day, duplicating a birdie on the tenth hole morning and afternoon a par four hole.

Havers turned in two birdies, both on the eighth hole, a par five.



POETRY

Our Hymn of Praise

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vows unto the Lord, now, in the presence of all His people."—Psalm 116:12-14.

What shall we render, Lord, to Thee,
For all Thy benefits, so free?
We'll take salvation's cup, O Lord,
And pay our vows to Thee, our God—
Midst all Thy people would we sing,
And glad hosannas to Thee bring.

Our thanks we bring (Lord, make them more!)
For all the bounties from Thy store;
Unnumbered blessings Thou hast giv'n
In richest show'rs, sent down from Heav'n—
For these accept our thanks, we pray,
On this, our glad Thanksgiving Day.

Praise do we bring with heart and voice;
(Lord let our souls indeed rejoice!)—
"Thy ways are ways of pleasantness,
And all Thy paths are paths of peace"—
Thy righteousness shall aye endure;
Thy mercies are forever sure.

Our love we render; let it be
A holy off'ring, to Thee!
We'd love Thee in our ev'ry thought,
And all the powers Thy blood has bought—
Oh, take our love, and let it rise
To Thee, a sacred sacrifice!
Our thanks, our praise, our love we bring,
In loyal, grateful offering;
Accept them, Lord (we've nothing more!)
Teach us to serve Thee, and adore—
Our self, our all we give to Thee,
For all Thy benefits, so free.

Love in the Winds

When I am standing on a mountain crest
Or hold the tiller in the dashing spray,
My love of you leaps foaming in my Breast,
Shouts with the winds and sweeps to their foray;
My heart bounds with the horses of the sea,
And plunges with the wild ride of the night,
Flaunts in the teeth of tempest the large kiss
That rides out Fate and welcomes gusts to fight;
Ho, love, I laugh aloud for love of you
Glad that our love is fellow to rough weather—
No fretful orchid hothoused from the new,
But hale and hardy as the highland heather,
Rejoicing in the wind that stings and thrills,
Comrade of ocean, playmate of the hills

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

The Barefoot Boy.

Blessings on thee, little man,
Barefoot boy, with cheek of tan!
With thy turned-up pantaloons,
And thy merry whistled tunes;
With thy red lip, redder still,
Kissed by strawberries on the hill;
With the sunshine on thy face,
Through thy torn brim's jaunty grace;
From my heart I give thee joy—
I was once a barefoot boy!
Prince thou art—the grown-up man
Only is republican.
Let the million-dollared ride!
Barefoot, trudging at his side,
Thou hast more than he can buy
In the reach of ear and eye—
Outward sunshine, inward joy;
Blessings on thee, barefoot boy!

O, for boyhood's painless play,
Sleep that wakes in laughing day,
Health that mocks the doctor's rules,
Knowledge never learned of schools,
Of the wild bee's morning chase,
Of the wild flower's time and place,
Flight of fowl and habitude
Of the tenants of the wood;
How the tortoise bears his shell,
How the woodchuck digs his cell,
And the ground mole sinks his well;
How the robin feeds her young,
How the oriole's nest is hung;
Where the whitest lilies blow,
Where the freshest berries grow,
Where the ground-nut trails its vine,
Where the wood-grape's clusters shine;
Of the wasp's cunning way,
Mason of his walls of clay,
And the architectural plans
Of gray hornet artisans!
For, eschewing books and tasks,
Nature answers all he asks;
Hand in hand with her he walks,
Face to face to her he talks,
Part and parcel of her joy—
Blessings on the barefoot boy!

O, for boyhood's time in June,
Crowding years in one brief moon,
When all things I heard or saw,
Me, their master, waited for.
I was rich in flowers and trees,
Humming birds and honey-bees;
For my sport the squirrel played,
Plied the snouted mole his spade;
For my taste the blackberry cone
Purpled over hedge and stone;
Laughed the brook for my delight
Through the day and through the night
Whispering at the garden wall,
Talked with me from Fall to Fall;
Mine the sand-rimmed pickerel pond,
Mine the walnut slopes beyond,
Mine, on bending orchard trees,
Apples of Hesperides!
Still as my horizon grew,
Larger grew my riches, too;
All the world I saw or knew
Seemed a complex Chinese toy,
Fashioned for a barefoot boy!

O, for festal dainties spread,
Like my bowl of milk and bread;
Pewter spoon and bowl of wood,
On the doorstone gray and rude!
O'er me, like a regal tent,
Cloudy-ribbed, the sunset bent,
Purple-curtained, fringed with gold,
Looped in many a wind-swung fold;
While for music came the play
Of the pied frogs' orchestra;
And to light the noisy choir,
Lit the fly his lamp of fire.
I was monarch: pomp and joy
Waited on the barefoot boy!

Cheerily, then, my little man,
Live and laugh as boyhood can!
Though the flinty slopes be hard,
Stubble-speared the new-mown sward,
Every morn shall lead thee through
Fresh baptisms of the dew;
Every evening from thy feet
Shall the cool wind kiss the heat:
All too soon these feet must hide
In the prison cells of pride,
Lose the freedom of the sod,
Like the colts for work be shod,
Made to tread the mills of toil,
Up and down in ceaseless moil;
Happy if their track be found
Never on forbidden ground;
Happy if they sink not in
Quick and treacherous sands of sin.
Ah, that thou couldst know thy joy,
Ere it passes, barefoot boy!

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

During the past week or two Uncle Jed has received in his mail letters from a number of the members of the Wide-Awake Circle who have written unusually good stories on such topics as How Education Helps Us, Why I Like School, The Value of an Education, etc. Uncle Jed selected several of these letters as prize book winners for three reasons. First, the subject matter of the letters was interesting, instructive and showed originality on the part of the young writers. Second, the neatness and good penmanship showed that the boy and girl writers took pains in writing their letters. And the third reason for the selection of these letters as prize winners was that the boys and girls wrote on but one side of the paper and made sure that their names, ages and addresses were plainly written.

It is a pleasure to read most of the letters written by members of the Wide-Awake Circle. As a rule they are well prepared and evidence an earnest desire on the part of the writers to make them interesting and worthy of prize books. But once in a while Uncle Jed receives a letter that is almost unreadable. In fact, one or two received during the past month were so poorly written that Uncle Jed couldn't read them at all, and of course there was only one thing to do and that was to deposit them in the waste basket.

In selecting prize winning letters neatness and originality go a long way. It is not very difficult to tell whether a boy or girl has copied some other person's work, and of course a letter or story that is copied word for word is not "original." The word "original" means: "Immediately produced by one's own mind and thought; not copied or imitated."

It is not hard work to write an interesting letter. It takes but a little thought and a little care. And there are a great many subjects for letters. Little incidents that happen at school, at home or at play, letters about the many things you see on journeys and visits, funny things your pets do, etc., make interesting stories for the Wide-Awake page.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

How Education Helps Us.

Dear Uncle Jed: My topic really asks why I like school? Then I must answer that I do like school, because it offers to me free education that will help me in my future life.

In America today we cannot live without education. In those countries where there is considerable suffering they haven't any education at all.

I like school because it gives me the proper information for my future welfare and keeps me in touch with the outside world. It helps me to have a round mind in a sound body. It teaches fair play, honesty, obedience, truthfulness and original thinking which grows with my school years. Why should I not take advantage of all the efforts of our teacher and citizens who have and are striving to develop the weak children of today into strong people of tomorrow by giving them the best education that can be offered.

Again I enjoy school because it is so different from home life. I see so many other faces and have so many helpful playmates with whom I enjoy many happy fast-flying hours.

There are so many subjects in school that keep us busy without tiring us out in one lesson. This is due to the foresight and kindness of our teachers.

Why should I not like to go to school when so much time and money is spent to teach one to become a good, sure and thorough American citizen?

A Visit to My Aunt's House.

Dear Uncle Jed: One morning I heard the telephone ring and it was my aunt. She wanted me to visit her. I asked my mother if I could go and she said yes. While I was there some other children came to play with me. We played hide and seek and tag. We had a fine time. After supper we talked a while and at eight o'clock I went to bed.

The next morning I got up early and after breakfast I fed the rabbits and then got ready to come home.

An Exciting Dream.

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write and tell you about my dream. One day, about a year ago, I dreamed that I was walking through the forests of Washington and Oregon. I was alone on a hunting expedition. I slept in the branches of the great fir trees. I hunted for bears, mountain lions and wolves. I dreamed one day while hunting I was surrounded by fifty bears and wolves. They seemed to be coming closer and closer to me when all of a sudden they jumped on me. I grew so frightened that I gave a jump and much to my astonishment I found myself lying on the floor beside my bed.

My Trip to New Hampshire.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide-Awake Circle. I am going to tell you about my trip to New Hampshire.

I visited my grandmother. On the way I saw Boston harbor, where the boats come in and unload. I wanted to stay there but my uncle said that it was getting late. I had to be in New Hampshire by morning. I got there safe. My uncle and I walked in the house. My Aunt May said 'Come in Roseeller," She thought that it was Roseeller, but it was my uncle and I. My grandmother went to visit her neighbor. My grandfather was working in the other room. He was surprised to see me. I stayed a few months and then got home-sick. I wanted to see my mother and father so they took me back home. When I got home my mother said I was supposed to stay all winter and summer but I was too lonesome.

A Clever Dog.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a very clever dog. Major was a large dog and a smart one, too. Each day he went to the farmhouse across the street to get a pail of milk. He would never spill a drop, which is more than can be said of some boys. One day as he was coming home the gate was shut. He gave one sharp look and jumped the fence, milk and all.

One day Major's master and his wife went away and left Major to guard the house. When it came toward noon the kitten grew hungry and began to say "Meowt Meow." Major tried to share his bone with her, but when he saw the kitten could not eat the bone he took her to the place where he always got the milk. The farmer's wife gave it a big saucer of milk. When it was through Major took it home again.

When Major's master returned home the farmer told the master what Major had done. He was so proud of Major that he bought him a new collar the very next day.

A Visit to the Drawbridge.

Dear Uncle Jed: Every Monday morning I get The Bulletin and read over the nice stories. I thought I would write and tell you about my visit to the Drawbridge. One Sunday morning at 10 o'clock we started for the Drawbridge. When we got there we put on our bathing suits and went in bathing. There were a lot of children in bathing. After the children came out of the water the big people went in and the children sat down on the beach and watched them.

Afterwards the big people danced in the hall and the children picked strawberries. After that we had our lunch. There were tables and chairs under the trees. There was a little store where they sold ice cream, candy and served dinners. On our way home we saw many beautiful sights. We arrived home tired but happy.

Many Kinds of Trees.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide-Awakes about trees. Many kinds of trees are noted for their beauty. Elms are often found on the sides of sidewalks, so that it is shady on the sidewalks. There are many lovely trees found in parks. In summer, if it were not for them, many people would get sunstroke, but the trees protect them from it. Also if it were not for trees the forests would not be as beautiful as they are. The most noted trees are elm, oak and chestnut. We also get fruit from trees. I take a great interest in trees and I hope that all the Wide-Awakes take as much interest as I do in them. I think that it is an interesting topic to study about.

Queer Place For a Nest.

Dear Uncle Jed: One day a little bird was looking for a safe place to make a nest. It happened to fly in a barn where the corn was and a coat was hanging on the wall. "Ah!" said the little bird, "now I have found a safe place for my nest," and it made a nice little nest in the coat pocket.

After a while there were three little birds in the nest. One day the farmer came in the barn to get his coat and found the little birds. He laughed and laughed, and hung the coat back on the wall. He went in the kitchen and told his wife all about it.

When the farmer came back to get his coat the little birds were gone.

An Old-Fashioned House.

Dear Uncle Jed: While riding through the country my girl friend and I chanced to come upon a house. It seemed old-fashioned and very quaint in its surroundings, although very pretty. It was painted white, although some paint had been worn off. There was a lilac bush on one side, and on the other was a small garden with rhubarb and assorted kinds of flowers. In front and back of the house were roses and chrysanthemums. It was a one-story house and in each window hung plain curtains. The windows were small. We asked a little woman who was outside how old the house was. She was very pleasant and answered cheerfully, that it was about three hundred years old. So we drifted on into conversation. Finally we asked and she consented that we might see the interior of the house.

We had been in old houses before but none of the ceilings were so low as those in this house. The kitchen, dining room and parlor were large and spacious, and there were two small bedrooms. In the attic a small room had been partitioned off. Every room was furnished plainly but was very neat. The little lady seldom had anyone to come to see her so she had Helen and I stay to tea. Meanwhile, we told each other our names and had a happy afternoon. When tea was over it was so late that we had to turn back and go home, but many times we went there afterwards for she was very glad to have us come and we were very good friends.

Little Dot and Her Dog.

Dear Uncle Jed: Little Dot had no brother or sister and she lived in the country where she had no little friends to play with, but her little dog. He was woolly and kind. Dot would hug him, dress him and make him sit up and hold a stick. She would try to make him talk.

Have Ten Cows.

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write and tell you about our farm of ninety-five acres. We have ten cows, two heifers, one bull, a pair of horses and also a few chickens. When I come home from school in the winter I help my father cut the corn for the cows.

I bring in wood and help to feed the chickens. Near our house there is a pond and in the winter I go skating and I have a very good time.

Gave Christmas Concert.

Dear Uncle Jed: My school consists of 37 scholars. We have eight grades and I am in the fourth grade and am 9 years old. My brother, who is 11 years old, is in the fifth grade.

On December 21 our school gave a Christmas concert which was held in a hall near our school.

We had some plays which were called the 3 o'Clock Train and a Negro show, besides singing and speaking. Santa Claus came in and gave out the presents. I received a book, pencil, candy, oranges and popcorn. My brother also received a book called Treasure Island, a violin, candy and popcorn.

We all had a merry Christmas.

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I'd write about my baby doll. Her name is Nina Florence and she was given to me for a Christmas present. A Kind Act.

Dear Uncle Jed: A poor old man stood one day, in front of a large store playing a violin. Those who passed by did not seem to mind the player or his music. Few, if any gave him a cent. Little children danced to his music for a time and then passed on. It was getting late in the evening and the poor man had not earned enough to pay for his supper.

A kind stranger, who had been watching the old man, came up to him and said: "Let me take your violin and you hold your hat." The gentleman began to play, and never did the violin speak in such tones as it did that evening. The passing crowd stopped to hear the heavenly music and money was poured into the poor man's hat. When the stranger gave back the violin to the old man the people began to ask: "Who is that wonderful player?" With tears in his eyes, the old man replied, "That is Luigi, the greatest violin player in the world."

A Picnic.

Dear Uncle Jed: The family have gone to the woods just beyond the hills for a picnic. Decoration day is a holiday and Mr. Sparks felt that a day out of door would be good for his family and himself.

Lemons were taken to be mixed with spring water which they knew where to find and were packed in a basket with sandwiches, cakes and fruit.

The children spent much of the time playing in the woods, and after lunch Mr. Sparks read to them, after which they gathered wild flowers, and departed for home.

Had Nice Time Christmas.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you how I spent my Christmas vacation. Saturday I put red bows on the wreaths and hung them on the windows. I helped to decorate the Christmas tree, which I enjoyed very much.

Christmas Eve I went to a girl's house with my sister. She stayed at my house that night. It was dark when we started for home. It was so dark that I didn't see where I was walking but just the same I enjoyed the walk.

When I went to bed that night my sister and friend wanted to sleep in my bed. I was telling them a story and they were telling stories too.

I heard a knock at the door downstairs so I said that it must be Santa and if he finds us awake he will not leave us any gifts.

Christmas I went for a visit.

The rest of the days that followed I enjoyed going coasting, ice skating and reading books.

On New Year's day we had company. Among them was the girl who stayed over at our house Christmas eve. We played games and danced. I enjoyed New Year's day very much.

This Girl Likes School.

Dear Uncle Jed: My topic really asks what I like most about school and why? There are eight different subjects studied in grammar schools. The best of all is English. I like English because it will help me in my future life. Why should I not take advantage of learning this subject? Why should I not like to go to school? Many hundreds of dollars are spent for my education.

English is a needful study in high schools, colleges and other important places. It helps me to write properly and speak correct language. It teaches me how to be polite. I like to go to school because I like our teacher and my playmates. I will try to do my best in all my subjects and please the teacher in every way.

Study Points to Success.

Dear Uncle Jed: My theme is What I Like Most About School and Why.

The studies we have aid us to go through life better in helping us to obtain a good position that we may live more comfortably. We can converse freely with one and another on any topic. We learn good manners, about our health, geography, etc.

NETTIE FULLER.

His Favorite Study.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is about the subject, What I Like Most About School and Why.

As there are a number of things and studies to choose from it may perhaps seem hard to know which one thing you would choose as the thing you liked best. Of course, as there are so many things and studies to choose from and so many children to choose that they would not all choose the same. But to some children, one thing might be his best and to another it would be the last thing he would put on his paper.

At last, however, I have chosen English as the study I like best. Although play may seem the best thing it does not amount to anything as does English. Another reason is because there are so many interesting things in English. When we read an exercise out of our English book we learn to read better and how to spell many of the hard words that we pass.

We not only have to know English in the grammar schools but we have to know it in the high schools and colleges if we attend them. Therefore it is wise for everyone in the grammar school to thoroughly understand their English book before leaving. For if they do attend a high school they will have to study harder just because they missed some of the most important points in English.

South Africa.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time I have written to you. I would like to tell the Wide-Awakes about South Africa.

At the present time South Africa is the most prosperous part of the continent. This is because its climate is healthful and also because it has many white settlers. The larger and better portions of South Africa are under the control of Great Britain, although many of the settlers are Dutch. Two colonies belong to Portugal. The most important divisions of South Africa, where most of the white settlers live, are Cape of Good Hope, Transvaal, Orange Free State, and Natal. These four British provinces form the union of South Africa, which has a government much like that of Canada. It controls Southwest Africa.

In the east, in the region of heavy rainfall, wheat and corn are raised. Where the rainfall is slight, grazing is the leading industry. Other industries in South Africa are raising ostriches for their feathers, and mining for gold and diamonds. The Transvaal is the greatest gold mining region in the world. The largest diamond mines ar eat Kimberly. The manufacturing industries include the making of flour and leather. The trade of South Africa is increasing more and more as railroads are built and the country is opened for settlement.

The Story I Like Best.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to you the story I like best. I know it by heart; it is about pussy.

I love little pussy, her coat is so warm,
And if I don't hurt her, she'll do me no harm.
So I'll not pull her tail, nor drive her away,
But pussy and I very gently will play.
She'll sit by my side; I'll give her some food,
And pussy will love me because I am good.

A Snowball Battle.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write about a game that shows rapid action. It is a snowball battle. Bang! A snowball hits the post. All laugh. Another missile hits Medel on the neck. He grabs some snow, makes a ball and throws it swiftly at Benny who dodges it and throws another. The air is full of missiles coming from every direction.

Clinton gets hit in the face, on the back and on the foot, but this does not stop him. He bends down quickly, makes a snowball and throws it at the enemy. It hits Carl on the shoulder. Carl then throws one at Harry, who dodges it and it hits Alfred who is behind him.

Next is the charge. Harry, Benny and Alfred are running with snowballs to hit the other side. They dodge and are not hit many times, but the enemy is beaten and soon gives up.

Our School Days.

Dear Uncle Jed: My topic is what I like most about school and why. There are many things to choose from. Most of all I like the teacher. He takes pleasure in teaching us children.

And another thing I like is the chances of making friends, so that I can have plenty of fun.

The education which we receive in our grammar school days prepares us for future life.

Dear Uncle Jed: The Gurleyville school gave a concert at the mill and we had plays and shows. There were three plays and there were ten of us in the negro show. I am in the third grade. The negro show was the best show.

We had another play; it was called Junior Red Cross. That was a big show.

My Pet Hen.

Dear Uncle Jed: My pet hen is two years old. Her name is Biddy. She lays one egg every other day. The eggs are speckled and when I come home from school I feed her oats and cracked corn. Winter and Summer.

Dear Uncle Jed: Last Tuesday afternoon the children of the sixth grade in our school were invited to Slater hall. Miss Butts was waiting there and told us stories of what happened hundreds of years ago in Greece. First she drew our attention to a statue called Demeter. Demeter was the Goddess of agriculture. One day her beautiful daughter Persephone was playing with the sea-nymphs. They gave her pretty shells to play with. She was so pleased she told them she would pick some pretty flowers for them. She saw one, more beautiful than the rest. When she stooped to pick it the ground opened suddenly. The underground god known as Pluto came up on a chariot and took Persephone down as he wanted to make her his wife.

A rule of Pluto's was anyone who ate anything while in the underground world could never go back to earth. He gave Persephone some seeds which she ate, not knowing his rules. When her mother came home after a few hours' absence, she couldn't find her child. In her search she met a wise man who told her Pluto had taken her daughter underground. Demeter then went to the king and told him. He sent one of his messengers to Pluto, and received the answer that Demeter could have her daughter half the year and he would keep her the other half. When Persephone was with her mother she was happy and made the flowers grow. When she was with Pluto there were no flowers. So we have winter and summer.

A Dog and a Bone.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you a story about a dog and his shadow.

Once a butcher gave a dog a bone. As he was trotting along on his way home he felt like a king. He thought what a fine feast he would have when he reached home. After awhile he came to a stream. The water was clear so he looked in, and saw his own shadow. He thought that the other dog had a larger bone than he had. So he grabbed it. When he opened his mouth his own bone fell into the water. He went home sadly, and had nothing for dinner but his thoughts.

Picking Berries.

Dear Uicle Jed: A great many of my vacations have been spent in the country. There I enjoyed many good healthy frolics with the children around. One great hoby we had was dressing up in overalls to go picking huckleberries. This day we all started out; my two cousins, a girl freend and myself. There weren't many berries in our lot so we climbed over the fence and went into the next one which belonged to a neighbor. We were all enjoying ourselves when all of a sudden I heard a noise as if something was rushing through the woods. I called my cousins attention to the fact but she said it was only the wind whistling among the branches of the trees. So the matter passed, until about five minutes later when I saw a large bull coming through the woods. We ran none too soon for the moment we jumped over the fence we were safe.

Built Snow Forts.

Dear Uncle Jed: I will try and tell you about my winter sports. On December twenty-fourth, we had a small snow storm. Christmas Day we went sliding on Hanks hill. Towards evening we went on the ice in front of our house. The next day we made snow men and built forts for war. After we got tired of that we played Fox and Geese. The next two days w went setting traps for squirrels in the woods back of our house.

An Exciting Adventure.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you how I spent my Christmas vacation.

Saturday noon I went with my father into the woods. When we came back, we saw a car going fast into the woods, which my father takes care of. We ran over to see who they were. When they saw us they ran away. We called but they ran faster.

Father was going into the wood, and told me, when I saw them I should call. My knees were shaking when I was walking. My eyes fell on some bushes, when a man stepped out. I jumped up, and my heart was in my mouth. I called for father, when another man poped up. I was too frightened to scream, but my father was at my side. My father went over to talk to them.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Jack Loses The Flower

As little Jack Rabbit carefully placed the Flower of Youth, which the old man had given him in the last story, in the crystal vase, the Bluebird began to sing:

"Take the flower, bunny boy,
'Tis far more precious than gold
Give it to dear Uncle Lucky,
Who then will never grow old."

Quickly mounting Dapple Gray, the little rabbit took leave of the old man.

"Be careful not to lose the Flower of Youth nor spill the Water of Truth from the crystal vase," cautioned the Bluebird, "If lost, they lose their magic."

"I'll take care," answered the bunny boy, and he rode away. By and by, when it grew dark, he hopped off Dapple Gray and sat down beside a big stone. Opening his knapsack, he ate his supper while the little pony nibbled the grass. Pretty soon the moon came out and the night wind sang such a sleepy lullaby, that the tired little rabbit fell fast asleep. I think the song the night breeze sang went something like this:

"By low and tinkle bell,
Fairy music in the dell,
O'er the rocking, murmuring sea
Comes a pretty dream for me."

"Look! A rabbit with boots!" cried a little elf, happening to pass by the bunny boy as he lay sound asleep beside the big stone. I guess Dapple Gray was also fast asleep, for he never moved his ear when a moth miller lighted on it.

"I've heard of this famous little rabbit," whispered another elf. "He is a great traveler. I have read a little book with his picture on the cover."

"Let us look at his shoes," said a tiny fairy, jumping off the moth miller steed she was riding and tiptoeing up to the bunny boy.

"All of a sudden, they spied the Flower of Youth!" and lifting the vase carefully, they sped away with it. Dear, Oh dear me! Little Jack Rabbit never woke up, neither did Dapple Gray. But in the morning when the bunny boy found his precious, precious flower gone, he was dreadfully unhappy.

"Oh, who has taken my flower?" he cried.

"Too wit, too woo!" hooted an old owl. "The fairies did. I saw them."

"Where did they take it?" asked the poor little rabbit, but the old owl was so sleepy from sitting up all night that he never answered but crept back into his hollow tree.

"Oh dear, Oh dear, what shall I do?" cried the unhappy bunny boy, and Dapple Gray felt so sorry for his little master that he couldn't eat his breakfast. But, cheer up, little reader—in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

MYSTIC

A new building at Mystic O'al school, which will be used for class rooms and girls' dormitories, is to be erected as soon as spring begins. The cost of this building is to be about $225,000. With the beginning of the fiscal year, July 1, 1923, the state assumed full ownership and supervision of this school. The present board was appointed immediately after the passage of the bill, making this a state institution. It has been a number of years since there has been an appropriation for new buildings here.

The location is naturally such an ideal one for children that money spent on this school is doubly beneficial to the deaf children of the state, it is pointed out. The enrollment of pupils has increased also the number of teachers and officers. A particularly homelike atmosphere in the school is noticeable. There are about ninety-five pupils, and the deaf children are given the best training that can be procured. The teaching is purely oral, subjects are taught through speech and speech reading and in a special class writing is used to a very great extent. The children are encouraged to talk and read the lips at all times and no anyhow of the school is allowed to sign to the children.

Repairs have been made to the buildings and the grounds have been improved. Metal ceilings have been put in several of the rooms, numerous inside closets were built and all the teachers' rooms were papered recently. A new water pump was installed of double the horsepower of the former one, a net hot water heater has been put in, and a larger furnace in the dormitory. Several changes have been made in radiation, and a new sewerage system installed.

This school farm has a herd of cows tuberculin-tested from Vermont, and nine Holstein cows furnish enough milk for the school to have all that is wanted three times a day, with ice cream twice a week.

In the summer of 1921, 4,500 quarts of fruit and vegetables were put up in glass jars, and a good number has been done every year since. These products were all raised on the farm. The orchard apples have been gathered for the children. The hogs have supplied the school with fresh pork and lard, and the 1,200-egg capacity incubator has hatched all the chickens for at least one or two chicken dinners to be served each week, besides eggs for breakfast, while eggs were put down in water glass to be used as needed. On the farm, ensilage was raised for the herd of cows.

Every thing is done for the good of the students to make life pleasant for them. Bookkeeping and typewriting have been added to the school studies this year, which makes the course practical and valuable.

The sheriffs of Washington county as well as the governor, attorney general, adjutant general and two Rhode Island state departments have not yet submitted to the general assembly itemized estimates of appropriation for financial needs for the fiscal year, which, according to chapter 46, revised laws of 1923 require. A provision of that act states that each department except the judiciary and legislature shall, before January 15th, submit a statement of the incoming expenditures for the three fiscal years next preceeding, in form suitable for comparison.

Charles W. Auel, 68, agent for the Fabyan Woolen Company, since it went to Medway, Mass., about 12 years ago, died at his residence in that town Friday. Gardner was arraigned on complaint of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, charged with passing a $12 check on the Westerly branch of the Industrial Trust Co., in which there were not sufficient funds to his credit. The check was made out payable to Amelio Fusaro, on March 24, 1923. Gardner pleaded guilty, but said he had made good on the check and had also issued others on which there had been no complaint.

Town Solicitor John Ferguson stated that Gardner had not made good the check in the seven day period allowed by law and that several demands had been made which the defendant continued to ignore for some time. Judge Turano said that Gardner's act should not be allowed to pass unpunished and fined him $10 with costs of $3.80 which he paid.

JEWETT CITY

The Jewett City railroad station was broken into sometime during Saturday night, or early Sunday morning. How the entry was made is a mystery, unless a skeleton key was used. None of the entrance doors were found unlocked, or any evidence that they had been opened. Both windows in the women's toilet room had been tampered with, but not with any success. The door into the ticket office had been forced open, but not a drawer or the ticket case had been opened. Nothing about the station. Miss Sharkey worked until 10.45 Saturday night, and had not seen any suspicious characters hanging around the station. The theory was advanced that someone might have hidden behind the lunch counter until the place was closed. But the next question was, How did he get out of the station? The matter was being investigated by officials Sunday.

Real, honest-to-goodness winter weather prevailed in town Saturday night and Sunday. Thermometers registered zero, at eight o'clock Sunday morning at a farm where two thermometers are kept. The Jewett City Trust Co., mercury read nine below, while Preston Bros., read three below. Take your choice!

Church attendance was small and it was noticeable that the congregations in some cases, were composed of people who lived the greatest distance from church. Five years old Allan Whalley walked to Sunday school from his home in Lisbon, a mile from the borough.

Miss Gertrude Soule of East Greenwich Academy was among those who attended the funeral of J. O. Gorman.

The Hose Company was called to Ashland Cotton Co's. freight house Sunday morning. The bell which is attached to the sprinkler system rang, caused by a pipe bursting probably and someone thought it was a fire. The firemen also responded to an other alarm for a chimney fire in the Gaska four-tenement house on Anthony street, in the morning Saturday and at night for a chimney fire in the Gobeil house on North Main street.

In Command Of Flight Around World

Major Frederick L. Martin, an officer with an outstanding record in army aviation, is one of the few men named to participate in the flight around the world which starts next spring. Major Martin will be in command and already he and his fellow fliers are receiving a thorough course of training for the event at Langley Field, Va. The Garveys are among the most highly respected families here and their departure is regretted by all.

Mrs. Nichols and children are moving from W. H. Barber's house near the P. O. to Sterling this week. The Nichols family has resided here several years.

SATURDAY'S MARKET

New York, Jan. 26—Stock prices moved up vigorously at the opening of today's market but the advance was interrupted at intervals by heavy profit taking and a renewal of bear selling in several sections of the list. At the close the average of 20 leading industrials was at the highest point below the peak of the preceding month.

High priced specialties were again the center of speculative interest. Corn Products, which has established a record high nearly every day this week, touched another new top at 187, closing 1-2 lower for a net gain of 3 1-2 points. United Fruit crossed 201 to the highest quotation since 1921 and then broke to 193 for a net loss of 3 points on the day. General Baking closed six points higher and American Tobacco 4 1-2.

United States Steel was heavily bought in anticipation of a good earnings statement and favorable dividend action next Tuesday, touching 104 7-8, the highest price since last spring, but forfeiting most of its gain in the late realising movement. Bethlehem Steel closed 1 3-4 higher, the other dependents showing little change on the day.

A bullish demonstration was conducted in some of the oil shares just before the close. Atlantic Refining, Pacific and Standard Oil of California each closing 2 1-2 points higher. Fresh selling broke out in the Pan-American issues on publication of Washington dispatches forecasting the cancellation of the company's leases on the naval oil reserves in California as a result of disclosures before the senate committee, the net decline in both stocks being about 2 points.

Speculators for the decline again attacked the motor and chemical shares, which proved vulnerable to selling pressure. Losses of 1 to 1 1-2 points were recorded by American Agricultural Chemical pfd., Virginia Chemical pfd., Willys Overland pfd., and Stewart-Warner, but Studebaker, Chandler and Davison Chemical yielded fractionally on the day.

TAFTVILLE

The Feast of the Exposition of the Holy Grail, a K. O. K. A. festival, was observed Friday evening at the Taftville Congregational church, many of the societies connected with the church, as well as others, attending. The service opened with a prelude played by James Heap, piano, and Ralph Hunt, violinist. This was followed by the procession, a color-bearer and honor patrol from Troop 3, Boy Scouts leading. They were followed by the Ocawasin Camp Fire Girls, in ceremonial gowns, who sang the processional hymn. The members of Castle Perilous were led by the Sentinel with his long spear, the Herald bearing the banner of the Castle, flanked by the Chamberlains who carried the processional lights, the pages in blue tunics, the esquires in red tunics, and the knights in white robes, the ranking officers of the Castle in bright colored vestments, and the pastor of the Church. After encircling the room three times the king ascended the throne and declared the conclave open. The Camp Fire Girls sang throughout the service, the legends of the Founding of the Round Table, and the Holy Grail were read, and during the ceremony of the exposition of the Grail, Miss Dorothy Wood, soprano, and Miss Mary Taggart, contralto, sang the Vesper Hymn.

Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis, pastor of the Church, addressed those assembled at the church, saying in part: "It isn't very difficult to see through this symbolism the great spirit that is behind it. It is a very easy and a very pleasant exercise to feel the teaching that comes to us from the source of this great revelation and this great truth. The story of the Holy Grail has always been very interesting, especially to lovers of art, and religion, and the truth taught by this revelation we may further know, has back of it a tremendous truth of that Last Supper and the Crucifixion with which the Church has always been connected. And so, poets and artists have tried in their ideal way, to teach us this great revelation. We are indebted to Tennyson, not only for his ideal English and splendid poetry, but for the spirit of his stories that center about the Holy Grail; and for his expression of that truth. We are indebted to the same great English poet for the great poem 'Sir Galahad.' Those words are more than the words of a poet. They are words that help us feel that goodness and the strength of life, that find themselves in accord with the ideas that teachers have been trying to show us have been lived among men. This is the story of Galahad, a man whose life, heart and service was right behind this story and revelation of the kind of life one must live if they would catch the vision of the Grail, it is worth rememberng. To you boys, this conclave tonight and the other meetings you have had in this castle of yours will have a meaning which touches life, we find the ideal that comes to everyone who has felt the inspiration of the Chalice, and the truth which touches us tonight from that evening meal of Our Lord, which teaches the meaning of the story of that Holy Grail."

The Conclave closed with the salute to the banners and the brotherhood covenant. The Camp Fire Girls took part in the recessional, singing the hymn, "The Martyrd Spirit."

MOTOR VEHICLE LAW VIOLATORS PAID $143,914.58 IN FINES IN 1923

Fines reported to the Connecticut motor vehicle department for violations of the motor vehicle law during the calendar year 1923 aggregated $143,914.58, according to a compilation completed at the department. The total represents an increase of $47,760.63 over the fines reported for the previous year.

The number of fines reported for 1923 was 5,783, an increase of 1,450 over the 1922 total, but the department received $700 in fines on bad checks and $746.40 in trial fees in 1922, whereas receipts on account of those items were included under the general heading of fines for the past year.

Recapitulation of department statistics for the year shows receipts of $4,329,432.10 for 1923, as against $3,567,744.84 in 1922, an increase of $761,687.32. The 21.3 per cent gain was principally due to the registration of 28,197 more motor vehicles in 1923 than in 1922, the total registrations reaching 186,595 last year. Under the state law, all these receipts are turned over to the state highway department for expenditure in the improvement of the state highway system. Not even the expenses of the department are deducted from the receipts, direct appropriation being made by the General Assembly for this purpose.

Nearly one million dollars of the 1923 receipts were from sources other than registrations. Operators, of whom 213,395 were licensed, paid $647,388 in license fees during the year, whereas 171,475 operators paid license fees of $519,692 in 1922. There were 41,920 more authorized drivers in 1923 than in 1922. Examination fees aggregating $98,038 were paid during the past year. Such fees totalled $71,180 in 1922, paid by 85,590 persons. There was a decrease of 352 gasoline licenses issued and a corresponding decline from $5,858 to $5,154 in the receipts from this source.

Fourteen airships were registered in 1923 at a cost of $82 to the owners. One was registered in the previous year for $5. In contrast to the situation with regard to motor vehicles where there are a great many more operators than machines, only half as many airplane operators' licenses as there were airplanes to operate were issued last year. The license fee for an aviator is $2. An increase of fifteen brought the total number of motorcycles registered in 1923 to 2329. Commercial car registrations went from 25,822 in 1922 to 29,140 in 1923. There was an increase of thirty-nine liteys throughout the state, making a total of 326, and a gain of 331 public service cars, such as taxicabs, bringing the whole number of these to 2,491. Registrations for private motor vehicles totalled 186,595, which was an increase of 61,987.

CONNECTICUT ROAD TESTS ATTRACT HIGHWAY BUILDERS

Highway builders of the country are looking upon Connecticut's development of automobile traffic census-taking as one of the most important recent advances in highway building and planning, according to the interest evidenced at the twenty-first annual convention and road show of the American Road Builder's Association, conducted in Chicago.

This keen interest and apreciation of the advantages of Connecticut's system was noted by officials of the Connecticut highway department who attended the convention, as well as by road contractors and engineers from this state who were present.

The Connecticut traffic census system, in fact, was the subject of one of the most important addresses of the convention given by George E. Hamlin, of Hartford, superintendent of repairs for the state highway commission. This paper by Mr. Hamlin describes the system and emphasized that the sponsors of the plan hope to gain important statistics which will help them in building roads of the future strongly enough to bear the increased traffic which those roads will have to carry.

"It is of the greatest importance," Mr. Hamlin said, 'for the road designer and builder to obtain accurate data from which can be estimated the weight, type and increase of traffic. Mistakes have been made because of lack of sufficient knowledge of present and future conditions largely because the cost of obtaining this data seems excessive for its value.

"When it is considered that the cost of operating a traffic survey party a year is only equivalent to the cost of construcion of approximately a quarter of a mile of modern concrete highway, and that data obtained from this expenditure may result in large savings in construction costs through the eliminaton of poor design, it follows that reasonable amounts expended in obtaining this data will be rewarded to the community in value far in excess of such cost."

From the date obtained by these surveys, Mr. Hamlin pointed out, it will be possible for road builders to estimate the traffic which will be carried over a certain road in the future, and thus build a highway which will meet the demands of this traffic.

"A traffic survey is of real value for the distribution of both construction and maintenance funds," Mr. Hamlin emphasized. 'Such disturbances, however, should consider, not alone the present demand, but the future need. It is as much a function of a highway department to develop the sparsely settled sections as to take care of present traffic requirements.

"If actual present traffic conditions only are considered, extension of a state highway system would be a future rather than a present problem."

The system which was started by Connecticut, by which parties of men from the state highway department are stationed at various points along the highway to note every vehicle passing the point, as well as to obtain data on each vehicle—its kind, the number of passengers carried, or if a truck, the weight of the cargo, and the starting point and destination of each vehicle—is now being adopted by other states throughout the country.

Recognition of the importance of the census plan was demonstrated by a large poster placed among the exhibits at the road show in the Chicago Coliseum by the United States Bureau of Public Roads showing Connecticut's highway system and the stretches of road on which the traffic census was conducted.

An interesting exhibit in connection with the booth of the Bureau was a model of an impact road-testing machine which subjected roads to the same strain as they will be given by motor vehicles. Awheel with a solid rubber tire like that of automobile trucks pound upon the surface of the road to give the same wear as would the wheel of a loaded truck. The model testing machine was seen pounding on a slab of concrete, giving an idea of how the real machine operates on roads.

HAD FOUR SATURDAY CALLS FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

Saturday the fire department responded to four telephone calls. The first call came in at 10.45 a. m. for a supposed fire in the house occupied by Leslie L. Brewer, No. 168 West Thames street. A fire had been built in the fire place and the roaring blaze gave the impression that the chimney was on fire.

The second call came in at 11.18 o'clock and was for a small fire at No. 23 Winchester street. Soot in a smoke pipe passing through a closet was on fire. Six gallons of chemical were used to extinguish the blaze.

At 12.44 o'clock there was a telephone call for a grass fire in a lot between Hickory street and Convent avenue. The first was extinguished with the use of brooms.

About 1.56 o'clock a call was received for a supposed fire on Fowler avenue in the house occupied by Paul Pelosquin. The automatic blower on the steam heater was not working properly and escaping steam gave the impression that the house was on fire.

Revocation of the state license of Dr. H. W. Nungasser of East Hartford, has been asked by the Connecticut Medical Society on recommendation of the grand jury investigating medical irregularities in this state.

FORMER NORWICH WOMAN CANDIDATE FOR TRUSTEE

The New York Wellesley club has announced the candidacy of Mrs. Howard W. Vernon, the vice-president, for the office of Alumna trustee in Wellesley College. The other candidates announced to date are Mrs. William Sherman Hay of Winnetka, Illinois, and Miss Charlotte H. Conant of Natick, Massachusetts, who is a candidate for reelection. Voting on these candidates is to take place during the next few months among all the members of the association, and the successful candidate will be announced in June.

Mrs. Vernon, who before marriage was Susan Huntington, is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James M. Huntington of this city, and a sister of attorney John P. Huntington.

She has had wide experience in educational affairs. She holds the master's degree from Columbia University in 1908; has taught in Spain and France; held the chair of Education and Dean of Women at the University of Porto Rico from 1901-10; was directora of International Institute for girls in Spain from 1918-19; served on state council of defense of Connecticut, woman's committee, as the chairman of education; was trustee of the International Institute for Girls in Spain; was a member of the board of directors of the Institute de les Espanas, New York City. In 1912 the Order of Astorga was conferred upon her by the Spanish government. At the recent convention of university women, she was elected national recording secretary. She is identified with a number of organizations, including: New York Wellesley club, Brooklyn Bureau of Charites, Foreign Missionary Society, Needlework Guild, Louvain Library Fund, Foreign Policy Association, Metropolitan Art Museum of New York City, Women's Federation Presbyterian church, International Federation of University Women, Brooklyn Urban League, Consumers' League, National Association of Women Painters and Sculptors, Boston College Club, Washington Club House, A. A. U. W., Wellesley Center of New York City, Lyceum Club of London, Paris Club House of University Women, Ateneo of Madrid, Spain, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

The office of Alumna Trustee is one of great importance in Wellesley affairs. There are three such trustees serving as representatives of the Alumnae Association upon the Governing Board of the college. They are elected for a term of six years, a new trustee being elected every second year. The policy of allowing the alumnae of the college to help in its government is of long standing at Wellesley. Almost as soon as there were alumnae of the college, there have been alumnae representatives among the trustees. The first alumna trustee was elected in 1894. Upon the present board, beside the three official representatives of the association, there are five other alumnae of the college.

RECEPTION AT FLANDERS TO REV. P. S. COLLINS

The church roll call and a reception to its pastor, Rev. P. S. Collins, was given by the Flanders Baptist church last week and was attended by several members of his congregation when he was pastor of the Leffingwell Baptist church.

After a supper the programme was conducted as follows:

Organ voluntary, Miss Edna Garlick, organist; opening prayer, the Rev. George H. Strouse of Waterford; hymn, by choir; welcome to the pastor with presentation of money, each dollar having a rhyme attached, was given by Deacon Benjamin F. Bump, followed by welcome to Mrs. Collins by Deaconness Rose H. Richmond, who presented her in behalf of the church and community a bouquet of pink roses, after which everyone present formed a circle and clasping hands sang, Blest Be the Tie That Binds. Rev. E. E. Gates of Hartford, pastor at large of the state convention and speaker of the evening, assisted Mr. and Mrs. Collins in receiving. A hymn was followed by the Rev. W. D. Hetherington of Preston City, who gave interesting sidelights upon Mr. Collins' work in the past. Greetings from sister churches were given by the Rev. G. H. Strouse of Waterford and Deacon Fred A. Beckwith of Niantic, who was a former member of the church and whose father, the late John T. Beckwith, served as trustee for many years. The roll call, under direction of Mrs. B. F. Bump, church clerk, who also acted as chairman of the evening, was read and many letters with money received, among them being a letter of greeting to the new pastor and wife from Rev. Walter N. Reynolds and Mrs. Reynolds of Parkerton, Wyoming, where they were a few years ago. Rev. E. E. Gates gave an interesting talk upon the spirit of the church and its influence upon the community, which was fittingly responded to by the new pastor. Among those present were the Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Hetherington of Preston, Mrs. Frank Harding of Norwich, George and Charles Rathbone of Bozrah, Frank, Rose and James Trumbull of Norwich Town, the Rev. E. E. Gates of Hartford, the Rev. George H. Strouse of Waterford, Capt. James Clark and F. A. Beckwith of Niantic and Mrs. Jennie Briggs of Moosup, who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. William Reynolds.

CALLS UPON REPRESENTATIVES TO REDUCE TAXATION

The Connecticut Chamber of Commerce in a statement of principles on the Mellon tax plan and bonus measure, made public at Hartford, calls upon all Connecticut representatives in congress, "in the interest of good government, sound finance and national prosperity, to vote for a reduction in taxes and in opposition to a soldier bonus." Copies of the statement of principles, which was adopted at a recent meeting of the board of directors upon instructions from its membership which voted 583 in favor of tax reduction to two for a bonus, have already been forwarded to Connecticut representatives in congress, to Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon and to President Coolidge.

The state chamber emphasizes to Connecticut representatives that not only will the passage of a bonus dull the national sense of obligation to disabled, but it will also prevent a reduction in taxes. A reduction in taxes, they claim, will lower present living costs and offer increased opportunities which will be shared by all people.

An appeal to representatives from this state in congress to vote for all measures which will provide adequately for the disabled soldiers and their dependents is made.

The statement of principles is as follows:

The directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, pursuant to a practically unanimous vote of its membership favoring the Mellon tax relief measure in preference to the passage of a soldier bonus bill, here by express their belief:

1. That the citizens of the United States, who have so patiently borne an oppressive tax burden resulting from debt incurred by the World war, are entirely justified in demanding the acceptance by congress of the so-called Mellon tax relief measure which will insure them lower living costs and increased opportunities.

2. It is evident that the enactment of a soldier bonus bill which postpones indefinitely the proposed plan of a tax reduction and will seriously menace the nation's financial, industrial, and social welfare by preventing the return of normal, national prosperity in which all will share.

3. The passage of the Mellon plan will, in the opinion of this organization, result in the restoration to productive industry of a large proportion of the great wealth which has flowed into tax exempt securities and this is immediately necessary as the first constructive step toward stimulating business and the economic rehabilitation of our industrial and social resources.

4. We reiterate the principles contained in the resolution adopted by this organization at its annual meeting in 1922 . . . calling upon congress to provide adequately for the disabled soldiers and their dependents. We are opposed to any grant of public funds to ex-service men which is not graduated according to the needs and disabilities of its recipients; because we believe that it is subversive of a fundamental principle of citizenship that service to one's country in time of war is an inherent patriotic duty; and also because a bonus, if accepted by the able-bodied ex-service men, will be at the expense of the disabled service men and their dependents, for whose needs the nation should make complete and unstinted provision. The appropriation of so great a sum and its acceptance by the able-bodied will, inevitably, dull the national sense of obligation to the disabled.

DAIRYMEN OF COUNTY DISCARDING SCRUB BULLS

Nine meetings with a total attendance of over 200 dairymen, were held and 150 farms were visited during the week of January 14th in New London county, in an effort to replace the scrub bull with a pure bred. The campaign is statewide, under the direction of the agricultural college, with J. Simms of Storrs in charge, assisted by County Agent W. T. Clark, and with representatives of the Guernsey, Holstein and Ayrshire breeder, co-operating G. G. Grant of Taftville, an Ayrshire breeder, earned the sincere appreciation of those working on the campaign. Mr. Grant spent the entire week in behalf of the red and white breed.

Of the 150 farms visited, ninety had scrub bulls. The owners of 16 of these who have signified their intention of replacing their present bulls with pure-bred Ayrshires are listed as follows:

BARGE AND LAUNCH FOR CHESTER-HADLYME FERRY

A new ferry boat for use on the Connecticut river, connecting Chester and Hadlyme, has been built for the state highway department. It will be put into service about April 1, replacing the boat which has been in operation for about fifteen years and is expected to bring about a saving in operating expenses of the line.

The ferry will consist of a flat barge, joined to a four-cylinder fifty-horse power launch. The boats are being built for approximately $10,000. The cost is about one-third of the average bid received for a self-propelling ferry driven by steam, which is the kind now in use.

The new type of ferry is designed after those now in use on Lake Champlain, where weather conditions are much more strenuous than in Connecticut. An advantage of the new boat will be that it will be necessary only for the launch to make the trip when the only fares prove to be passengers. The barge will be held in reserve for automobiles and wagons. School children at present use the ferry regularly. Under the new arrangement they may ride either on the barge, which is protected by hand rails or in the launch which will have a cabin room.

The boat now in use is at present undergoing repairs and will be held in reserve for use in emergencies either at Chester or from Glastonbury to Rocky Hill.

A feature of the new scheme, it is pointed out, is that whereas at present it is necessary to keep the steam boilers constantly fired, on the new boat the gasoline motors will be in use only while the boat is in operation. The barge will accommodate five automobiles, and a large number of passengers. No name has been chosen yet for the boat.

Will of Mrs. John H. Keep.

Keep, $500; residue in equal shares to sons, H. H. Keep, New York; Clifford H. and John H. Schenectady; Wallace H., Traverse City, Mich.; William D. and Austin B. Keep, Manhattan, and a daughter, Annie B. Keep, 152 Prospect Park West, and three daughters-in-law share in the remainder of the estate.

Automobile On Fire.

Shortly before nine o'clock Sunday evening the fire department answered a telephone call for a blazing automobile, near 33 North Main street. Alcohol fumes from the radiator on a Chevrolet machine took fire. The fire was practically out when the firemen arrived. Very little damage was done to the machine.

SOME MEN CARRY DEAD SOULS IN LIVE BODIES, SAYS PRIEST

The Saviour in His power, mercy, goodness and love cured the leper, who, from the edge of the multitude appealed to Him, "Lord, if Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean." Rev. M. H. May told his large congregation at St. Patrick's church, at the 9 o'clock mass Sunday. But there are men more piteously afflicted than were even the lepers of old, since sin has brought upon them leprosy of the soul.

It was the third Sunday after Epiphany, the epistle read in all the masses being Romans 12, 16-21, beginning, "Brethren, be not wise in your own conceits." The gospel was Matthew 8, 1-13, narrating the miracle of the cleansing of the leper and the curing of the centurion's servant. Up to this time in the year the church has been considering the Redeemer as the Infant Babe and the Child disputing with the doctors in the temple, now, after twenty years of His hidden life at Nazareth, subject to two of His creatures, Mary and Joseph, Christ begins His public ministry, the multitude flocking to hear Him. He grants the petition of the leper, "I will; be thou made clean."

Many men who appear prosperous and happy before the world are, in reality, carrying dead souls, for the reason that sin has made their state more loathsome than was even the physical condition of the leper. That God is ready to hear and grant their petition for pardon, as He was to make clean the man stricken with leprosy, was the lesson which Father May convincingly deduced from Scriptural proof, both the testimony of the Old Testament and the New.

At this mass, which was read by Rev. Myles P. Galvin, the usual large number received Holy communion, from Father Galvin, or from Rev. Rocco J. Guerriero who assisted him.

Madame Florence De Guile, proprietor of a fashionable beauty parlor in Minneapolis, was sentenced to serve thirty days in the city workhouse for violating the state barber law by bobbing women's hair.

RESOLUTION IN SENATE CALLS FOR THE RESIGNATION OF SEC'Y OF NAVY DENBY; HOUSE VOTES $100,000 FOR OIL COUNSEL

Senator Robinson, Democratic Leader, Introduced Resolution in the Senate—Removal of Denby is Sought in Connection With the Lease of Naval Oil Reserves—Measure Includes Other "Officials and Officers" of the Navy—Resolution Went Over Under the Rules—House Voted 250 to 1 to Have President Coolidge Engage Special Counsel to Conduct Prosecutions in Connection With the Leasing of Naval Oil Reserves.

Washington, Jan. 28.—A whirlwind of developments today advanced measurably the government's plan to rid itself of the Fall oil leases.

A resolution urging the president to institute proceedings for annulment of both the Sinclair and Doheny contracts was debated all day in the senate with indications pointing to its adoption tomorrow.

Another resolution, requesting the president to call for the resignation of Secretary Denby because of his part in the leasing program, was introduced by Senator Robinson, Arkansas, the democratic leader, but its consideration was deferred.

President Coolidge, who already has announced his purpose to prosecute, communicated with several of those he has in mind as special counsel but tonight was unable to announce definitely who had been selected.

The house, however, passed a resolution appropriating $100,000 for prosecution of annulment proceedings. But a single vote was cast against it.

The whole situation was talked over at a White House conference during the evening, betwene the president, Chairman Lenroot of the senate oil committee, and Senators Lodge, of Massachusetts, and Curtis, of Kansas, the republican leaders.

From the sick bed of Former Interior Secretary Fall word went out that he not only would be unable to appear before the oil committee tomorrow as planned, but might not be able to testify for some days to come.

The resolution proposing the resignation of Secretary Denby was offered after demands that he quit the cabinet had been made by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, a dominating figure in the oil inquiry, and other democratic senators.

A somewhat similar attack on Attorney-General Daugherty was made in the house by Representative Garrett of Tennessee, the democratic leader.

The impression given both at the White House and the navy and justice departments was that neither Mr. Denby nor Mr. Daugherty was preparing to resign and that the president had no present intention of asking them to step out of the cabinet.

A demand that Mr. Denby go before the house naval committee and explain his part in connection with the leases was made by some democratic committeemen, but the majority decided to do nothing for the present.

In addition to calling for the resignation of Mr. Denby, the Robinson resolution asks the president to remove all other officials and officers in the navy department whose connection with the oil leases indicate misfeasance or malfeasance in office.

Denby Remains Silent.

When advised of the attack on him, the navy secretary declined to make any statement. At the White House a positive denial was made of reports that Mr. Denby had resigned, and there were indications that the president would stand behind the secretary, his assistant, Theodore Roosevelt, and the attorney general, unless there was brought to light evidence indicating wrongdoing on their part.

Senator Walsh's attack on Mr Denby came at the conclusion of an address of four hours in which he reviewed the history of the oil leases and the investigation of them made by the senate committee. He laid emphasis on that portion of the evidence relating to the financial transactions of Mr. Fall, who, it has been testified, received as yet unpaid loans of $100,000 from E. L. Doheny and $25,000 from Harry F. Sinclair.

The secrecy attending the Teapot Dome lease also was cited by the Montana senator, as were the conditions of the contracts under which he argued the navy would receive only about 31,500,000 barrels of storage oil as against the 47,000,000 barrels which naval officers have contended is the minimum necessary in a time of grave emergency. He also attacked Mr. Fall for his dismissal of proceedings under which the government was seeking to regain rich oil deposits in California now held by the Standard Oil company.

Senator Walsh's colleagues paid him the unusual compliment of following with closest attention his summarization of developments in connection with the oil reserves. Seldom in recent years has so large an attendance of senators been recorded throughout the day. Many members of the house also occupied places on the senate floor and the galleries were overflowing.

When Senator Walsh had concluded Chairman Lenroot suggested that the original Walsh resolution, which applied only to the Sinclair Teapot Dome lease, be broadened so as to take in the Doheny California contracts. Previously Mr. Lenroot had presented to the senate the offer from Mr. Doheny to cancel voluntarily the contracts held by his company. The senator explained that he was not satisfied with the offer because of the provision that the company would "agree to a settlement," which, he said, was too indefinite.

Lenroot Defends Coolidge.

Turning to the political aspects of the subject, Senator Lenroot declared that some democratic senators seemed to be much agitated, "indeed, angry," at President Coolidge for doing the very thing they were seeking to compel him to do through the adoption of a senate resolution. He asserted that this was too important a subject to be made a matter of partisan politics and that senators irrespective of party ought to commend the president for the action he had taken.

Adverting later to this statement by the committee chairman, Senator Robinson, declared that the president's statement, "on its face is designed for political purposes." He added that Mr. Coolidge "in a desperate but futile effort to shield his party from the political effects of the sickening disclosures in the Teapot Dome investigation," had asserted that no one was shielded for any party or political reason and that he understood many were involved who belonged to both political parties.

Senator Robinson asserted that "the simple truth" was that the blame for the transaction, which he declared had become a national scandal, rested wholly on the administrations of President Harding and President Coolidge. He argued that Mr. Harding had acted without authority of law in transferring control of the reserves from the navy to the interior department and demanded to know how it could be said that no one had been shielded for political reasons in view of the failure of the present administration "long ago to move in the public interest."

Before the senate reached an agreement to meet tomorrow an hour earlier than usual to continue its debate, Senator Walsh submitted a substitute resolution directing the president to move for the cancellation of all of the Doheny contracts as well as all of those held by the Sinclair interests. The substitute embodied amendments suggested both by Senator Lenroot and Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, who for a long time was a member of the investigating committee. It is expected that this resolution will be adopted tomorrow and that Senator Robinson will press his resolution asking for the resignation of Secretary Denby.

Action in the House.

In the house, action was taken on the $100,000 prosecution appropriation after republican leaders had been in communication with the White House by telephone. The resolution drawn up by Representative Longworth of Ohio, the republican floor leader, was approved at a ten-minute session of the appropriations committee, and was brought immediately to the house floor under an agreement for two hours of debate. On the final vote only Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, opposed it.

Most of the floor discussion centered about the political features of the oil disclosures. Democratic Leader Garrett declared that the president, by his own admission, has no confidence in his department of justice, and added that Mr. Coolidge's reference in his recent statement to political parties "is not a proper utterance for the president of the United States."

"That is the utterance of a politician," continued Mr. Garrett.

Representative Byrns of Tennessee, ranking democrat on the appropriations committee, told the house that congress already had appropriated $850,000 for the employment of special counsel in the department of justice to prosecute fraud cases during the current year but that not a cent had been spent to investigate the naval oil leases. Representative Longworth and Chairman Madden of the committee both said they deplored any effort to make the issue a partisan one.

While Mr. Fall will be unable to appear before the senate oil committee tomorrow,, Chairman Lenroot said the committee would meet at the appointed time to hear any statement that might be offered on behalf of the former secretary. Adjournment will then be taken in order that all members may be present when senate debate is resumed.

"Mr. Fall is a very sick man," Dr. John Wharton, his physician, said tonight.

Dr. Wharton explained that the former secretary was not in a critical condition, but that he was very weak and would be unable to stand the ordeal of an appearance before the senate inquisitors.

President Coolidge spent several hours during the day in his study in the White House proper, in telephone communication with various nationally known lawyers he had in mind as possible selections for special counsel in the case. Twice he conferred with Secretary Hughes, who was employed in a similar capacity in the aircraft case during the Wilson administration.

WOULD INVESTIGATE LEASE OF LAND IN OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City, Jan. 28.—A resolution seeking a United States senate investigation of a lease to Quapaw Indian lands in northeastern Oklahoma granted in 1922 by Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, to the Eagle Picher Mining company was adopted with one dissenting vote by the Oklahoma state senate today.

Charles Hambidge, president of the newspaper club, was invited to co-operate with the New York National convention committee, in working out a program of entertainment for the more than 1,000 newspaper writers expected in New York, to cover the democratic national convention in June.

W. P. G. Harding Admits Daughter Shot Herself

Boston, Jan. 28—W. G. P. Harding, goverpor of the federal reserve bank of Boston, in a statement tonight admitted that his daughter Margaret Elliott, who was found dead at their home late Saturday, committed suicide by shooting herself with his revolver. Earlier in the day the medical examiner had reported that Miss Harding committed suicide but the immediate cause of death was not made known.

Miss Harding, her father said, left notes addressed to him, to relatives and to friends. In the note to her father the young woman asked forgiveness "for what she had done and was about to do".

"I couldn't stand life any longer," was one phrase of the note, Mr. Harding said.

Mr. Harding said his daughter's act was due to "her love for social life, dancing every night and smoking cigarettes."

Mr. Harding said that Stanley Hawkes, head of the information bureau of the state department of Washington, arrived in Boston today, in response to a letter written by Miss Harding before her death. Mr. Hawkes' engagement to a young woman in Washington was announced recently.

"Today was the first time I ever heard my daughter's name linked with that of Hawkes," Mr. Harding said. "I told this fellow to go back to Washington, that there was nothing he could do here."

In his statement regarding his daughter's death Mr. Harding, who appeared broken and ill, said:

"She shot herself with my revolver which I left hidden in my own room and which she must have found. Several letters which she had written and which were found on my desk in her room confirmed the suicide. The revolver was lying nearby. Only one shot had been fired, the bullet entering her left breast.

"Margaret had spent most of her life in Washington and often visited her sister in New York. Since leaving school she had enjoyed the whirl of social gatherings, such as dances, theatre parties, late suppers, and she had even acquired the habit of cigarette smoking. This life began to tell on her constitution and 8 months ago I noticed a change in her health. She then appeared extremely nervous and I warned her against continuing her social habits.

"After being at home for a couple of months she returned to Washington two weeks ago. A few days later she sent me a letter telling me what a wonderful time she was having, and adding that her social engagements took up most of her time.

"Realizing that her health was becoming impaired I wired her last week to return home immediately, at the same time forwarding her a check She arrived in Boston Friday morning and I went to the station to meet her.

"Upon her arrival she said she was too ill to talk and believed she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. I told hr I had planned to go to Washington that night but would postpone the trip if her illness was serious. She begged me to go and keep my appointment by all means and then went to her own room saying: 'I'm tired. Leave me alone.'"

Mr. Harding said he went to Washington that night and on the way back stopped over in New York to visit his daughter, Mrs. Eugene V. R. Thayer, the latter informed him that she had received a telephone call from Margaret the evening before stating that she was on the verge of a nervous collapse. Saturday at noon Mrs. Thayer telephoned Margaret, Mr. Harding said, and the girl said she was feeling much better.

"While I was out shopping with the Thayers that afternoon, one of the maids tried to reach me by telephone," Mr. Harding said. "On learning this I called my home in Boston and the maid told me to come home at once. I asked her if anything serious had happened and she referred me to Dr. G. A. Waterman. Dr. Waterman told me Margaret was dead."

On arriving back home Mr. Harding said the maid told him that early Saturday afternoon Margaret had told her not to admit anyone.

"Tell them I am too sick to see anyone," she said, according to the maid.

Shortly after 2 o'clock the maid went to the room with a tray of food and rapped on the door but there was no response. Calling another maid she forced an entrance and found Miss Harding dying. The women summoned Dr. Waterman who notified the medical examiner.

AGED RETIRED CLERGYMAN FOUND FROZEN TO DEATH

Grenite, N. H., Jan. 28.—Rev. Lemuel A. Jones, an aged retired clergyman, was found frozen to death in front of the the stove in his lonely home here today. In a hallway nearby, his housekeeper, Mrs. Sarah Wentworth, 87 years old, was found unconscious and dying from cold. Physicians said tonight that she could not live. From an upper window fluttered a tiny bit of white cloth, a vain signal set for help by Mrs. Wentworth before she collapsed.

Mr. Jones, who retired from the Free Will Baptist ministry about 10 years ago, was 78 years old. He had held pastorates for many years in Effingham Falls and in Layton's Corners, near here.

The tragedy was discovered by Will Hamm, the nearest neighbor, who lived a quarter of a mile away, and who investigated when he saw no smoke coming from the chimney of the cottage. Mr. Jones had apparently collapsed when he attempted to kindle a fire in the stove. His housekeeper had covered him with a blanket and had then apparently gone to set the signal for help which neighbors had agreed to answer. Then she, too, had collapsed from the cold.

The little cloth which fluttered from the upper window, was too small to be seen from more than a short distance.

15 Bodies Found in The Ruins of House

Wrecked by Explosion of Gas at Cumberland Hill, R. I.—One Entire Family Killed.

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 28—An explosion which shook the country for twenty miles around wrecked a two family house at Cumberland Hill, Manville, today and in the ruins were found 15 bodies. Many of the victims in the opinion of the medical examiner were asphyxiated before the explosion which resulted from the ignition of escaping illuminating gas and was made more severe by the detonation of some dynamite stored in the cellar.

One entire family, the head of another family and a young woman boarder were killed. They were Adelard Hamel, his wife, and their six sons and five daughters ranging in age from 2 to 21 years, Michael Conway and Miss Apolline Dancour.

Conway was formerly a police officer in Cumberland. The Hamel family came recently from Hyde Park, Vt., and Hamel had been employed as a woodchopper.

The dynamite in the cellar was for his use about his work in the woods. Miss Dancour had come to the Hamel house as a boarder last night.

One of Conway's sons on awakening this morning detected a strong odor of gas. After arousing his mother he went downstairs with a brother to investigate. As they opened the cellar door there was a blinding explosion, a light in the hallway evidently having come in contact with the accumulation of gas.

Bruised and cut by broken glass and splintered woodwork, the boys hastened to the rescue of other members of the family. They found their father caught in a mass of debris and started to try to extricate him, but he ordered them to get their mother and sister out of the house first. They did so and on their return they found that their father had fallen into a mass of blazing ruins in the cellar. The mother and sister also sustained severe cuts and bruises.

Meanwhile neighbors had entered the other side of the house and found six members of the Hamel family lying dead, victims of asphyxiation. The other eight bodies were recovered later.

SUPREME COURT DECISION IN BRANCH BANK CASE

Washington, Jan. 28—In a decision of Washington Jan. 28—In a decision which is expected to have far-reaching effect on branch banking by national banks, the supreme court today, in a case brought by the First National bank in St. Louis, held that national banks under the federal banking act are prohibited from establishing branches unless they come within the exceptions pointed out by the court.

Specifically the court held that the opening of a branch by the St. Louis bank was in violation of the federal law, and furthermore, that a Missouri state law, which also forbade, it could be enforced in the state court. Whether the decision, which was delivered by Justice Sutherland, would apply also to existing branches of national banks established under federal laws passed in 1865 and 1918 will b edetermined by interpretation and study of the court's decision or by further cases which may come up for consideration.

The law of 1865 permitted state banks with branches to become national banks retaining their branches; the law of 1918 permitted other national banks to absorb the former. In that way hundreds of national bank branches have come into being.

It is understood that the comptroller of the currency was inclined to construe the decision as not affecting the recent rule that national banks might establish eller's windows for convenience of customers at outlying points, but lawyers who studied the decision were doubtful of the soundness of the comptroller's view.

LITTLETON, N. H., SUFFERS FIRE LOSS OF ABOUT $200,00

Littleton, N. H., Jan. 28—A six-hour battle by firemen in the bitter cold brought under control today the worst fire in the town's history, which swept along the east side of Main street, destroying four buildings and a lodgin house and driving twenty five families to the streets. The damage was estimated tonight at about $200,000.

Workmen thawing out a frozen water pipe in the basement of the Northern hotel are thought to have started the fire, which began about breakfast time and by noon threatened he entire eastern section of the town. The Premier theatre, abutting the hotel, quickly caught fire and was consumed. In spite of efforts by the firemen, aided by forces hurried from Bethlehem and Lisbon, the flames destroyed several garages in the rear of the hotel jumped cornerwise to the wooden Boylston and Snowden business blocks, which went quickly, and taking in their path the Cottage lodging house attacked and ruined the Roundevel block before they were controlled.

The Methodist church and the post office were blistered by the heat, and only quick dynamiting saved the latter from the flames. The Harrington and Cutter blocks were slightly damaged.

MEXICAN REBEL LEADER CAPTURED DURING BATTLE

Mexico City, Jan. 28—(By the A. First Action for Proposed Tax Relief

House Committee Votes For 25 Per Cent. Reduction on Incomes Up to $20,000.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Income tax payers got their first slice of the proposed tax relief today when the house ways and means committee adopted the recommendation of Secretary Mellon to allow a special 25 per cent reduction in the tax on incomes which are "earned."

All taxable incomes under $5 000 were defined as earned for purposes of this reduction, while $20,000 was set as the maximum amount of incomes on which reduction could be taken.

Treasury estimates show that about 13,000,000 taxpayers have incomes of less than $5,000 and automatically could deduct from their tax when computed twenty-five per cent of its total. Thus a married man with two children who now pays a tax of $28 on an income of $4,000 would pay only $21, this figure not taking into account any normal income tax reductions—a proposition still before the committee.

Disposition of this section of the bill cleared the way, with the exception of some odds and ends to be taken up tomorrow for consideration by the committee of the income rates themselves, including the surtaxes, the main point at issue in the tax revision program.

COURT DECISION THAT MARRIAGE BY PROXY IS LEGAL

Boston, Jan. 28.—A ruling said to be unique in the history of American and English courts was handed down today by Federal Judge Lowell, who held that a marriage by proxy legal in the country in which it is performed is also legal in every state in the Union where common law marriages are recognised.

Judge Lowell granted a writ of habeas corpus freeing from the custody of the immigration authorities Suzanna Sabina, a Portuguese girl, the wife by a proxy marriage of Manuel Gomes, of Philadelphia. The girl had been detained for deportation since her arrival at Providence, R. I., from Lisbon several months ago. The evidence showed that Gomes obtained from the Portuguese consul at Philadelphia a certificate in which he named a person to act as his proxy in Portugal in marrying the young woman. The ceremony was performed with the formalities prescribed by Portuguese law.

In his opinion Judge Lowell remarked that "royal marriages celebrated by proxy have long been considered legal," and added "if royalty can do this, why may not those of more common clay be allowed to follow their example?"

FEDERAL AGENTS MADE 25 RAIDS IN WORCESTER

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 28.—More than a score of federal agents recruited from all over the Atlantic seaboard swooped down on Worcester late today and at midnight had conducted more than 25 raids and arrested 16 persons charged with violation of the federal prohibition laws. The local police and federal agents in Massachusetts did not participate in the raids and did not know of them until the first persons arrested were taken to the police stations to be booked. The raids, it is said, were the result of activities of agents working for the Anti-Saloon League who secured evidence two weeks ago. Those arrested will be arraigned before a United States commissioner tomorrow.

Mrs. Silva told the police that her brother entertained a large party of friends at his home last night.

ANDERSON FORGERY CASE WILL REACH JURY TODAY

Miller J. Bloomer, Publisher and Political Press Agent, Testified That He Had Dealings With the Mysterious "Henry Mann"—He Had Seen Mann Thrice Weekly For Fourteen Months, But Didn't Know Where He Lived or Where His Office Was—Character Witnesses Firmly Believe in Anderson's Integrity and Honesty.

New York, Jan. 28.—William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, today completed his defense against the charge of third degree forgery and it is expected his fate will be in the keeping of the jury tomorrow afternoon.

Today's trial events produced an expert accounting of books, a publicity agent who professed to have been one of the men who worked with the mysterious "Henry Mann," the person said by Anderson to have directed the $24,700 publicity campaign for the Anti-Saloon league, and six character witnesses who said they firmly believed in the league head's integrity and honesty.

With the admittance of the last character testimony in Anderson's behalf both the prosecution and defense announced their cases had been completed. Supreme Court Justice Tompkins adjourned court to tomorrow morning, when attorneys for both sides will sum up and the court will instruct the jury.

The mysterious "Henry Mann," vanished publicity agent named by Anderson as the man who directed a publicity campaign for the league at a cost of $24,700 which the league head claims to have advanced from funds presented to him by the equally mysterious "John T. King" was brought into the cases today by Miller J. Bloomer, publisher and political press agent.

Bloomer, who said he was the publisher of "G. O. P." a paper issued in each presidential campaign year, testified that "Henry Mann" had called on him in his Harlem office in June, 1918, and asked him to direct a statewide publicity campaign for the Anti-Saloon league. He agreed, he said. For fourteen months, he testified, he prepared and disseminated news copy and "plate" matter for the papers of the state.

Under examination by former Governor Charles S. Whitman, chief defense counsel, Bloomer said he had been a member of President Wilson's Versailles peace party in 1918-1919; that he had been publicity representative of former Governor Lowden of Illinois when he sought 1920 presidential nomination, and that he had been press representative for the progressive party at the solicitation of the late George W. Perkins.

But Bloomer, under cross examination, admitted to little knowledge concerning "Mann." He had never heard of him before "Mann" called on him in June, 1918; he saw him thrice weekly during his fourteen months' employ, and always in his (Bloomer's) offices; he had not seen or heard of him since 1919; when he came across him in the Hotel Savoy, London. He had never discussed "Mann" with Anderson, he said, because "Mann" had requested him not to do so.

"Where did 'Mann' live when you worked for him?" asked Assistant District Attorney Pecora.

"He told me he lived in a down town hotel," Bloomer replied.

"And where was his office?"

"He wrote, in pencil, on a card, a telephone number of a Times Square building, where he said he had desk room."

But he had never called there, Bloomer said, as "Mann" always called on him for news copy in the league's campaign. The witness admitted to Mr. Pecora that he had no personal knowledge of Mann's" office or business address, and further admitted that he knew nothing of his present whereabouts. "Mann" made all payments in cash, he added, and no receipts or vouchers ever were passed between them.

"Mann," Bloomer added, was an utter stranger to him at the time he asked him to undertake the league's publicity work. Asked if "Mann" had ever spoken of "John T. King," Bloomer replied in the negative. Nor did he know anyone else, he added, who knew "Mann."

Bloomer said he had had some difficulty in convincing Anderson and Whitman that he should be a defense witness.

"I read in the newspapers of Mr. Anderson's testimony concerning 'Mann' " he said, "and I called on Mr. Whitman to inform him that I knew about this man. Mr. Whitman did not seem to think much of my story, and I took the matter up with Mr. Anderson. Mr. Anderson and Mr. Whitman talked it over and decided I should testify."

The day's first witness was Perley Morse, an expert accountant, whose testimony was intended to prove that there was no fraudulent intent in the transfer of an item of $4480 from salary to the expense account of C. Bertsall Phillips, former fund solicitor for the league. It was on Phillips' complaint that Anderson had compelled him to "split" collection commiesion with him that the forgery indictment against the league head was based.

Pecora, cross examining, brought out that Morse had been an expert witness before the congressional committee investigation of war time contracts of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation in 1921. The witness admitted he had testified that Charles M. Schwab was shown in the corporation's books to have received government compensation to which he was not entitled.

"Did not that committee completely exonerate Mr. Schwab after you had testified against him?" asked Pecora.

"It did not," replied the witness.

Whereupon Pecora read an extract from the Congressional Record containing a record of the proceedings, in which several of the investigating congressmen were quoted as assuring Mr. Schwab that they were convinced Morse's charges were untrue.

After several character witnesses had testified for Anderson, affirming their belief in his integrity and honesty, Pecora stipulated that he would agree that the testimony of all other such witnesses should be admitted without the formality of calling them to the stand.

Those who testified were Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York city; the Rev. O. Bartholow, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and the Rev. Charles R. Ross, pastor of the Central Methodist-Episcopal church of Yonkers, N. Y., of whose congregation Anderson is a member.

Under Pecora's stipulation, Justice Tompkins permitted the recording of similar testimony by the Rev. Charles F. Reisner, a Methodist-Episcopal minister; Watson S. Moore, of the New York Federation of Church and J. B. Forsythe, a New York banker.

WILLIMANTIC

George Rondeau, 20 and his brother Ira Mc, Omer Lavoie, age 20, were in the police court Monday morning charged with breaking and entering and theft from two local dry goods stores, the H. C. Murray Company store on January 12 and the Tubridy-Weldon Company establishment about 11 o'clock Sunday night. Lavoie is a minor and he was put to plea through his guardian at litem, Judge Otto E. Robinson. Both pleaded guilty to the charge. Deputy Judge Curtis Dean found probable cause and bound the men over to the next criminal term of the Windham county superior court, under bonds of $1,000 which they could not furnish. They were taken to the county jail at Brooklyn.

Although Rondeau is only 20 he is married and is said to be the father of seven children, the oldest of whom is 10. He was in the police court because time ago on a charge of non support instituted by his wife.

Vincent Dozohue, the employe of the Tubridy-Weldon Company who came into the store and detected the thieves and was assisted in the search by his companion J. Stanley Healy was rewarded by the concern Monday with a handsome sum of money. Mr. Healy was also given a check for his efforts. The young men took a chance of their lives and used good judgment in searching for the intruders and then while summoning Officer Lapiviere prevented them from making a get away.

The two culprits made a clean breast of their deed Sunday night and confessed to burglarizing the H. C. Murray Boston store on an earlier date. Lavoie lost his right arm about six years ago while stealing a ride on a freight train in the local railroad yards; notwithstanding this handicap. It was he who pried apart the iron bars protecting the rear window and after crawling in, went to a side door and let Rondeau in. In that break the men secured about $140 in cash from the cash registers and took several small pieces of jewelry and trinkets, some of which were found in their possession when they were searched Sunday night. Lavoie has done time in the reform school for a previous conviction in the police court, on a burglary charge. Rondeau was accused of being implicated in the hold-up and robbing of Joseph Nahass in the latter's store on Valley street over a year ago, but he flatly denied that he had anything to do with this affair. Rondeau said that he was a wool weaver and had been out of work for some time. While he was locked up in the cell room Sunday night he said that he owed a grocer in Moosup about $150 dollars and that when the grocery firm threatened to shut down on him he decided to come to Willimantic with Lavoie and pull a job. Rondeau said that a pipe cutting wrench which had been found in the Boston Store the morning after the break had been stolen from the Darling Manufacturing Company, in Moosup. The wrench was thought at the time to be the property of a local contracting firm. The men admitted that they had tried the side windows leading into the J. F. Care Clothing store, which is in the building next to the Weldon block, but they found all of these locked and they then turned their attention to the dry goods establishment.

The robbery January 12 at the Boston Store was the fourth within the past year. On three successive occasions the cash registers were cleaned out. The thief responsible for these breaks was arrested while attempting to break into the place for a fourth time. In all, the H. C. Murray Company lost about $700 in thefts.

Quarry street residents, in the neighborhood of the house owned on that thoroughfare by Ike Rosen were given quite a shock Sunday afternoon when they heard a loud explosion seeming from the Rosen home. Andrew Buckmar who is to occupy the adjoining tenement was doing some work in the house and he ran out to the Rosen tenement. He found the kitchen windows and one door of the kitchen broken by pieces of iron and the kitchen littered with burning embers and filled with smoke. It was determined that the kitchen stove had blown itself into bits. Mr. Rosen makes his home in his business block on Broad street during the winter. Sunday morning he went to his home on Quarry street and started a fire in the kitchen stove. He then left the house in company with his son Philip and went to call on a neighbor. Had they remained in the kitchen both men would have been in danger of sustaining serious or even fatal injuries. Water was secured and the flames were soon extinguished. The damage to the interior of the building amounted to considerable, being partly covered by insurance.

One-sixth of a grain of nicotine is a fatal dose. After an illness of only a few minutes, Mrs. Lillie M. Bousquet, died suddenly Sunday morning about ten o'clock at her home. Her husband, Alfred J. Bousquet and the physician were present when she died, her suffering being brief.

Mr. and Mrs. Bousquet have lived only a year in their home just across the street from the Episcopal rectory, coming to Plainfield from Providence in December, 1922. Mrs. Bousquet was born in Providence, the daughter of Jason S. Austin and Elizabeth W. Phillips. Her grandfather was a successful builder of mills, having constructed Aldrich Mills of Moosup and the Lorraine Mills at Oneyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Bousquet were working hard to build up a new industry in Plainfield and to complete their new home. The latter was quiet and unassuming keeping rather closely to her own home. When she once made friends she had the rare quality of keeping them. She was a member of the Baptist church. She was descended from the Roger Williams family and a member of the Roger Williams society.

Mrs. Bousquet is survived by her husband, Alfred J. Bousquet and three sisters living in Providence, Mrs. Annie E. Clement, Mrs. Maude P. Ayers and Mrs. Benedict P. Grant and by a brother, C. J. Austin, an attorney in Boston.

THIS BRIGHT BABY GIRL

Brought Joy to Home. Mrs. Price's Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scottdale, Pa.—"I never felt like working, and when I would try to do any work standing on my feet, I would just drag around all day long. At times I would have terrible pains and would be in bed three or four days. I was in this condition about a year when I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in papers. I had heard different women say it was good for women's troubles, and my aunt thought it would help me as it had helped her. So I took the Vegetable Compound and it brought things right, and I was in good shape before I became a mother again. I believe it helps at birth, too, as with both my other babies I suffered a great deal more than with this one. I thank you a thousand times for the good your medicine has done me."—Mrs. ROBERT PRICE, Scottdale, via Lockhaven, Pa.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, 98 out of every 100 report they were benefited by its use.

NEW LONDON PAYS FINAL HONORS TO FORMER GOVERNOR THOS. M. WALLER

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London Jan. 29—City, county and state paid honor today to former Governor Thomas M. Waller when his funeral was held and his burial took place in Cedar Grove cemetery this afternoon.

The funeral was one of the most impressive ever witnessed in New London. Not only people from all walks of life in this city but men prominent in political and business life of the state joined in paying honor to the memory of the former governor and mourned with the members of the family.

The funeral services were held at St. James Episcopal church at 3 o'clock following a private prayer service at the home of Judge Charles B. Waller, corner of Vauxhall and Channing streets.

St. James' church was filled during the public services. Rev. Philip M. Kerridge, rector read the funeral services.

The honorary bearers were Col. Norris G. Osborn of New Haven, Haven, member of Governor Waller's staff from 1893 to 1895; Attorney W. H. Shields of Norwich, president of the New London County Bar association; James P. Johnston, former mayor of New London; Christopher L. Avery of Groton, judge of the superior court and a former member of the law firm of Waller, Waller, Avery and Gallup; Attorney Abel P. Tanner, prominent member of the local bar association and Graham S. Hislop, president of the James Hislop Co., of this city.

The funeral services were attended by Mayor Malcolm M. Scott, heading members of the council and city officials; also by members of the New London county bar, who met at the county court house and attended in a body.

Flags on the city hall and other public buildings were at half mast throughout the day and the city hall and many places of business were closed between the hours of 2 and 3 during the funeral.

The national flag was flying at half mast over the east wing of the capitol in Hartford today in memory of the former governor.

Col. Norris G. Osborn, editor-in-chief of the New Haven Journal-Courier, a member of Governor Waller's staff in 1893-1895 was written in eulogy of his chief and friend:

No newspaper tribute can possibly do the life and career of Gov. Tom Waller justice. He was one of the most picturesque figures in the political history of the state. Connecticut has possessed many governors who were men of extraordinary character but none more specifically the favorite of the masses of the people than was Waller.

Brother Jonathan Trumbull and William A. Buckingham associated as they were with great crises in the history of the country, naturally head the list in point of significant service. Brother Jonathan was no more loyal to Washington than Buckingham was to Lincoln. Both typified the patriotic spirit of Connecticut. Tom Seymour is still an inviting figure to study in the history of the state. In a sense his popularity with the masses of the people was comparable with that of Waller's. His political enemies feared and hated him. Joe Hawley was a dashing military and political figure. James E. English was a business man of great personal dignity; Charles R. Ingersoll a lawyer of impressive ability and intellectual power. Richard D. Hubbard was literally the gentleman in politics, a lawyer of prominence and an orator of great charm; Henry B. Harrison was just such a man in temperament, a fine gentleman of the old school, austere in manners but sensitive in his feelings. Morgan G. Bulkeley was one of the strongest governors in his convictions and in the courage of them that Connecticut ever had.

It is among these men that Tom Waller is worthy to be associated in history. More temperamental than any of them, intensely histrionic in temperament, quick as a cat in his intellectual reactions, sensitive to a degree, witty, affable and courteous, he created a political school of his own to which the voters flocked for instruction in spite of the determined opposition of the elder statesmen of the democratic party. In politics he was the product of the enthusiasm of the younger men, who fretted under the leadership of the more conservative element. His earliest tilt was with Uncle Bill Eaton of Hartford in the state house on the green, when New Haven was one of the two capitals of the state. His eloquence carried the debate over the bridging of the Thames with the warning that "you cannot stop the progress of the nineteenth century."

From that moment he was a force to be reckoned with in state politics.

Mary Colangelo, the proprietress of a restaurant on Atlantic street, was fined $200 for keeping and selling liquor that is prohibited under the Volstead act from being sold except on prescription. The woman is believed to be the tool of vicer heads and the beverages she had were there because she was of the belief that she had the right to possess and sell them. Mrs. Colangelo paid the fine.

Rock Zekos, was charged with abusing his wife. He denied it as he always denies every complaint against him, and there have been a score of them in the past decade, and attributes all the blame to his wife. Mrs. Zekos is employed at a hotel here where she has been a steady worker and from her earnings takes care of four children. She says that the oldest is now reaching an age where the habits of the father are a menace to the child's future. She asked the court to see that Rock behaved himself or that he be sent to jail. Zekos convinced the court that he should be given another trial and judgment was suspended.

Kusida Serida was fined $10 for intoxication.

The New London police are seeking Henry Tulley, John McDonald and Anthony Moran, three members of the crew of the freight steamer Canadian Pioneer, that is at the state pier, where she arrived a few days ago with a cargo of freight. Tulley, McDonald and Moran are alleged to have deserted the craft upon its arrival in port and it is believed by the officials of the General Navigation company that the trio have landed in this country without passports and in violation of the immigration laws. If the deserters are apprehended they will be delivered to the local customs authorities.

Tulley is described as being 42, about five feet seven and one-half inches in height and weighs about 154 pounds. McDonald is about 38, is five feet five inches, while Moran is 34, five feet ten inches in height and weighs about 160 pounds. The men disappeared from the freighter a day or two ago. H. Forest of 2111 28th street, Galveston, Texas, is seeking the whereabouts of a former practicing attorney named Allen, who, it is said, maintained an office in New London many years ago. So far as could be learned, there has not been a practicing attorney named Allen in New London in 50 years or more.

An officer was sent to the Messer residence and the owner was instructed to keep the animal on its own premises or keep it chained. This the owner promised to do.

An automobile owned and operated by George N. Greenlow, of 15 Broad street, Groton, narrowly averted running down a child on North Bank street early this evening, when the child started to run to the opposite side of the street. Don't Balk When the Doctor Says Castor Oil

Ordinary castor oil contains certain impurities that make many people actually sick. But if all these impurities that give it its nauseating taste and odor are completely removed—as has now been done by a new, super-refining process in Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil—it is, as your doctor will tell you, the ideal purgative.

For it not only thoroughly cleanses the entire bowels as no other purgative does, but it also neutralizes the intestinal poisons that cause headaches, auto-toxication and that tired feeling—not to mention skin blemishes, sallow complexions, etc. Furthermore it does not irritate, as do other purgatives, but actually heals irritation, making it especially useful for infants and children in diarrhoea and colic. And in this new purified form it is as easy to swallow as water, so that the most unreasonable child takes it willingly.

You can get a sample bottle of Kellogg's free by writing to Walter Jaynes, 417 Canal St., New York City, and sending 10c to cover packing and postage. But you take no risk in getting a regular size bottle direct from the drug store. Your money instantly refunded if not pleased.

Kellogg's is sold and guaranteed by all good drug stores everywhere.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Progress is being made toward the end of making a reality the prospect of Danielson witnessing the expansion of the plant of the Paco Manufacturing company. Cashier Francis E. Storer of the Windham County National bank, who is lending his aid toward interesting people hereabouts in the proposal relative to enlarging the plant has met with encouraging success. This success is regarded as forecasting the possibility of the ultimate achievement of the end that is being sought. It is likely that Danielson men will have associated with them some residents of nearby towns in bring about the enlargement of the industry, now the largest in the United States engaged in the manufacture of window draperies. The plans in mind brought to realization would mean a payroll equivalent to that of the Danielson Cotton company mill, when that concern was operating on a full time schedule.

A canvass of numbers of residents of this territory indicates that the great majority of those who voted on the Bok Peace plan, as opportunity has been offered them by publishing companies printing coupons in issues or sending out special cards, have voted in favor of its acceptance. It also appears to be a fact, however, that the great majority of those who have been offered an opportunity to vote have not improved it. They have little interest in the matter excepting as a general proposition and have not concerned themselves with with it as individuals.

That it may set a good example to individuals when it takes up its sidewalk building campaign, something that more will be heard about in the coming spring or summer, it has been suggested that the borough build a sidewalk along the front of its central fire station in Academy street. This frontage during any wet or snowy season of the year is usually deep with mud or snow or slush. The street is an artery that is used by residents on various other streets in getting to and from business and all find negotiating the frontage of the fire station difficult and at times exasperating when the walking is not good. The expense that the borough would assume in building a sidewalk would be comparatively light and would be appreciated by all who happen to use Academy street and hundreds do every day in the year. It is a street that people use in getting to five different churches, as well as getting from the east side section of the borough into the business section.

There was released at the postoffice Monday a statement by William C. Deming, president of the civil service commission, that in its annual report to President Coolidge the commission recommends the classification under the civil service law of first, second and third class postmasters; that such classification would be in line with the policy of putting more business into the government and in accor dwith the most enlightened throught of the country.

Under the executive order the commission holds examinations for presidential postmasters. The commission certifies the three highest eligibles to the postmaster general. From that list of three the postmaster general may select any one for nomination by the president for the usual four-year term. The appointment is not completed until confirmed by the senate, as in the case of other presidential postmasters. The commission's duties end when it sends the names of eligibles to the postmaster general.

The most important factor in this question is that the removal of politics from an appointment of postmasters would promote efficiency of the postal service. Now the postmaster is liable to be removed just as he is becoming thoroughly familiar with his duties, and therefore, of real value. This is a palpable waste of time and money. Private business could not survive such a system—so says the civil service commission in discussing this subject of particular interest.

Today (Tuesday)—if anyone dares take the chance—and Thursday offer the only opportunities that will be presented this winter for fishing through the ice of Alexander's lake. Excepting in the coves, where the ice was reasonably heavy, this lake was open water a week ago today and the ice is not exceptionally heavy on parts of it right now. This has been the case all through the season and fishing in some of the favorite places on the body of water has been impossible. The lakes, under a special act, are closed to fishing on all days of the week excepting Tuesdays and Thursdays and Saturdays. As the closed season for fishing this lake begins next Friday morning and will extend to May 1, as on all other lakes and ponds in this state, such ice fishing as is done will have to be on today or Thursday. Fine strings of pickerel were taken from the lake last winter and it is not unlikely that the same can be done this winter, if the ice is heavy enough to make fishing something more than an extra hazardous undertaking. The betting Monday was that Thursday will find many tilts on the lake, if the weather continues cold.

Frank Gorman, who went to the Panama Canal zone a few weeks ago, to enter the service of the government, has returned here. The climate did not agree with Mr. Gorman and he finally decided to return. Mr. Gorman is an expert cable man and for years has been in the employ of the S. N. E. T. Company and the New England Telephone company.

Samuel Gingras, now engaged in business in Norwich, was a visitor in Danielson Monday.

The Windham High school basket-ball game scheduled to be played here Wednesday evening has been changed to tonight (Tuesday), Killingly High school furnishing the opposition.

Miss Anna Arrigan and Frederick Payne of Providence have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Arrigan.

Ice several inches thick covers the lake and the reservoir from which Danielson's supply of ice is taken each winter. Only a few days more of cold weather will be required to make the ice sufficiently heavy to cut.

Saturday will be observed at St. James' church as the Feast of the Purification, also known as Candlemas day. There will be blessing of candles at the morning services.

Henry A. Freidler of New York was a visitor with friends in Danielson Monday.

Members of the board of relief of the town of Killingly have their first meeting scheduled for this week.

Warmer weather Monday brought relief to many from the cold experienced the two preceding days, though the temperature did not get above the freezing point during the day.

Construction work is well advanced on the exterior of the dwelling being built on Main street between Winter and Hutchins streets, for D. Fred Kenworthy.

Numbers of farmers who put up ice for dairy and other purposes were engaged Monday throughout this territory in harvesting the year's supply.

Fox hunters report encountering numbers of game birds in going about the fields and woods, and the evidence is that they are wintering well because of the absence of snow.

Danielson chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star will be represented Wednesday and Thursday at the Grand Chapter meeting in Hartford. Among those who are to attend from Danielson are John Ashworth, worthy patron; Mrs. Mabel Jennings, worthy matron; Mrs. Emma Hutchins associate matron; Mrs. Arthur W. Logee, past matron, and Mrs. L. S. Ingalls, Esther. This delegation may be increased by the time the convention opens.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Van Woodworth were dinner guests of friends in Willimantic Sunday.

PUTNAM

There were four men in the police court Monday morning. In the absence of Judge M. H. Geissler, who is leisurely making his way southward to Tampa this week, Deputy Judge Archibald Macdonald presided. Three of the men were charged with having been intoxicated, the fourth with being a vagrant. The vagrant and two of those who had been intoxicated went to jail, and arrived just in time to assist at the annual winter ceremony of filling the jail ice houses, so that the inmates of the institution next summer may have something to cool their heated and feverish brows. Incidentally, ice is used for various other and sundry purposes at the county jail. But where it comes from is of no interest to those who may be incarcerated there in the heated season. That is the concern of the boys who go over about this time of year.

William H. Platt, who died Sunday at Willimantic leaves two sons who are residents of this city—Frederick, employed by the H. K. H. Silk company, and John, who is in the employ of J. B. Tatem.

Mr. Platt, it has been recalled, was one of the original members of the Babcock Silver Cornet band, an endowed musical organization that has made history in Eastford and Ashford. Mr. Platt was a cornetist.

Constantly recurring ascension to fame, or at least, promience, appeas to be the lot of men and women whose origin is in towns in this section of Windham county. The most recent instance of this is the selection of the plans of Bertram G. Goodhue, architect, for the $4 000,000 Stirling library at Yale university, New Haven. Mr. Goodhue spent his early days in Pomfret, where his parents were residents. He has attained to heights in his profession. His plans for the Stirling library have won very gene.ous praise.

So far this season the largest pickerel caught through the ice in this territory hereabouts was one taken by County Game Warden Charles M. Letters. This fish weighed 4½ pounds. There will be little chance to beat this record this season unless same is done before next Thursday night, for the closed season for fishing in lakes and ponds starts next Friday, February 1. This is a matter of regret wu many fishermen, for they have had little or no chance to fish through the ice this season by reason of the fact that there has been little ice safe to fish on, and it has been impossible to fish some of the larger bodies of water, like Alexander's lake, for instance. Such chances as remain will have to be crowded into today and the following two days.

There was some relief during Tuesday from the bitter cold wave that began to make itself felt during the early hours of Saturday morning. The limit of severity of the period was reached Sunday morning, when the mercury went down to from 10 to 12 degrees below zero in this city. At no time during Sunday dd the mercury rise higher than 10 degrees above zero, and it gradually receded during Sunday afternoon and Sunday night being close to zero again early Monday morning. The cold brought an assurance of ample ice for Putnam during the coming spring and summer season. It was said here Monday that given continued cold weather much of the ice that Putnam will need this year will be cut nad housed by next Saturday night.

Saturday next will be observed in Catholic church here and hereabouts as the Feast of the the Purification, also known in olden times as Candlemas day. There will be special services in observance of the event. Apart from its religious significance, the day also has attained to some distinction in the realm of myths as groundhog day. It has been said—and believed by many through many years—that if the groundhog appears and does not see his shadow, he will remain out, satisfied that the backbone of winter is broken. If he sees his shadow he will return to his quarters and there to remain for another six weeks until winter is definitely over. Each year the majority hope that Groundhog day will be cloudy—as possibly forecasting that the end of the winter is near at hand.

The coming of February will bring another session of the Windham county superior colurt—the annual one-day session that is set for Monday, February 4. This will be a short calendar session for the consideration of civil business. While the last term of the civil and the last term of the criminal court for the county have been indefinitely recessed and not adjourned, it is not likely that any great amount of busness will be transacted by the court excepting on Monday o next week.

Women in industry will be the subject of Miss Mary C. Wells, of Hartford, when she speaks before the members of the Parent-Teachers' association at the high school th (Tuesday) afternoon. Miss Wells the general secretary of the Consumers' league, and her address here th afternoon will be based on a background of experience that probably is unrivaled on her subject in this state.

George B. Chandler, a compensation commissioner and secretary of the state chamber of commerce, was the speaker Monday evening before members of the Putnam chamber of commerce. The gathering was at the Putnam inn and the speaking followed a dinner which was served in the man dining room at 8 o'clock.

East Woodstock is a community in this section that, like Putnam, has been having scarlet fever cases develop. As a general rule, the cases have been light, with an occasional severe one.

The annual concert and ball of Putnam fire department, to be given on a night in February, will be one of the important social events of the winter in this city.

Members of the Putnam Delphian chapter have been invited to attend the luncheon of the Connecticut Federation of Woman's clubs to be held in Willimantic Thursday of this week.

Out of Woodstock there came expression of fear Monday that the extreme cold would have the effect of lessening the peach crop of the coming summer. Woodstock has some fine peach orchards and in favorable years the revenue from them is important.

Fate was against poor old smooth Bill McCluggage, as his side lost again, in a polo game at Bennett's cove. This in spite of the stubborn battle he put up, and also two of the star players, Slippery Jack Davis and Sliding Ben Schlieffer. The latter played goal and pulled off some marvelous stunts, again and again saving his side from a severe defeat, notwithstanding that he never had on a pair of skates before. On one occasion he was knocked clear through the goal, but recovered quickly. To date, the contests have been in bowling, whist and polo. Friends are asking "What next—pingpong or mah jong?"

PRESTON CITY

After many efforts to have a pie social, it proved a success, as held at the Congregational church Friday night by the combining of the two social committees of both churches. The evening opened with a good old-time chatter, followed by a radio demonstration given by Mr. McGrory of Norwich, the audience hearing selections from Providence, East Pittsburgh, Pa., and Montreal, Canada.

Then followed the sale of pies, adding a great deal of interest to the evening. Clifford Main assisted in the sale. The one who bought a pie had the pleasure of eating pie with the one who made it. This was followed by a radio selection from Canada. There were about 75 present.

How We Spend Your Money
in building Studebaker cars
Why people buy 150,000 yearly

It is true that we spend lavishly on Studebaker cars. But it's all to your advantage.

It is by that spending that we give you the greatest value in the fine-car field. We offer prices no one matches on any comparable cars.

That lavish spending led people last year to pay $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars. And that volume brings our prices down to where they are.

$50,000,000 in plants

Studebaker assets are $90,000,000. In modern plants and equipment we have $50,000,000. Seventy per cent of that amount was spent in the past seven years. So it represents the last word in equipment.

$8,000,000 in drop forge plants, so every vital part is made to Studebaker standards.

$10,000,000 in body plants, so Studebaker ideals may be shown in every body.

All that is staked in a permanent way on satisfying fine-car buyers better than our rivals.

What extras cost

Lack of vibration is a famous Studebaker feature. We get that by machining crank shafts as they were in Liberty Airplane Motors. That extra cost is over $600,000 yearly.

Matchless endurance is another famous feature. One Studebaker Six, still in active use, has run 475,000 miles since 1918. We get that through costly steels. On some we pay 15% bonus to makers to get formulas exact.

Beauty of finish is another supremacy. But that finish requires many operations, including 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Our real leather cushions cost $25 per car over imitation leather.

Every Studebaker car is Timken-equipped. The Special-Six and the Big-Six have more Timken bearings than any car selling under $5,600 in America. The Light-Six more than any competitive car within $1,000 of its price.

In closed cars we offer wondrous luxury. The lining is Chase Mohair, made from the fine fleece of Angora goats. Velour would cost about one-third that, saving up to $100 a car.

Note those bumpers, that steel trunk, those extra disc wheels with cord tires on some models. Note that extra courtesy light. Think what they would cost if you bought them.

The cost of cars

The unvarying standards in Studebaker cars are fixed by a department of Methods and Standards. It is enormously expensive.

Our constant improvements are due to ceaseless research. 125 experts devote their time to the study of betterments. They make 500,000 tests per year.

That reliability is due to 12,000 inspections of the material and workmanship in each Studebaker car before it leaves the factory. This requires 1,000 inspectors.

Being generous with men

We pay maximum wages—at least as much as anyone else will pay. Then we pay extra for continuous service. Last year, 11,000 men in our factories got anniversary checks—total $1,300,000. After five years of service those checks amount to 10% of their wages.

We spend $2,000,000 yearly on our co-operative work for men.

Every year we give factory employes one week's vacation with pay. That cost us $225,000 last year.

We sell them stock on attractive terms. We retire old employes on pensions.

All this to keep men happy, to foster morale, and to keep men with us when they develop efficiency.

Not extravagance

Do such things seem extravagant? They are not. All those extra dollars save more dollars for our buyers.

They result in the cars you see, in the prices and values we offer. Nothing else in the field can compare.

Those values have resulted in a demand for 150,000 cars per year. That volume cuts our costs in two, as compared with limited production.

The cause of over-prices — under-values — is not lavish expenditure. It is Limited production,

Heavy overhead,
Out-of-date machinery,
Antiquated methods,
Non-economical plants,
Transient labor,
Discontented workers.

We've eliminated those things. We've done it at what seems to you a heavy cost per car. But each of those extra dollars saves $5, we believe. Note what values and what prices have resulted. Note the amazing demand—the overwhelming demand—it has brought for Studebaker cars.

Don't Buy Blindly

Studebaker is today the leader in the fine-car field.

It has made this concern the largest builder of quality cars in the world.

You can find nothing in cars at $1,000 or over to compare with Studebaker values.

Studebaker sales have almost trebled in the past three years. The growing demand is the sensation of Motordom.

For 72 years the name Studebaker has stood for quality and class. But never so much as today.

Then don't buy a car at $1,000 or over without learning what we offer.

COURT ACTION ON LEASES.

Decision of President Coolidge to name special counsel from both parties for the purpose of handling such legal action as becomes necessary in connection with the oil leases must be regarded as the right thing to do. It even has the endorsement of the attorney general, who is of course conscious of the wisdom of putting in charge of such matters those who have not been associated in any way with the former secretary of the interior, as he was when they were in the cabinet together. It doesn't appear, however, that it was solely upon the advice of the attorney general that the president acted. He was fully aware of the significance of the testimony that had been given before the senate committee and he was headed right when he declared "counsel will be instructed to prosecute these cases in the courts, so that if there is any guilt, it will be punished; if there is any civil liability, it will be enforced; if there is any fraud it will be revealed, and if there are any contracts which are illegal, they will be cancelled."

By selecting special counsel of unquestioned ability there will be eliminated any lack of confidence in the sincerity of the court action. It will not be subjected to the claim that it is being prosecuted by friends of those who are concerned. There can be no thought of such a thing. When it comes to trifling with the responsibilities conferred by high office there can be no thought of permitting it to be covered up. If there are those who have become involved in crooked deals, handed over valuable resources of the government for a song or profited through taking advantage of the positions they have held they must expect to shoulder the effects.

President Coolidge is a watchdog for the nation's welfare. He will leave no stone unturned to see that any wrongs are righted and proper punishment is meted out to those who are guilty, and he has been prompt to indicate the taking of immediate action following the disclosures.

PRISON MANAGEMENT.

From year to year new ideas are advanced in regard to penology. Marked changes have been made in penal institutions within the past half century and it is quite evident that they are not at an end. It is true that these changes have not always worked out as expected, but they haven't all been so discouraging as to be abandoned. There is a strong tendency for much better things for prisoners, better buildings, better sanitation, better cell blocks, better privileges, better opportunities for self improvement.

At the present time in the state of New York the governor has recommended to the legislature, as the result of a committee investigation, that there be a new departure concerning the pay of convicts. Under the plan there would be deducted 30 cents a day for maintenance, after which 70 per cent of the prisoner's pay would go to himself for the care of his dependents and 30 per cent to the state, and with these changes there would be paid what the committee terms "adequate wages" to the prison inmates.

Under such a method it is figured that protection to the public is what is aimed at in the maintenance of penitentiaries, and that the farther away they get from the idea of punishment the better it will be for all concerned. If everything should work out as proposed and the prisoners should enter heartily into the plan all would be fine. It would be ideal, for the prisoners would be encouraged to live lives of industry after their release. There are those upon whom the lesson of imprisonment makes a deep impression, and there are those who rebel at it. Those who go to prison could invariably get good wages outside if they so desired, and "adequate wages" within will not alone accomplish their reformation. Whether the good effects it might have upon some would be offset by the impressions which leniency too often creates upon others is something which New York will have a chance to demonstrate if it puts the recommendation into effect.

MINE DISASTERS.

Loss of 73 lives in a Pennsylvania mine following a mine disaster in Illinois directs attention to the hazards that surround certain industries, and particularly mining activities.

Investigations will be resorted to for the purpose of determining the cause of the explosion at Shanktown but it will probably be found that it was from the same cause that brought about many other similar disasters. The fact cannot be overlooked that there is a danger in connection with mining. Conditions under which the business is conducted make it clear, and when there is a violation of the precautions, or when safety measures experience a letup serious results invariably happen. There can be no more disposition to take chances in a coal mine with its dangerous gases than there can be on thin ice on a deep pond, or at a grade crossing. There are penalties as the result of lack of proper care which too often are needless. There may be criminal carelessness on the part of various agencies, including an utter failure to furnish the needed protection.

Studies have been carried on for years for the purpose of showing how the number of mine fatalities can and should be reduced. For the most part safety devices of various kinds are employed, rescue squads are trained and maintained in order to save life in case of the inevitable accidents, while existing hazards are much reduced by the mechanical equipment of mines. Notwithstanding such outlays for increased safety and the laws requiring safety measures, which have served to reduce the deaths in mines, there are still too many. The unfortunate part of it is that so few of them can be put in the classification of unavoidable. Invariably it is shown that failure to respect some simple requirement, some obvious precaution, has been the cause of sending many into eternity. Every new mine disaster adds new emphasis to the need of being quite as careful while at work underground as when on the surface, and in many instances quite a bit more so.

TRANSPORTATION DEMANDS.

Quite the same as the one-man cars have been the salvation of the trolley roads, the gasoline-operated trains have prevented the abandonment of railway service in a number of instances.

On branch lines the cost of running locomotives has become prohibitive in a number of instances. With only a few trips and a small patronage it was impossible to get enough revenue to meet the expenses. It was a case of abandoning the service or providing a substitute, and from such tryouts as have been made on short lines of that character good results have been obtained, if we can judge by the fact that the New Haven road has ordered ten more gasoline-driven coaches for such service. There is a service which such branch lines render that is not obtainable in other ways, and the present gasoline coach not only provides for the carrying of 70 passengers but a ton of baggage in addition. With the lowered cost of operation more trips are possible and the better the service the more satisfactory the revenue may be expected to be.

With the placing of an order for ten gasoline driven coaches it becomes evident that the New Haven road has gone through a period of successful experimentation with these substitute trains. They are providing the means of maintaining the feeders for the steam lines, or of furnishing service on short runs where frequent trips are desirable. It is further evidence of the changes that are necessary in meeting the transportation requirements of the present day.

LOWERING THE TAXES.

Some progress is being made by the ways and means committee of the house concerning the tax reductions that have been recommended by Secretary Mellon. While endeavors have been made to reach a compromise relative to certain features, there was apparently little difficulty experienced in coming to an agreement in behalf of the elimination of the so called nuisance taxes. Enaction of such action; meaning a cutting of the federal taxes by more than $108,000,000, shows the committee is disposed to relieve this burden, but that amounts to only about a third of what the secretary of the treasury says can and should be lifted.

Under the nuisance taxes there are those which are paid for telephone and telegraph messages, taxes on beverages, taxes on candy, jewelry, games and certain sales as well as the admission taxes. Many of these taxes are now paid as if there was no tax. They are included in the total amount and invariably paid by the business houses to the government. Thus if these taxes are removed it is to be expected that there will be a cutting of prices in keeping with the tax cut.

But with the house committee favorably disposed to one-third of the recommended tax cut it is to be hoped that it will continue at its task with the idea in view of providing the full relief to which the taxpayers are entitled. It is not simply a part of the tax reduction that is wanted but the whole programme which has been mapped out. The benefit that the millions of taxpayers affected are entitled to should not be lightly considered.

Director Butler of the Philadelphia police insists that the police force must be constantly at work. Some members have the idea that a raid or so is about all they should be expected to do for a month or so.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 28—Congress seems to have but little time for legislation, the numerous investigations being conducted at the capitol leaving but a small margin of time and attention for law making.

One reads that the Bok investigation or the Teapot Dome investigation brought large crowds to the capitol etc., but that does not give a pen picture of the actual interest, or perhaps in many cases curiosity would be a better word, that draws crowds of women to the hearings. Long before the hour named, which is 10 a. m., the great marble corridors of the senate office building are filled with men and women trying to get into the committee room and secure a place of vantage. While the questioning of witnesses is going on the crowd continues to increase, although late comers know there is not the slightest chance of gaining even a foot hold in the committee room.

Women predominate at the hearing and in spite of the efforts of the chairmen to enforce the no applause rule, it is frequently broken if the witness scores a point and he, or she, has the sympathy of the audience. This was especially the case during the Bok hearings, as the audience was made up for the most part of persons affiliated with the varied so called peace organizations, who apparently viewed the senate committee with hostility.

For a Vermont farmer, born and raised in the green hills President Coolidge shows a remarkable fondness for trips down the Potomac on board the Mayflower. Perhaps its just the change of scene that attracts him, for even the white house may pall after a while. And not once since Mr. Coolidge took up the duties of the presidency last summer has he forsaken the white house or his desk for more than a few hours at a time. He has not been out of the city except as the Mayflower steams down the harbor as far as Quantico which is its usual turning point, 20 miles or so away. Anyhow, such is the attraction of that river trip, that neither rain nor snow nor fog, nor cold nor heavy nor'easters deter the president from going on board every Saturday afternoon at two, taking along with him a small party of personal friends, senators or congressmen, accompanied always by Mrs. Coolidge and a group of women. This week the mercury was high above the zero mark when the party got back along about 9 p. m. Dinner is served in the snug cabin, form and ceremony of the usual presidential entertaining is dispensed with as far as is possible and everybody has a good time even though the wind kicks a miniature surf as the Mayflower heads for home.

"That Yankee president of yours" is getting to be a real "old salt" remarked a southern member of congress who was on a recent trip as guest of the president, and who added he wished he could vote the democratic ticket and still keep Mrs. Coolidge in the white house. "She is one of the finest women I ever met," said the southerner. "She don't play the part, she is the part."

If you believe what you read and hear in the morning, you will be convinced that the Mellon bill will go through the house as it is written, or at least, that whatever fight is made over it will be done on the floor of the house and not in committee. Just as you get well settled down to that, you will see at night that the Mellon bill has met an obstacle and the committee fight is certain to develop. How far the republicans will go in a compromise to prevent complete defeat at the hands of the coalition of democrats and insurgents cannot be predicted. The Connecticut members of congress, on the republican side of the chamber, are a unit in favor of the acceptance of the bill in its original form, and Tilson of the third district, a member of the ways and means committee is doing his utmost to bring such a result about.

When the chiefs of the Cheyenne Indians called at the white house to see the president this week, it looked as if a wild west show had broke loose in the white house grounds.

There were four of them, Chief Left Hand, Chief Magpie, Chief Bear Man and Chief Mad Bull. Chief Left Hand wore a broad sombrero, trousers and a long cape of brilliant color with Indian sandals and the sombrero had a bright feather sticking out at the left side. That was the nearest to truly American costume in the whole lot. The other three men were decked out with gay baggy trousers, long capes, brilliant scarfs much tinsel and quaint Indian ornaments, beads, bead bags at their sides, and their heads were covered with semi-circles of brilliant feathers, rising high in the air. They too wore beautifully embroidered sandals. Their visit was one of courtesy only and they eloquently grunted their expressions of regard for President Coolidge.

Here is the latest "Coolidge story" that is going the rounds out here. It runs like this: When a notorious spellbinder and fellow member of the Massachusetts senate was speaking in favor of a certain measure then pending but which Mr. Coolidge opposed, the long winded gentleman summed up his contentions with a series of statements each of which began "Mr. President it is a fact that", etc. Finally the gentleman subsided and sank into his seat whereupon Mr. Coolidge rose and answered the long argument in four short but effective words. "Mr. President," said he, "it isn't so." Then he sat down behind that barrage of brevity and won out in the contest.

Visitors to the office of Secretary of War Weeks recently either make a quick retreat or sent in an S. O. S. call for gas masks. It seems the secretary was submitting to an experiment for a new cure for colds in which chlorine gas is used. The method has been tested out in the army with success, so it is said, and the secretary thought he would put in some personal experience along the line.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS

If for any reasonable cause, such as illness or absence, a taxpayer can not file his income tax return within the time prescribed by law, application may be made before the date the return is due to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer lives or has his principal place of business for an extension not to exceed 30 days. As a condition of granting the extension, the collector may require the submission of a tentative return and estimate of the tax and the payment of one-fourth of the estimated amount of the tax. A tentative return should be made on the usual return form, marked "tentative" at the top, and should contain a statement of the estimated amount of the estimated amount of the tax believed to be due, and be properly executed. No other data need be given. Tentative returns will not be accepted unless permission is obtained previous to filing. A copy of the authority to file the tentative return must be attached thereto.

If before the end of a 30-day extension granted by a collector an accurate return can not be made, appeal for a further extension must be made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no such extension shall be for more than six months. Additional extensions will not be granted by the commissioner with out a clear showing that a complete return can not be made by the end of the 30-day period.

JUST LIKE A FAMILY

"I'm just nearly dead!" declared the busy housewife in happily injured tones when the family had assembled at eventide. "I had the cleaning woman scrub off all the old wax on the living-room floor and then I spread new wax and polished it. The floor looks perfectly beautiful, just like a golden mirror."

"Goody!" said the small boy. "It'll be a dandy place to slide. Can I have the boys over?"

"You let me catch you so much as sliding one slide and see what happens to you!" declared the busy housewife, frowning very hard. "My goodness me! If you were a little older I'd insist on your doing the work I did on it, and then you'd see—why, you'd scratch it all up and take off the wax and everything! You boys just stay out of that room when you are tearing around!"

"I wish I could hav the crowd in and take up the rugs and dance," suggested the flapper daughter. "Cou'd I sprinkle some powdered wax on extra to make it more slippery?"

The busy housewife dropped her fork and sat back in her chair wearing a very pained, hopeless expression. "Whatever is the matter with you, Cora Bell?" she demanded with intense pathos in her voice. "Aren't you old enough to knew what you are talking about or are you just trying to be funny? Dancing on that floor would be worse than sliding on it. Don't you remember that the Hedgehouses had to spend all sorts of money doing their floors over after the dance Rosamond Hedgehouse gave while they were gone? Right after spring cleaning when things were just as spick and span as possible. They say when Mrs. Hedgehouse walked into the front door and took one look around she simply shrieked and nearly fainted.

"Her nice floors looked as though a geometry class had been doing problems all over them. My back aches."

"That's too bad," said the taciturn husband, leaping into the conversation suddenly. "But it isn't a circumstance to the way I'm going to ache all over when I take a tumble on that floor. I dashed in there when I came home to get a cigarette, not knowing of your activities. It was dark and I did not see the glitter of the floor, so I was greatly surprised when the first small rug I struck shot through space and took me with it. Grabbing to save myself from plunging headlong into the fireplace, I stepped on another rug with its mind set on the opposite direction, and back I sailed straight for the polychrome floor lamp. Tacking like a surf rider, I veered past the lamp and went headon into the couch. I think I broke three springs. My eyes being accustomed by this time to the dimness, I located the smoking stand and arising gingerly tried creeping up on it softly—but a slight turn on the ball of one foot and I was off. This time I zigzagged down the room, such were my frantic endeavors to regain my balance. Every time I made an angle I knocked something off or down."

"What's the good of having a slippery floor if you can't slide on it?" insisted the small boy. "Gee, Fatty White's mother doesn't care how much we slide on their old floors—"

"Old floors is right!" the busy housewife remaked indignantly.

"The Idea! I suppose you'd rather have a rattletrap old place like the Whites' instead of a home where you can bring your friends without being ashamed!"

"It would be just gorgeous if I could give a small dance!" the flapper daughter mourned pathetically.

"And we could slide and everything!" added the small boy.

"We'd better tack down those rugs," warned the taciturn husband shaking his head. "There'll be broken legs and necks and ears among our unsuspecting callers, if not the family, with things so terribly slippery! Why couldn't we have a nice, neat row of clogs with spikes in them lined up beside the living-room door? Then everybody'd feel safe!"

"Well, the next time I go to all the trouble of waxing a floor you'll know it!" sniffed the busy housewife flashing for her handkerchief. "I don't believe you like it at all!"

"Oh, we were just sort of mentioning a few things!" explained the contrite family!" "Why, it looks perfectly fine! Its just lovely with these few exceptions!"—Exchange

A Little Talk on Thrift

Water Power Resources.

It is a matter of interest and importance that great public attention is being given to the development of our latent water power resources. Scientists have calculated that the maximum of potential water power in the United States exceeds 54,000,000 horsepower, of which we have only utilized about 9,000,000 horsepower for commercial purposes.

A better idea of what these figures mean is gained when one understands that one hydraulic horse power is equal to about 8 tons of coal energy. Something like 40 per cent. of our total possible horse power is to be found in the states forming the Pacific coast division. Montana apparently leads all other states in water power possibilities, as 5 per cent. of the nation's supply is found within the borders of that commonwealth. New York state possesses about 3 per cent. of the nation's available amount.

Our lakes and streams possess a wealth of fabulous value and our neglect to more thoroughly take advantage of our water power possibilities probably constitutes one of our greatest sources of national waste.

This country leads the nations of the world in potential water power resources. In fact, about 30 per cent. of the world's supply may be found here. Canada ranks second, China third and Russia fourth.

As our nation grows in population, and the cost of mining and transporting coal becomes more difficult and expensive it will be necessary to draw more and more upon our natural power supply. It is within the range of possibilities that this great storehouse of wealth will as the years go by become more and more a contributing element to our national leadership in the important affairs of mankind. It is a matter of such far-reaching consequence that there should be no neglect of it through lack of information or understanding. —American Society for Thrift.

This new way to prettier teeth

A delightful test

This offers you a new way to clean teeth. A way which millions now employ. Leading dentists of some 50 nations are advising it today.

Wherever you look you see the results in whiter, cleaner teeth. Now learn what they mean to you.

Film ruins teeth

Teeth are clouded by a film—that viscous film you feel. Under old-way brushing, much of it clings and stays. It becomes discolored, forms dingy coats, and hides the beauty of the teeth.

Film also holds food substances which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Under old methods, these film-caused troubles became alarming in extent.

Modern science has found ways to combat them. One way disintegrates the film, one removes it without harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

To homes the world over that tooth [illegible] is bringing a new dental era.

New protections

Pepsodent also multiplies the tooth-protecting agents in saliva. One is the alkalinity, one the factor which digests starch deposits. These combined results will be a revelation to you. Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

Don't go longer without knowing what these things mean to you and yours. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

POETRY

A Sunday Hymn

Lord of all being, throned afar,
Thy glory flames from sun and star;
Center and soul of every sphere
Yet to each loving heart how near!

Sun of our life! thy quickening ray
Sheds on our path the glow of day;
Star of our hope! thy softened light
Cheers the long watches of the night.

Our midnight is thy smile withdrawn;
Our noontide is thy gracious dawn;
Our rainbow arch thy mercy's sign;
All save the clouds of sin are thine.

Lord of all light, below, above,
Whose light is truth, whose warmth is love,
Before thy ever-blazing throne
We ask no lustre of our own.

Grant us thy truth to make us free,
And kindling hearts that burn for Thee,
Till all thy living altars claim
One holy light, one heavenly flame.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes

Midnight

The dark earth reeks with three days' rain,
The phantom trees are dark and still,
Above the darkness and the hill
The tardy moon shines out again.
O heavy lethargy of pain!
O shadowes of forgotten ill!

My parrot lips, when I was young,
To prove and to disprove were bold.
The mighty world has tied my tongue,
And in dull custom growing old
I leave the burning truth untold
And the heart's anguish all unsung.

Youth dies in man's benumbed soul,
Maid bows to woman's broken life,
A thousand leagues of silence roll
Between the husband and the wife.
The spirit faints with inward strife
And lonely gaing at the pole.

But how shall reptiles pine for wings,
Or a parched desert know its dearth?
Immortal is the soul that sings
The sorrow of her mortal birth.
O cruel beauty of the earth!
O love's unutterable stings!

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking, according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. —(Adv.)

Eulogizes Rev. Dr. Kaufman

In referring to the recent death of Rev. M. S. Kaufman, Ph. D., a former Norwich pastor at Glendale, Cal., Zions Herald says:

This esteemed Methodist leader, whose career of more than three score years and ten has just come to a close combined a strangely mystical temperament with marked intellectual energy. He was reverent, friendly earnest, and highly capable, as is evidenced by the fact that at the time of his election to the Herald staff the editor described him as "one of our most successful pastor"

ASSESSORS MAKE TAXABLE LIST $21,478,832, GAIN OF $1,089,270

The Norwich taxable grand list shows $21,478,832 this year, a gain of $1,089,270 in a year according to the annual return made by the board of assessors who have been at work for a month in completing the list from the returns made by individuals, corporations, merchants and others having property to put into the list.

The three members of the board Arad R. Manning, president, John B Oat, secretary and Fred G. Protherb, completed the figures Monday and put their names on the abstract book to which they took oath before Judge Nelson J. Ayling of the probate court.

The grand list of the town, taxable and exempt property, is $28,102,461, which is a gain of $1,136,456 over the total list of $26,966,005 of a year ago as left by the board of relief. Exemptions of $6,623,629 this year leave the net taxable list as found by the board of assessors at $21,478,832, which exceeds the taxable list of last year by $1,089,270. Total gains in the list over last year were $1,136,321 and total losses $49,051, leaving the net gain of $1,089,270 in taxable lists.

The total exemptions of $6,623,629 are made up of $289,769 soldier exempt $6,100 blind exempt and $6,325,760 exempt property of other classes.

The total taxable property consists of $19,174,470 belonging to residents and $2,304,362 to non residents.

The total number of lists was 6,625, which was a gain of 543 over a year ago. The following is a comparison of the number of lists this year and last:

	1923	1924	Increase* or Decrease
Total lists	6,082	6,625	*543
Residents	5 495	5,939	*444
Non-residents	360	265	 5
Soldier exempt	321	417	 96
Blind exempt	6	6	** -
10 p. c. lists	1,186	1,201	* 15
Houses	4,831½	4,948	*116½
Barns, garages, etc.	672	820	*148
Bldgs. lots	4,882	5 038	*656
Stores	525	519	 6
Mills	73	75	* 2
Acres	12 970	12,896 1-3	73 2-3
Horses	519	518	 1
Cows	1,244	1,179	 65
Autos	2,432	3,073	*641

Four classifications account for the largest part of the increase in the taxable list of property, viz: Dwelling houses, stores, etc., mills and manufacturing, and motor vehicles.

In dwelling houses, where there was a gain of 120 in the taxable list the increase in value was $314,695, and the taxable value in stores, shops, etc., showed a gain of $165,981. Mills and manufacturing gained $323,116, largely through the building of a big addition to the American Woolen Co. mill at Thamesville and the valuation of new machinery that the company has put into its mills at Thamesville and Yantic.

Motor vehicles increased in the tax list from 2,432 to 3,073 with a valuation of $1,533,915, both taxable and exempt. There are 203 soldier-exempt machines valued at $84,738 and 30 machines owned by the city departments, which are exempt for a valuation of $25,625. The machines that are taxable number 2,850 at a valuation of $1,423,552, of which 2,812 valued at $1,387,292 are owned by residents and 38 valued at $36,260 are owned by non-residents.

Motor vehicles represent about one-third of the increase in the taxable list, and it is noted that year that the cars are of a higher average taxation valuation. A year ago the average at which they showed in the tax list was $481, but this year it is $499.

The amount covered in lists that had 10 per cent. additions made to them because of failure to turn in a list shows $27 548 more than last year, which is largely accounted for by the fact that a big Norwich mill forgot to turn in its list and suffered a 10 per cent. addition of about $20,000 and a large Main street property owner had a 10 per cent. addition of about $5,000 for failure to turn in his list.

The grand list on which to compute the state tax consists of the $21,478,832 in taxable property plus two pieces of exempt property, the Y. M. C. A. for $37,500 and St. Mary's T. A. & B. society for $13,500, making the amount on which state tax is computed $21,529,832.

The accompanying table shows a comparison of the taxable property list as just completed by the assessors with the taxable list as left by the board of relief a year ago:

	Tax List 1923		Assessors 1924		Gain or loss

At 6.30 dinner was served the family, covers being laid for twelve. The menu consisted of oysters, cold meat, salad, cakes of several kinds, fancy cookies, ice-cream, punch, fruit and confectionary.

Refreshments were served all who called and everyone received a piece of wedding cake.

FREEMAN WILL HELP TO SECURE GERMAN GUNS

Several interesting matters were discussed at the meeting of the directors of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, held Monday noon at the Wauregan hotel.

A communication was received from Congressman R. P. Freeman, stating that he would make every effort to secure one of the captured German guns as a war trophy for Norwich. The letter came in answer to one sent by the directors.

A report of progress was given concerning the conference between local officers and the New London Chamber of Commerce for cooperation in securing a state park for New London county.

J. J. Hickey of the interstate commerce commission notified the directors that the matter of establishing joint rates on coal from mines in West Virginia to points in New England is being considered by the commission.

The matter of better railroad facilities out of Norwich was taken up with the New Haven road officials in hopes that the spring schedule may be made up better to suit Norwich people who now cannot take the 11.03 express to New London because of the extremely close connection with the New York train at New London.

A request was made to the superintendent of the lighthouse service of the department of commerce that the dolphin lights that were recently swept away in the Thames river be replaced by more permanent dolphins of the riprap structure. The loss of these lights imperil the safe navigation of the Thames river for the Thames River line.

The problem of better house numbering in the city was also discussed and it is expected that all houses in the city will be numbered.

The plan for making permanent parking stations for busses leaving Norwich for surrounding towns was talked over. Three bus lines now give service, maintaining regular schedules and the need for reserving parking space is imperative. Norwich it is felt, should provide space, just as other cities in the state have done.

Victor Hugo's Historic Funeral.

The largest funeral ever held in France, and probably the largest in the history of the world, was that of Victor Hugo, great poet, author and dramatist, who died in May, 1885, and was buried in the Pantheon the first of the following June. At the head of the funeral procession were three enormous wagons filled with floral tributes, among them a huge diadem of Irish lilies with the inscription "To the World's Greatest Poet," sent by Lord Tennyson, poet-laureate of England. Telegrams were received from virtually all the prominent men alive, and the number of spectators was estimated at 1,000,000, of all classes and kinds, all striving to do homage to the memory of the dead writer.

Sight of Fishes.

To the fish the surface of the water, seen from below, presents a circular window surrounded by mirrors, according to Edward Ringwood Hering, author of "Secrets of the Salmon." It seems that a fish can see out into the air only through a limited aperture; everywhere else the surface reflects the contents of the stream, or (if it be a shallow one) the bottom. This is because the light rays passing from water to air are bent, and when the angle of the light ray from the fish's eye with the vertical becomes great enough, it is bent backward so that it does not enter the air at all, but is directed downward toward the bottom.

Alexander Ordered Army to Shave.

Apart from its ancient religious significance, shaving had its uses in military purposes. The beard formed a too convenient handle in the combats of olden days and Alexander the Great accordingly issued an army order to shave. It is curious to notice the reversions of fashion in the matter. The huge monuments of the Assyrian show the conquering armies full-bearded and only the slaves and captive shaven, but at a later period it was the Norman conquerors who were clean-shaven, and the bearded barbarians who were the conquered.

LANDIS AWARDS BALDWIN TO GIANTS AND SUSTAINS ORIGINAL CLUB OWNERS

New York, Jan. 22.—(By The A. P.) The sale of the contract of Howard Baldwin, star pitcher, to the New York Giants for $25,000 by the former owners of the Newark International was upheld today by Commissioner Landis over the protest of the newly organized syndicate now in control of the Newark club. The commissioner's ruling, announced after a formal hearing attended by representatives of the Giants as well as former and present Newark club interests, ended a controversy that has stirred baseball circles for the past week.

The decision in favor of Bernard Mean and William Ashton of Baltimore, former Newark owners, was based upon the existence of a stipulation in the franchise bill of sale, giving them the right to dispose of Baldwin and also upon the fact that the deal for the transfer of the club has not yet been completed, since no money has as yet changed hands.

Michael McTighe and Corbett McCarthy, Newark business man, representing the new interests, based their claim for Baldwin on the contention that the pitcher automatically became transferred with the franchise, regardless of any stipulation to the contrary. This view, however, was not sustained.

Financial details of the Newark transaction, revealed for the first time, brought out that the purchase price for the club is $65,000 according to the terms of the agreement between the Ashton-Mean and McTighe-McCarthy interests. This is to be paid by tomorrow in preferred stock of the new club, and reduced annually not less than $7,500 in cash.

At the same time, the new owners are obliged to deposit $50,000 as an evidence of good faith in the venture, this money to be retained by them, however, and used in obtaining a new playing grounds. The transfer of club control, however, it was pointed out, bears a date prior to December 31, while the incorporation of the new owners took place January 8.

The commissioner's official statement follows:

"The contract between the old and new Newark interests for the transfer of the Newark franchise, expressly excepted player Baldwin from the transfer. Independent of this transfer agreement there was a negotiation between the old and new Newark interests for the acquisition of the services of Player Baldwin by the new Newark interests. Pending this negotiation and before it resulted in an executed contract, Baldwin's services were transferred by the old Newark interests to the New York National league club as the old interests had a legal right to do under the contract.

"It is perfectly clear, however, that in spite of the legality of this transfer, the Newark interests very reasonably and in good faith had it in mind that their negotiations would result in their retaining the services of Player Baldwin with the Newark club."

Besides Messers McTighe and McCarthy, the new Newark interests were represented by Milton Crowley, club secretary, and John Trudi, both of Newark, as counsel. Manager John J. McGraw and Secretary J. Tierney, represented the Giants.

BARBER WILLING TO BOWL MONEN FOR BIG PURSE

Appearing in a recent issue of a Hartford paper is what is alleged to be a challenge from Mike Merin of Taftville to bowl anyone in the state for real honest-to-goodness big money in fact he is said to be willing to roll for a purse ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 on polished alleys. This sounds well in a Hartford paper but is something of a laughable nature to the people of Eastern Connecticut who are familiar with Taftville bowlers and the purses for which they are in the habit of bowling. As far as is known the largest purse ever put up in Taftville amounted to less than 25c berries and when they raise the ante to such high figures it makes one sit up and take another squint at the type to see if a typographical error has not been made.

However, if such be the case, and Taftville is willing to back their man as high as $5,000, why is it necessary to go to Hartford to get a match when right over in the town of Killingly resides one of the best, if not the best, bowler in the state. Every bowling enthusiast in Eastern Connecticut knows Frank Barber and knows he is no piker. Frank stated on Monday evening that he was willing to meet Merin on the polished maple at any time. He also said that he thought he would be able to raise enough of the coin realm to cover any sum that Taftville could produce without starting any drive for funds. "This big money talk doesn't scare anyone, we've heard these blaa-blaa boys before," said Frank in talking over the matter. "I want to bowl Merin and the higher the purse the better."

It looks as though the next move will have to be made by Merin if he wants to make good what was said of him in Hartford.

WILLS KNOWS NOTHING OF BOUT WITH FIRPO

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 22.—If Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, is matched to box Luis Angel Firpo, it is news to him. Wills said today he had never heard of Lewis Raymond, representative of a New York syndicate who is reported to have signed Firpo and Wills for a 15-round bout.

It will be out of the question for Wills to think of even lacing on a glove for the next two months, his physicians stated. Wills has a badly broken right hand, one of the large bones between the wrist and fingers being shattered. Wills broke his hand last week in New York while training for his bout with Bartley Madden, scheduled for February 5th. The bout was postponed until February 25, but the condition of Wills' hand is such, said his physician, that either another postponement or cancellation will be necessary.

"Before I left New York," Wills said, "my manager, Paddy Mullins, had a talk with Tex Rickard, concerning a bout between Firpo and me. No articles, however, were signed. That is all I know of a Firpo-Wills fight. If I am signed to meet Firpo my manager must have made the arrangements after I left New York."

Wills indicated, however, that he was leaving everything to Mullins as regarding future bouts.

AMERICAN HOCKEY TEAM BEATS BELGIANS, 19 TO 0

Chamonix, France, Jan. 22.—(By The A. P.)—The United States and Canada stood out as in a class by themselves in the Olympic hockey competition at the conclusion of the first day's matches, with the Canadians slight favorites as showing better teamwork and general all around ability. It is thought probable by the experts that the finals on Saturday will be fought out between these two teams.

The result of today's matches were: United States 19, Belgium 0.
Canada 30, Czechoslovakia 0.
Sweden 9, Switzerland 0.

The Swiss, Belgian and Czechoslovakian teams were hopelessly outclassed, while the Swedes, who had been considered as the most formidable of the teams gathered here, next to the United States and Canada, have lost prestige through their comparatively weak showing against the Swiss.

This was the first day of the hockey matches and the contests will continue until Sunday, when the finals will be fought out. The United States team is to meet France on Wednesday and England Thursday. The Canadians will meet Sweden and Switzerland. Austria has defaulted.

The figure skating competition began today, among the competitors being Miss Beatric Loughran of New York, and Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard of Boston. This contest was not concluded, today's competition being confined to set figures.

WISCONSIN CREW TO ROW ON HUDSON

New York, Jan. 22.—(By The A. P.)—University of Wisconsin has accepted tentatively an invitation to compete in the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson river at Poughkeepsie June 17, for the first time in a decade.

This announcement was made today by Maxwell Stevenson, chairman of the board of stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing association, after receipt of word from F. E. Jones, Wisconsin athletic director, that the Badgers, who competed in 17 regattas without interruption from 1869 to 1914, "are confident of being represented this year."

Princeton is doubtful about entering the regatta while the Naval Academy has definitely decided not to compete again. Mr. Stevenson said in revealing replies to two other invitations extended by the stewards.

The Tigers explained that their schedule, closing on May 31, has been completed and that it is unlikely entries will be sent to Poughkeepsie but added that the invitation will be laid before the rowing committee for final action. They will be pressed to send at least one crew, Mr. Stevenson said.

Princeton has never competed in the I. R. A. regatta. The Navy, whose intention to master its effort on the Olympic tryouts has been known for some time, has competed for the past three years, winning the varsity classic in 1921 and 1923 and finishing second to the University of Washington last year.

PADDOCK HAS APPLIED FOR A. A. U. REINSTATEMENT

Boston, Jan. 22.—The possibility that Charles Paddock, California sprinter, might go abroad with the American Olympic team next June was strengthened with the announcement here today that the noted runner had applied for reinstatement with the Amateur Athletic union. The letter was received by William C. Prout, president of the union, who said that he would lay it before a special committee in Chicago next week.

A long and heated controversy which grew far beyond its original limits and threatened for a time to disrupt the friendly relations of leading amateur amoolators of this country, followed Paddock's suspension last summer for what the A. A. U. officials charged was unauthorized participation in a meet at Paris, and for alleged irregularities in his 1920 expense account. Two weeks ago the South Pacific association of the A. A. U. demanded the sprinter's reinstatement, and both the National Collegiate Athletic association and the National Amateur Athletic federation were expected to come to Paddock's defense.

The special committee which will consider Paddock's petition is composed of William C. Prout, Robert S. Weaver of Los Angeles, Samuel Goodman of San Francisco, Verne Lacey of St. Louis, and F. W. Rubien of New York. In his letter to Prout, Paddock is said to have enclosed one from Mr. Weaver promising to read a statement by Paddock at the meeting.

FAST ALPINE FIVE OF BRIDGEPORT CLASHES WITH ARMY-NAVY TONIGHT

What is expected to be a fast basketball game is slated for Parish hall this evening when the Army-Navy five clashes with the Alpine five of Bridgeport. The Alpine five is considered the fastest basketball combination in the Park City and last year won the championship of the southwestern part of the state. The team this year has been traveling at a fast clip and among the victims is included some of the fastest teams in New England, the Westport Life Guards, the Naugatuck Big Five, and the Norwalk Red Men, all fast teams.

Included in the Alpine line-up is Pockowitz, Y. M. H. A. star who has an average record of ten points per game, and Burns, formerly of Notre Dame, forwards; Hart, center; Shea, captain of the Bridgeport High five, and Pederson, star American Legion player, as guards. White is a utility man of great strength.

The local quintet has been traveling at a good rate this season having won nine games out of eleven starts. After a stiff practice on Monday evening the local five showed themselves fit for the game tonight which they confidently feel will result in a victory for them. The Army-Navy team will line up as follows: "Mendl" Normandin and Joe Belair, forwards; Mills, center; T. Coleman and G. Coleman, guards. Lemieux, utility.

The preliminary game will be between the Army-Navy Seconds and the Baltic Bantams. These two teams have met twice this season and each has won a game, so tonight's battle will decide the title between these contenders for the junior basketball honors.

The game will be refereed by Dudley Burr, who is considered one of the best chalked court arbiters in the state.

O'CONNELL SIGNS CONTRACT WITH GIANTS FOR 1924

New York, Jan. 22.—Jimmy O'Connell, the $75,000 outfielder obtained by the Giants from San Francisco last year, today sent in his signed contract for 1924. O'Connell informed the club he is in excellent condition and hopes to improve on his 1923 showing, which was handicapped by illness.

Joe Oeschger, veteran twirler acquired from Boston, and Pitcher Claude Jonnard, also returned their signed contracts.

These players bring the roster of signed athletes close to completion. The only holdout so far is Wayland Dean, pitching star recently bought from Louisville.

PRES. COOLIDGE AUTOGRAPHS BALL TO BE AUCTIONED

East Hampton, Conn., Jan. 22.—A baseball sent by H. M. Scranton of this town, to President Calvin Coolidge, requesting an autograph, was returned by the president today bearing the chief executive's signature. It is believed that this is the first time the president complied with such a request.

The ball will be auctioned off for the benefit of the East Hampton Baseball association.

Babe Ruth, who was also asked to autograph a baseball sent to him, complied and stated that he might accept the invitation of the association to personally conduct the auction of both baseballs.

RYDER GETS VERDICT OVER JOHNNY CURTIN

New York, Jan. 22.—Joe Ryder, Brooklyn, decisively outpointed Irish Johnny Curtin of Jersey City in the main 12-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight. Ryder was on top of Curtin during most of the bout and was much stronger than his opponent. Ryder weighed 121 1-4; Curtin 119 1-2.

Willie Shaw of Bayonne, N. J. won the judges' verdict over Vic Brog of Pittsburgh, in a six-round preliminary. The verdict was unpopular.

NEW GOLF BALLS TO BE RECOMMENDED

New York, Jan. 22.—A new golf ball, weighing approximately 1.55 ounces avoirdupois with a diameter of 1.66 inches, which would have shorter carrying capacity than the 1.62-1.63 ball now used, will be recommended to the United States Golf association by the committee of experts headed by Secretary Lee of the association, which returned tonight from a week of tests at Jekyl Island, Ga.

All of the "Y" regulars will be in the Wednesday night line-up and a lively game is expected.

SPORT NOTES

E. C. Weeden, for three years a star at baseball with the team representing Cornell University, has been signed by the Rochester Internationals for a trial at second base.

Joe Dewine, scouting in California for the Pittsburg Club, has signed a young catcher named Dan Alley, who hails from around Oakland. He will tell them where to throw them when they ask him his name.

Pairings for the opening series in the American League, starting April 18, were announced last week as follows: Cleveland at Detroit, St. Louis at Chicago, New York in Boston and Philadelphia in Washington.

Dick Attreau, veteran first baseman who was last heard of in the Eastern League, from which he went to Independent ball, has decided to come back, and will play with Norfolk in the Virginia League next season.

Joe Woods, as coach of the Yale University baseball squad, has a tough row to hoe this spring, for Yale has an idea that traditions in baseball must be lived up to, though the general opinion is that it hasn't the quality to make the grade.

The Beaumont Club will have two Eberhards again in spring training—Karl and his brother Dan. The latter is a kid who was given a trial by Beaumont last spring, but failed to make the grade. He thinks he is a sure bet now after a year's experience.

Max Bishop is one player pleased to get a chance in the big show and not asking that he be paid a bonus for the chances. He announces that after an interview with Connie Mack terms were arranged and that he is delighted with the contract offered him.

George Foster, who won his fame as a pitcher with the Boston Red Sox and has been trying to come back on the strength of it, without great success, has been signed by the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League. For a time last year Foster was with Vernon.

The Louisville Club last week announced that Outfielder Joe Hammell had been sold outright to Buffalo and that Pitcher Tommy Estell and First Baseman Tex Covington would be disposed of. Estell may go to some club in the Southern or in the Texas League.

The Mobile Club of the Southern last week purchased Pitcher Charles (Fetis) Behan from the Philadelphia Nationals. The terms of the deal are made known. Behan is a right-hander who was quite successful in the Michigan-Ontario and International Leagues. He had little success with the Phillies last year, however.

Babe Ruth went on an automobile ride in Massachusetts the other day that wound up in police court. His license was taken away from him and he won't be able to drive a car in the state until he has done penance. Also he was fined $76, which is a smaller item than being denied the right to drive.

Pretty soft for the Braves who go to Florida. Albert H. Powell, the coal magnate, announces that his yacht will be at St. Petersburg during the training period and available for cruises for the ball players. It has accommodations for 30 persons, which is about the size of the Boston training squad.

Plans for reorganization of the Texas-Oklahoma League have been definitely abandoned by Earl Snapp, because of the decision of Paris and Greenville to stay in the east Texas League. The latest report is that Snapp may take an interest in the Okmulgee Club of the Western Association and become its business manager.

Late report is that Dick Hoblitzel, who managed the Charlotte team in the South Atlantic League last year, will return to Reading and play first base for that team, under the direction of Spencer Abbott. The business which he had expected to engage in in Charlotte will be looked after by his brother, C. H. Hoblitzel.

A rule adopted by the Western Association at its recent meeting in Muskogee provides that no club shall obtain a player from a league of higher classification in the last 30 days of the season. The purpose is to prevent clubs "loading up" for the final pennant dash. A similar rule is in more or less effect in various minor leagues.

Among announcements from Indianapolis is one that Manager Owen Bush has selected Plant City, Fla. as the training camp for his Hoosiers this spring. Another is that Hod Eller, former Cincinnati pitcher, will go into training with the Indianapolis team and attempt a comeback. Last year Eller managed a team in the Kitty League.

Charley Herzog, as manager of the Newark team of the International, is going to try out several players from the ranks of the independents and colleges in Maryland. One of his signings is Alton Scott, a pitcher, who looked so good last year that Connie Mack tried to sign him. He is a right-hander, 20 years old and weighs 190 pounds.

The Washington Club has another first base candidate in E. R. Stirling, a left-hander who was a star in college baseball with the University of North Carolina. Last year he signed a contract to play with the Norfolk Club of the Virginia League, but did not report. Washington gets him by a trade in which Pitcher Brillheart goes to Norfolk.

News reports from Newark are that the New York Giants have bought Pitcher Howard Baldwin, one of the International's best bets as a mound man and over whose ownership there has been some controversy. The new owners of the Newark franchise maintained that Baldwin went with the club, but the former owners set up that he had been "reserved" by them. There is some mystery at present as to who gets the money New York may pay for the player.

The York Club of the New York-Pennsylvania League has bought Shortstop Tony Citrano from the Baltimore Club, on the supposition that Citrano can be reinstated. He got on the in bad list when he jumped to play with an industrial team in Baltimore several years ago. Most of the players who jumped about the same time have obtained reinstatement.

George Weiss, owner and president of the New Haven Club of the Eastern League, has made definite announcement that he intends to carry on with his club, despite the fact that he may be a cripple for life as the result of injuries suffered in a railway accident. He expects to employ a business agent, however, to handle the affairs of his club.

The Reading Club bought Shortstop Buck Elliot from New York-Pennsylvania League, paying much money and giving players to boot, and Spencer Abbott thought shortstop on the Reading team was all fixed up, but now Elliott decides to "retire." It may be a stall, for this Elliott, though a great ball player, is said to be of the jumping, come-to-me sort.

A pretty hat may not affect a woman's brain but it always goes to her head.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Seeking For The Lost Flower

Maybe Little Jack Rabbit never would have found the Flower of Youth which the fairies had stolen from him in the last story, if a dear little yellow bird hadn't sung to him:

"Get once more on your little horse
And ride up yonder hill,
There you will find a tiny house
Where lives Old Mammy Jill.
Then tell her that you speak the truth
And she may find your Flower of Youth."

Up the hill galloped Dapple Gray and stopped before the tiny house. In answer to the little rabbit's tap a very old woman opened the door and asked: "What is it, dearie?"

"The little yellow bird sent me," answered bunny boy, and he went on to explain that he had found the Flower of Youth to give to dear old Uncle Lucky, only to have it stolen by the fairies.

"Hard luck, little bunny," said the old woman. But never fear, Mammy Jill will help you," and turning back into her house, she presently brought out a tiny box.

"Take this," she said, handing it to the little rabbit, "And when the moon is full and bright, place it at the foot of the tall oak tree. Then, go to the hollow tree and tell the old owl I command him to hoot three times every minute until the fairies answer."

"But how will that bring back the Flower of Youth?" asked the little bunny.

"Ask me no questions, but do as Old Mammy Jill tells you," answered the old woman.

Without another word, the bunny boy rode down the hill, and placed the little box on the ground close to the tall oak tree. Then, hopping over to the hollow tree, he rapped three times. Pretty soon, the old owl poked his head out of his front door and asked in a sleepy, wheezy voice:

"Who is it?"

"Little Jack Rabbit," answered the bunny boy.

"I can't toot in the day time," answered the sleepy owl, on hearing Mammy Jill's command.

"Let him wait until tonight," replied the old woman when Little Jack Rabbit rode back to ask her what to do about it. "And in the meantime, you can stay here and rest."

The little anxious rabbit sat down on the front porch of the little house, but he hardly noticed the honey suckle vines climbing up the post and filling the air with sweet perfume. All of a sudden, a little humming bird lighted on the sweet flowers, and sang this little song.

Dear me! I find I have no more room in this story for another word, so you must wait until the next one to hear what happened after that.

50 YEARS IN BUSINESS

JUBILEE YEAR

WATKINS BROTHERS, INC.

SOUTH MANCHESTER ~ ~ ~ ~ ~ CONNECTICUT

ASSISTANT HOME MAKERS — SINCE 1874

A FEBRUARY FURNITURE SALE

GREATER IN SCOPE AND VALUES THAN ANY THAT HAVE PRECEDED IT, USHERS IN THE CELEBRATION OF OUR JUBILEE YEAR.

Fifty years ago next October, Clarence G. and F. Ernest Watkins began business in Manchester under the name of Watkins Brothers. The founders were an exceptionally high type of men and the organization was started on the basis of straight-forward dealing in good merchandise.

During the last half century no act of any member of the firm has ever detracted from the high esteem in which they have always been held. Consequently the name and fame of Watkins stands today second to none in the furniture and musical circles of this state.

To properly celebrate an event of such importance means to us that we must return to our many friends and customers, those who have made possible so distinguished a record, substantial dividends on their investment.

To this end, we have asked the co-operation of the manufacturers with whom we have done business the longest time. Our question to them has been, "Will you make us a suite, (or chair, or whatever article it may be, in large quantities at such a figure that we can offer it to our customers substantially below the regular price?"

The response has been instantaneous and generous to an unbelievable degree. One celebrated manufacturer sold us two carloads of high grade furniture at an average of nearly 40% below the regular wholesale price. Another has made us up a special lot of tables at an incredibly low figure. In fact, we received the most enthusiastic and whole-hearted co-operation from everyone. This response is particularly gratifying to us demonstrating as it does, beyond all question, the high esteem in which our company is held by the manufacturers of high grade merchandise throughout the country. Our relationship, extending back so many years with these companies, and their hearty co-operation makes possible values not only unprecedented in our history, but which it would be impossible to duplicate anywhere except at great loss to those who attempt it. In fact, much of the merchandise which will be offered during our February Sale and perhaps later as Jubilee Specials, has been made to our order and when our orders have been filled, the patterns will be destroyed so they will not again be obtainable.

SALE OPENS JANUARY 29th

ABOUT US.

The advertising in connection with our Jubilee Celebration is certain to attract to our different stores thousands of new customers with whom we have never had the pleasure of doing business previously. To such perhaps we ought to explain in advance that Watkins Brothers operate three stores. The stores at Hartford and Bristol are exclusive music stores retailing high grade musical instruments including the world's most famous piano, the Steinway. At Manchester the musical business is a department of the great furniture and house furnishings institution which caters to the entire state.

Purchases from any of the stores amounting to $5.00 or more are delivered without charge anywhere in Connecticut, chiefly by our own trucks. The prices quoted on these special items are cash prices but arrangements can be made to purchase not only the specials but any other merchandise on our popular Deferred Payment basis.

The Jubilee Celebration will continue after the February Sale, culminating in the observance of the Anniversary Day in October on which fifty years ago the doors were first officially opened to the public. One feature of this celebration will be the offering of a series of Jubilee Specials. These will be of such exceptional value that we believe every householder within a radius of one hundred miles will want to know all about them. Consequently we have arranged to mail direct advance information to people who are interested. Just fill in and mail the coupon in the lower left hand corner of this advertisement, and we will place your name on the mailing list so that you will be sure to receive notice of all these specials.

OIL STOCKS THE FEATURE.

New York, Jan. 28.—Heavy speculative selling of the stocks of the Pan-American Petroleum and Sinclair Oil companies, based on the belief that their leases to naval oil reserves would be cancelled as a result of the disclosures before the senate investigation committee, was the feature of today's active and irregular stock market. The Pan-American issues each closed about three points lower and Sinclair lost one, transactions in these three issues comprising nearly one-tenth of the day's business, which ran well over one million shares.

With a few conspicuous exceptions, such as American Can which touched a new high record for all time and closed nearly two points higher, most of the industrials lost ground. Railroad shares showed moderate improvement, due in part to a renewal of buying for European account and an increased domestic demand predicated on the favorable nature of some of the recent earning statements.

Davison Chemical broke 3 points to 53 on unconfirmed rumors that a group which had interested itself in the property had liquidated their holdings. Weakness of General Electric, which closed nearly six points lower at 214 1-2, was attributed to official denial of rumors of a stock dividend and the filing of a complaint by the federal trade commission charging the General Electric and other companies with maintaining a ràdio monopoly.

Other conspicuous weak spots in the industrial list were Corn Products, American Woolen, American Car and Foundry, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Producers and Refiners, Cuyamel Fruit, American Agricultural Chemical preferred, Virginia Carolina Chemical preferred and Remington Typewriter, all off two to four points.

U. S. Steel met a good support in the expectation of favorable dividend developments at tomorrow's meeting of the board, yielding only fractionally on the day. Baldwin dropped 1 1-2 points to 134 1-4. Motors held fairly steady on the removal of recent selling pressure. Studebaker closed 1-4 higher at 101 3-4. Further advances in gasoline and certain grades of crude brought fresh buying into some of the domestic oils, Atlantic Refining and Tidewater gaining about three points each. Air reduction moved up about five points on the announcement that the company had called $1,000,000 remaining 7 per cent convertible notes as of April 1, which was construed as forecasting an early resumption of dividends on the common. Kresge jumped six points, on publication of the 1923 earning report. National Lead, General Baking and Montgomery Ward also were strong.

Atchison was the leader of the railroad group, touching 102 1-4 and closing at 101 1-2 for a net gain of 2 3-4 points. New York Central, Canadian Pacific and Chesapeake and Ohio, all closed a point or more higher.

Call money opened at 4 per cent, advanced to 4 1-2 and then to 5 where it closed. Time money was quoted at 4 3-4 for all maturities, the same rate being quoted for prime names on commercial paper.

Foreign exchanges showed marked improvement in reflection of reports predicting an early end of the British railroad strike. Demand sterling moved up more than two cents to around $4.25 and French francs were quoted about 10 points higher at 4.58 1-2 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 28.—Heavy oversubscription of the Southwestern Bell Telephone $50,000,000 issue of 5 per cent bonds, offered today at 92 1-2 and active buying which sent the price up a full point higher in trading on the stock exchange featured today's bond market. It was reported that the offering was about five times oversubscribed and that allotments would be on a 20 per cent basis.

The reception accorded the bonds imparted a strong tone to other Bell telephone issues, although the public utility group as a whole lost ground. Short term and convertible liens attracted the best demand.

Price movements generally were irregular, with weakness in the Liberty bond list and fractional gains in the low-priced railroad issues. Seaboard 6s, Priority Adjustment 6s, St Louis & Southwestern, Consolidated 4s and Erie "D" 4s reached new high levels for the year. Profit taking was directed at some of the copper and sugar issues which scored sharp advances last week.

Sinclair Consolidated Oil issues, hit by another wave of speculative selling as court action to cancel the Teapot Dome lease appeared likely, ran from 1 to 3 points and Virginia-Carolina Chemical 7 1-2s again were weak.

New financing, it was reported in bond circles, would be speeded up by the ready absorption of the Southwestern Bell Telephone issue. The only issue, however, which appeared ready for offering was the St. Louis & Southwestern $1,500,000 1 to 16-year 5 1-2 equipments.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Corn led a big rally in the grain markets today. A decrease was shown in the United States' visible supply of corn and of wheat and oats as well. Besides, damp weather was a bullish factor. The corn market was nervous at the close, but notwithstanding an early decline finished 1-2@5-8c to 1c net higher, May 79 7-8@80 to 80c. Wheat closed firm at 1-2 to 3-8c gain, May 109 1-4 and July 107 5-8, with oats 1-4@3-8c to 5-8c@1-4c up, and provisions unchanged to 25c down.

Corn scored an advance of nearly 2c from the day's lowest prices, and finished near the top figures of the season. Persistent selling had a depressing effect during the early trade, but an excellent class of buying absorbed the pit surplus, and when some of the previous sellers tried to switch their position they found little for sale. Bull leaders promptly became aggressive in purchasing, and were aided by numerous recruits who were influenced by the facts, that the market had been on the down grade for several days and who were anticipating a reaction.

Increased receipts of corn at Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis had much to do with the temporary downward swing of the corn market. Receipts here, however, were far from burdensome, and country offerings dropped away to virtually nothing when prices fell.

Oats today, like corn got within a fraction of the best prices so far this season. The readiness with which profit-taking sales of late in the oats have been absorbed help to lift values.

Wheat reflected in the main the action of corn. Today's decrease in the visible supply made a total reduction of about 6,000,000 bushels in the last three weeks.

Heavy arrivals of hogs weighed down the provision market.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Jan. 28.—Stock prices developed considerable irregularity in today's curb market with losses exceeding gains at the close. Ford Motors of Canada jumped 23 points to 462 on a few odd lot sales.

Oils started upward on the announcement of increased prices for gasoline in the east but heavy profit-taking checked the advance and caused sharp reactions in a number of shares. Prairie Oil & Gas dropped 2 1-2 points, Standard Oil of Nebraska 3 and Ohio Oil, Solar Refining, South Pennsylvania Oil and Standard Oil of Ohio, 1 to 2. Pipe line shares were strong, Buckeye, Cumberland, Northern and New York Transit closing 2 to 4 points higher.

New Mexico land touched another new top at 8. Dubilier Radio also touched a new top at 16 7-8 but was unable to maintain its gain, yielding in sympathy with the heaviness of the radio corporation issues, selling of which was based on the complaint filed against that and other companies by the federal trade commission.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

The extreme cold waves that have prevailed in this section during the past ten days have slowed up building operations to some extent although a good deal of work has been accomplished during the exceptionally open winter. Several local projects have been completed which include a large garage for Frank Aubrey on Oak street and another garage for W. E. Baldwin on Lincoln avenue.

At the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton there were nine building permits issued during the past week, bringing the total for the month well up to the average for the last week in the month. Included in these permits is one for a two-story frame house on Dunham street and one for a large lumber shed on South Golden street. The other permits are for garages and additions or alterations to other buildings. The total valuation on the new buildings as placed by the owners is approximately $9,000.

The permits issued are as follows:

To W. E. Baldwin to erect a frame garage on Lincoln avenue for S. M. Baldwin. The garage will be 30x21 feet and two stories high. The sides will be finished in clapboards and the roof will be shingled.

To W. L. Spencer to build a piazza on the house at 14 Hobart avenue for Joseph P. Sullivan.

To M. Krieger to erect a frame garage on Mechanic street. The garage will be 30x20 feet with clapboard sides and shingle roof.

To Yantic Grain and Products to build an addition to the present office building on Cove street. The addition will be 10x16 feet and of hollow tile and cement blocks.

To George W. Rathbun to erect a two-story frame house on Dunham street. The house will be 27x28 feet. The foundation will be of stone and cement. The exterior finish will be in clapboards and shingles, the first story in clapboards and the second in shingles. The interior will be finished in plaster and hard wood.

To W. L. Spencer to erect a frame garage on Oak street for Frank Aubrey. The garage will have a concrete foundation and floor. The extension will be finished in clapboards and cedar shingles. The building will be 20x40 feet.

To Jacob R. Sloberg to erect a lumber shed on South Golden street. The shed will be 32x80 feet.

To D. Y. Barry to build an addition, 10x14 feet, to the present house for Edward J. Duro at 412 Main street.

To Anthony M. Nowakowski to erect a frame garage at 197-199 Central avenue. The garage will be 10x18 feet, with composition exterior and finish.

NEW LONDON

Plans are being completed for the building to be erected for Mrs. Helen Patterson on the site of the building which was recently destroyed by fire on State street. The proposed structure will be three stories high, of hollow tile, fireproof construction. It will be arranged for a store on the first floor with six offices on the upper floors. It will have a frontage of 21 feet on State street, running back 104 feet. The store front will be of plate glass with copper setting. There will be new hot water heating system with an oil burner. The plans will be given our for figures at once as the work is to go ahead immediately.

Architects are drawing plans for an addition to the store of the Schwartz Furniture Co. to be erected in the rear of, and attached to, the present building on Bank street. The new building will be 35x50 feet, four stories high of brick and mill construction, with steel sash. The present elevator will be located in the new building and there will be an extension to the present heating system. The addition will be designed for showrooms and storage purposes. The owners will receive figures at once.

Plans prepared for alterations to the building at 48 State street, owned by Philip J. Hendel, for Peter Vong, lessee of the store, are now being figured. The plans call for new store fronts of plate glass and copper, metal ceilings, new stairs in the rear, new plumbing and electric wiring. The present store will be divided into two stores and the first floor will be lowered to the street level. The architect is receiving bids for the work.

The Connecticut Power Co. is demolishing buildings at 175 Water street in preparation for the erection of a steel tank which will have a capacity of 1,000,000 cubic feet of gas, two purifying boxes and a coke shed. The contract for the work has been awarded. The permit issued for the construction of the fuel supply unit shows that the estimated cost of the proposed tank is $50,000, the purifying boxes, $30,000, and the coke shed, $15,000.

Applications for Building Permits

Sidney Sulman, addition, Shapley street $200.

Herman Kohnken, garage, Vauxhall street $100.

Solomon Kampler, store front, 79 State street $200.

Connecticut Power Co., gas tank, purifying boxes and coke shed, 175 Water street $255,000.

A. F. Fargo, barn, Thames street extension $300.

Number of permits issued for the week, 8; estimated cost of buildings, $256,100.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTAGE LOANS

There were 10 sales of real estate in Norwich as compared to 11 sales for the same week in 1923. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $19,800 and $29,900.

In New London during the past week there were 10 sales of realm estate as compared to six sales for the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $38,250 and $29,900.

THE STATE SITUATION

Due to the open winter, which has prevailed until recently, building operations have been going along at a pace greatly in excess of last year. All present indications are that the coming year is to be an even greater building season than last year, which was a record-breaker. Permits for the week in the larger centers of the State where permits are granted, numbered 174, for buildings costing $774,156, against 55 permits in the like week of the year 1923, for buildings costing $466,771, and 57 permits in 1922, for buildings costing $139,940.

At the Palace.

The bill for the first half of the week at the Palace theatre includes a variety of entertainment, opening with a dancing revue and closing with a pretty bird act which is billed as the headliner. This act includes a number of trained cockatoos and red and blue macaws which lend charming color to the act. This act has appeared in Norwich several times and the improvement in the performance of the birds is very noticeable and many features have been added since it last played on the local stage.

The other feature act is the Vaudeville Follies, an act presented by seven juvenile entertainers. Two little tots are featured throughout the act and their work is truly deserving of praise. This act has a good setting and the costuming is exceptional.

For the comedy part of the programme Emerson and Baldwin present a comedy take-off on the magical acts that are frequently seen on the stage. Mixed in with their nonsense is some very good juggling and Indian club work.

Arthur and Lydia Wilson have a neat little singing and dancing act as has Clayton and Moore, who present a dance revue.

The feature picture is Wandering Daughters, featuring Marguerite De La Motte and Marjorie Daw and Pat O'Malley. The Pathe News Weekly and an episode in Fighting Blood completes the bill.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

South Manchester's Famous Furniture Store Fifty Years Old

Up in South Manchester there is a store, voted by furniture manufacturers, retailers, and travelling salesmen throughout the United States the finest small town furniture store in the country, and probably with one exception the finest in all New England. This store, Watkins Brothers, Inc, will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary with a "Jubilee Year."

Back in 1874 Clarence G. and F. Ernest Watkins, two adventurous boys always ready to tackle anything that looked interesting or hopeful, bought out the only undertaking business in their town and before they knew it, and without any preparation whatsoever, were launched as full fledged undertakers. Their first place of business was a one room building which was later made into a residence by the addition of an ell and a veranda.

In those days all caskets were made to order, but during their spare time the boys made up extra ones and were soon supplying Hartford undertakers with their surplus stock.

Then came the opportunity to purchase the furniture stock of William H. Chidsey. The entire stock was purchased for $6,000, about as much as is invested in one of Watkins Brothers' smallest departments today. Soon they outgrew the building in which they were located and planned to erect what seemed at that time an immense building. The projected store was so large that no contractor in Manchester would take it on a contract and many heads were wagged and many predictions of failure made. But they only made one mistake—they didn't build large enough. The three floor store soon proved too small for their growing business.

In 1906 the firm bought out the piano business of Woods & McCann in Hartford and in 1912 that of William Wander & Sons, securing thereby the exclusive agency for the Steinway piano in central Connecticut. At the same time the business was incorporated.

In 1919 the present home of Watkins Brothers was started. It is the sixth building to be occupied by them and is four times the size of the building they vacated last. In November, 1920 the new store was officially opened and since then it has gained fame throughout the state and people journey for miles and miles to visit it and to make selections from its large and carefully chosen stock. Among the many features of the store are a suite of furnished rooms—"The Cottage," a Gift Shop, and Interior Decorating Department, headed by an experienced interior decorator, a monthly magazine—Watkins Monthly—which has been issued for years, a force of intelligent salesmen, schooled in interior decorating and period furniture, and an exceptional shipping department.

This year the firm, which now operates music stores in Hartford and Bristol, as well as their furniture and music store at South Manchester, will celebrate its fiftieth—its Jubilee Year—in business.

The average 1924 mind cannot conceive of anything like the ancient Jewish Jubilee. When the trumpet blew at the end of the 49th year, the slave became a free man, the debtor was forgiven, his debts and the man who had lost his home through misfortune or otherwise had his property restored. If you can imagine how the ancient Jew looked forward to his Jubilee Year you can understand some of Watkins Brothers' sensations as they enter the fiftieth year of their life as a mercantile institution. The plan to make it a never-to-be forgotten year for their friends and customers.

From time to time they plan to issue what they will call their "Jubilee Specials." These specials will be articles or suites of furniture, which in most cases, have been made to their order by manufacturers at large concessions in price. These price concessions are purely complimentary, being made as a token of appreciation of their many years of eminently satisfactory business dealing with these manufacturers.

Some of the values are so exceptional as to be almost sensational. None of their Jubilee Specials can be duplicated elsewhere unless at a loss. Many of them cannot be duplicated at all as they are of their own design.

This Jubilee Year is going to give the friends and patrons of Watkins Brothers the honest-to-goodness once-in-a-lifetime opportunity they have been hoping for. The first announcement of their Jubilee Specials and Jubilee Furniture Sale appears in today's Bulletin.

At the Breed Theatre

The William Fox special production "No Mother to Guide Her" featuring Genevieve Tobin is the feature attraction at the Breed theatre today. This production reveals with much simplicity and truthfulness the various paths trod by children of the rich and poor.

The sort of homeliness found in "No Mother to Guide Her" is reminiscent of "Over the Hill," another William Fox success, which was offered with great acclaim in Norwich last year.

In addition to Miss Tobin, the star whom Broadway has been applauding this year by reason of her performance in "Polly Preferred," the cast includes Lolita Robertson, J. D. Walsh, John Webb Dillion and Jack McLean. It is splendid in its entirety, performed with a fine restraint and high-strung sympathy.

For purely technical merits, "No Mother to Guide Her" is excellent. Magnificent sets, both interior and exterior, together with much natural beauty, form an adequate setting for this appealing story. The hopes of each of the children

CARD OF THANKS

When the hand of affliction rested heavily upon us through the illness, death and burial of a beloved son and brother, Patrick E. Carbray, many relatives and warm friends displayed their sympathy by kindly acts and each one was deeply appreciated. We take this meager means of extending our thanks. To those who sent flowers we feel especially grateful. Time will never efface from our memories these acts of kindness.

HANOVER MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR JAMES W. EADIE

Sunday afternoon at the Hanover Congregational church an impressive memorial service that was largely attended, was held for the late James W. Eadie, long a member of the church and its treasurer for 25 years. The pastor, Rev. Roderick MacLeod, delivered the memorial address, speaking in part as follows:

"Our presence here yesterday, and today means two very real things to us. First, that friendliness is one of the greatest things in the world, and second, that spiritual living is coming to be recognized and appreciated in a more universal way. Beside the open grave we always stand with a deep sense of mystery. In the past men have stood beside the grave too long, as that the fact of death has estranged proportions in our thinking that are unwarranted. Our ancestors thought more of death than of life. That was one of their greatest mistakes. Let not us, their descendants make the same mistake. Today we are standing beside the life of a man who was friendly and spiritual. We are thinking of one who is still living, and so this is not a service of mourning. Rather is it a service in which we try to make real to ourselves the fact of immortality.

We build our faith in immortality on the vision of Jesus who told us that in his Father's house are many mansions. What is it about Mr. Eadie's life that makes us sure that he is now growing in grace, that he is more vitally alive today than he was while with us in body. If we can answer that question about him, will it not give all of us a clue as to what our own lives are contributing.

Again it is Jesus who makes clear to us what are the relations in life in which a man grows into the kind of person who is fit for immortality. He said a man one day that he was not far from the Kingdom of God. You remember from our Scripture reading, the reason for this is that the man agreed with Jesus in his statement of what the two greatest commandments were. In brief love for God and love of neighbor. Jesus could have said that he was already in the kingdom if in addition to agreeing with him he had practiced obedience to the commandments. Love to God, the upward look; love to men, the outward look. Worship and service, the two fundamentals for Jesus' followers—the in-breathing of power and love from God, and the outpouring of love and power to our fellowmen. These are the sheaves which every man brings when he comes to give account for the deeds done in the body—prayer and praise, loyalty and devotion, faith and works. Curiously enough, the answers to the roll call which Mr. Eadie made in the last two years show where he stands in these two respects.

First, the Godward look. Those of you who were at the annual meeting the first of the month will recall the feeling we had as I read Mr. Eadie's response to the roll call, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." Ps. 23. A feeling of sorrow mingled with a wave of spiritual refreshment. We knew that in all probability this response would be the last he would give us, and for this reason we grieved. But underneath there was a feeling of regret there came a deep sense that we were standing on holy ground, for the words of the Psalmist brought to the consciousness of our hearts the very presence of our Lord. We felt as though the words were his.

On his lips they meant just what was between God and him that his greatest blessedness in one of mercy which there was between Jesus and his disciples. The trust which Mr. Eadie had in God was an intelligent trust, hence growing. Every year he could say something like this, "God has allowed me to become better acquainted with Him than I was last year. I have loved Him with my heart and find my heart is more sensitive to the worship needs. I have loved Him with my mind and this year questions that bothered me, bother me no more. I have gone deeper into the truth of the gospel of Jesus and am sure that even deeper revelations of truth will yet come to me, as I consecrate my mind to the understanding of life as Jesus would have us live it. I have loved Him with my soul my all, and my deepest conviction is that God is love—for with love has he surrounded me all my days and I find the truest expression of myself in loving thoughts, loving words and loving acts."

Those are imaginary words—yet to some of us, in his own characteristic way, he has said the same.

"I have heard many of you say, "He was a spiritually-minded man." We all felt this about him. And we were just a bit wistful in saying it, for we felt that in things spiritual, he was far more courageous than we were. Where we had stood at the door, as it were, and hung back, he had ventured in and found that "spirit with spirit could meet." He trusted the Father of his spirit. This trust led him into spiritual experiences which God had prepared for those souls that come to Him in spirit and in truth. In his experience of things spiritual, he was far ahead of his times. "There will be a day," he said, "when men will have much travailing and groaning of the human spirit before the great mass of mankind will find it easy and intelligible to say, as he did say, "I have a body, I am a spirit. A friend of his told me yesterday, that it was 11 years ago this summer that he heard Mr. Eadie pray at one of the conferences. He had never seen him before, but he remembers saying as himself, 'This man is used of God.' and when the prayer was over, there came to his mind these words of Scripture which he came to associate with Mr. Eadie as he came to know him better and better. "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart, who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the Lord and righteousness from the God of his salvation."

One distinctive contribution he made which is worth of example by the young, Mr. Eadie believed in loving God, not only with his heart but with his mind. To this end he was a painstaking student of Scripture and of the new light which modern scholars have thrown upon Scripture. He had no fears that his faith would be undermined, for his faith was rested and grounded, in love and truth, and he knew there was nothing visible nor invisible which could do away with these. His years were filled with a restful joy because of the flood of light which he felt that God had revealed to him through a spiritual interpretation of the theory of evolution. It made his Bible live for him in a way that it never had before. As he said to me once, "It brings God so much closer to us—makes it clearer how He is working in and through and for the bringing in of His kingdom." He felt actually that the Lord was his Shepherd, leading him into green pastures where his mind was refreshed by new light and beside still waters where his heart found peace. His walk with God was close, and purer light did mark the road that led him to the Lamb.

His trust in God, his spiritual-mindedness, his love for the Good Shepherd, led him to the exercise of good-will among men, gave him the outward look. His close walk with God led him to walk close with his fellowmen. His friendship with Jesus made him a friendly man. You who gathered here yesterday and today were glad to own him as your friend because he had been friendly to you. It can truly be said of him that his religion was his life. His life on Monday and all week days corresponded with what he stood for on Sunday. His love for the church is an index of this side of his character. His faithfulness shames us. Last summer he planned to go to the mountains on a certain Thursday just before he was about to go he remembered that the following Sunday was communion, and he put off his vacation until the following Monday. Even the persuading of the minister could not induce him to go. He loved the church for many reasons—because of the rich memories which worship brought him, memories of parents and family to whom church was very dear; because of the dependence of his spirit upon the spiritual strength which prayer summons and song brought him; because he felt that it was through the activity of the church that the best interests of the kingdom were forwarded. He felt that the church was one of the best organized ways of spreading the gospel of Jesus at home and abroad, the gospel of peace and good-will among men. Through it he exercised his love for men. The other answer to the roll call which I spoke of as illustrative of his love for men, he gave last year in the poem, About Ben Adhem, by Leigh Hunt.

It was the ideal of service which was in Mr. Eadie's mind as he gave this as his answer to his roll call, especially the words, "I pray thee then, write me as one that loves his fellowmen." Do we not feel that today we can write Mr. Eadie as one who loves his fellowmen? The words are happily applicable to him.

We have come back to that from which we started, love for God and love for man, having found them both in the life of our friend, knowing that these are the keys to the kingdom of God, the working tools of immortality.

Can we go away from a service like this without applying the lesson of the life of this man to ourselves? Not if we are his true friends. If we are his true friends, we will go away resolved to know God better, resolved to love him so intimately that we can say from the heart, The Lord is my Shepherd—resolved, finally, that we will spend the rest of our lives in loving and serving our fellow-men to the end that it may be said of us as we know it can be said of him, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things—enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

NORWICH TOWN

At 7.30 Saturday morning at the Sacred Heart church, the pastor, Rev. Charles W. Brennan celebrated a requiem high mass for the repose of the soul of John McNamara. Miss Elizabeth A. Malone was in charge of the music and the choir sang. Miss Mary Buckley singing the solos in the mass. In the large attendance were relatives and friends, out of town relatives being present from South Dakota, Passaic, New Jersey, New York, Norwich and other places.

That the women of the Sacred Heart parish are endeavoring to earn money for the benefit of the new church, is evidenced by several projects under way. A series of whists has been arranged to continue each week until the Lenten season. Different members of the parish are opening their homes for these gatherings which afford a pleasant social evening for members of the parish and friends. Thus far, two very successful whists have been held. Mrs. Denis Houlihan of Sturtevant street was the hostess at the first, when six tables were in play. At the meeting last Thursday evening, Mrs. John Lyons of West Town street, was the hostess, there being 14 tables. The entire arrangement is very informal and with as little expense as possible so that the church may realize the bulk of the proceeds. Another great success was the food sale held recently under the auspices of the Altar society, assisted by several others, when about $160 was cleared.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goodnow arrived the early part of January, to pass the remainder of the winter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Yerrington of Peck's corner. Miss Eleanor Goodnow, who has been at the Yerrington home for some time, has gone to Washington for a stay. Mr. and Mrs. Yerrington recently had as their guest, Mrs. Frank C. Schofield of Montville, who has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Park and son Wilfred Park of Preston City, were callers Saturday at the home of Mrs. Park's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Scott of Town street.

The mercury in reliable thermometers hovered around the zero mark, Saturday night, in many localities in Norwich Town, while from other sections nearby, several degrees lower were reported.

HOLDS DWOJAKOWSKI IN JAIL FOR RESULT OF CORONER'S FINDING

Raymond Rozanski, 28, of 760 Boswell avenue shot in a mysterious way at the club house of the Lisbon Schutzenverein Saturday night, died about 4 o'clock Monday morning at the Backus hospital and William Dwojakowski, 24, of 40 Convent avenue, who is known by the nickname of Crooked Neck, is held in the Norwich jail without bonds to await the result of the coroner's finding on the death of Rozanski.

A Colt's 32 calibre automatic revolver and an empty shell from it have been found at the shooting club and are in the hands of the authorities.

Dwojakowski came into police notice just exactly a year ago Saturday when he was arrested in this city after sending a blackmail letter to Rutherford C. Plaut of 63 Cliff St., demanding $1,100 which he said he wanted for a surgical operation. At that time it was believed he was not mentally sound.

Monday evening about 7.30 Dwojakowski was presented before Walter F. Drew, J. P., at a special session of the Lisbon town court. The case against Dwojakowski was continued two weeks by Justice Drew to await the result of Coroner J. J. Desmond's finding.

Dwojakowski with Raymond Thompson, Thomas Anderson and James V. Barry, all of this city, and all held in connection with the tragedy were taken from police headquarters to the home of Grand Juror George Helmboldt in Lisbon by state police officers about 7 o'clock Monday evening.

Pending the result of Coroner Desmond's finding Justice Drew continued the case until February 11th, holding Dwojakowski without bonds. Thompson, Anderson and Barry were held as witnesses in bonds of $100 which were furnished. Dwojakowski was immediately brought back to Norwich by the state police and taken to the county jail where he will remain until his case is called in the Lisbon court. It is said that a number of those present at the dance in the shooting club Saturday night are to be summoned as witnesses in the case against Dwojakowski.

As there is widespread interest in the outcome of the hearing next month it is probable that the court will convene either in the Lisbon school building or the shooting club hall for the trial of the case.

State policemen under the direction of Sergeant Gorgas of the Groton barracks were at work on the case Monday and put Dwojakowski and the other three men through a course of questioning at Norwich police headquarters. County investigator William Lewis, who is attached to the state attorney's office, was also here and accompanied the state policemen to the Lisbon hearing.

From what could be learned of the events that took place at the Lisbon club house, where a dance was being held for members on Saturday night, Dwojakowski and Rozanski were in a party of young men who arrived at the place. There was sort of altercation and Constable Potter was called into the hall, where he was told some body had fired a shot. Dwojakowski was on the floor and somebody told the constable that the man had a gun. The constable grabbed Dwojakowski by the wrists and jerked him to his feet, telling him to put up his hands. When searched no gun was found on Dwojakowski, but the constable was told that Rozanski might have it. He found Rozanski in the lavatory too drunk to stand up, according to the constable, who searched the man but did not find the gun. At the direction of the officers of the club of the committee in charge of the dance, Rozanski was put out of the place, but no one at that time knew he was shot, nor was there any blood to be seen.

Later on the constable was told by a man in charge of the bowling alley that the gun had been thrown in there but the man had not heard it hit the floor. Constable Potter searched the bowling alley room, which was also used for a coat room, but did not find the gun. Some time later after many of the people had gone home and many of the coats had been taken off the chairs on which they had been piled up, the revolver was found on top of a coat on one of the chairs. The magazine had five cartridges, but the empty shell from which a shot had been fired was not found until Monday, it is understood.

Dwojakowski has claimed, it is understood in one statement that he made to the authorities that Rozanski asked him to lend him a revolver on Saturday, but there are some points about this statement that the authorities do not fully credit.

How Rozanski reached his home after he was shot has not been disclosed, but it is apparent that he was in such a condition from drink that he did not know that he was shot nor did the members of his family know it as his brother called Dr. W. T. Driscoll Sunday evening to give him medicine for a supposed severe stomach ache occasioned by drink. Dr. Driscoll at once discovered the man had been shot and rushed him to the hospital where the bullet was removed, but it was recognized that Rozanski had only about one chance in a thousand to live.

VOTE TO SECURE PLANS FOR JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Jan. 28.—The city council this evening thrashed out the matter of the erection of a junior high school, and in order to give the citizens the right to get at the plan through a referendum a vote was passed to authorize the securing of plans, for the erection of the building and for its equipment at a cost of not more than $480,000. The arguments advanced against the project were the strongest yet offered and came from Councilor Fox chiefly.

Councilor Fox attacked the plan and said that it would be an imposition for the council to spend the money needed and some $40,000 besides for architect fees without giving the citizens a chance to vote on the matter of whether they wanted it or did not want it. Councilor Thompson and Councilor Dragan sided with Councilor Fox and with the mayor carried a vote through that the city would not authorize the construction of the building, but then it developed that the only way a referendum vote could be had was for the council to take some definite action and then the protest could come in the nature of a referendum.

The director of law decided that no referendum could come on a negative vote of the council—that something definite must be decided upon in order that the citizens may decide that they do not want what the council has voted for or that they sanction the action taken. The matter was brought to the council on report of a committee which was to the effect that the council authorize steps to be taken to erect such a building as is proposed at a cost of half a million dollars. That is not the vote adopted by the council, but rather one that will provide for a building to cost $480,000 equipped, which is a very different matter than the erection of a junior high school at a cost of half a million for the building alone. The vote passed tonight was stated to be for the sole purpose of letting the people take a referendum vote on the matter and not for the purpose of providing a junior high school building. The council clearly did not favor that scheme.

An ordinance was put in the works that will secure adequate protection for property adjoining gasoline tanks. The ordinance is copper bound and riveted so that there shall be no escaping safety so far as it can be had. There are some 30 and more sections in the ordinance.

A committee was appointed to prepare resolutions on the death of Thomas M. Waller, who was an ex-mayor of the city.

The mayor and city manager were appointed to represent the city in remonstrating against the increase in trolley fares by the Connecticut company. One member declared the action of the Connecticut company as an imposition.

MUSICAL NUMBERS OF 1874 TO BE SUNG AT PARK CHURCH

Park Congregational church, Norwich, is preparing to commemorate, April 27th and 28th, the 50th anniversary of its organization and formal recognition.

By rare good luck, a program of the music arranged for that service, in 1874, by the late Major Bela Peck Learned has been found. It was in possession of the late Henry L. Butts and has been preserved by his daughters, Miss Matilda Butts and Miss Addie L. Butts.

Several of the numbers are to be sung at the services in April, the musical program for which is being arranged by the present chorister, Eben Learned.

ICEMEN PREPARING TO HARVEST THEIR CROP

With one or two more days of cold weather ice dealers in Norwich and vicinity will begin to harvest the crop that will supply house owners of the city next summer.

The cold snap of Saturday night sent the mercury down to 5 below zero at Ford's ice pond at East Great Plain and Monday morning the mercury stood at 4 above zero. The ice on the pond measures six inches in thickness and Harry B. Ford has stated that cutting would probably begin on Wednesday or Thursday of this week, with ice that will measure nearly eight inches, as this is the minimum thickness of ice desired.

Henry B. Bates of Preston has six-inch ice and is planning to start cutting today (Tuesday) if the weather continues cold. W. J. Kramer also has six-inch ice and hopes to begin cutting this week if the weather holds out.

There was a time in Norwich when the ice dealers planned to get their crops in before the first of the year, or they stood a chance of not getting a good supply. In recent years the month for ice crops has shifted to January and in some years it was not until February that ice reached the desired thickness.

LORD'S HILL FARM WINS BIG LOT OF CORN PRIZES

The notable record of taking 91.6 per cent. of the first premium awards was made by the Lord's Hill Farm exhibit at the annual Connecticut State Corn Show at Hartford last week.

These comprised the award on white flint, offered by the state board of agriculture, and those given by the Connecticut Fairs association for best 10 ears of dent, and best 10 ears of flint corn, all varieties of dent and flint competing in their respective classes, the first prize money being $25 in each class.

That one may exhibit at Hartford in these classes it is necessary to show previous at some incorporated fair in the state. This was done at the North Stonington Grange fair in September, the Lord's Hill corn winning first premiums on both varieties.

This makes the fifth consecutive year that the Lord's Hill flint has won the first prize offered by the state board of agriculture, and the second consecutive year the Lord's Hill flint has won over all flint varieties, and their yellow dent over all varieties of dent.

CAPTURED YOUNG RACCOON ON GREENEVILLE BRIDGE

A few days ago Harold Davis of Corning road on his way to Greeneville school, saw near the Greeneville bridge a strange-looking animal. He threw a missile and stunned the creature so that he captured it in a few moments. It proved to be a three-quarter grown raccoon. The little animal revived from the shock of the blow of the billet of wood and is now in a more or less unwilling captivity but is hearty and ready to growl his greetings to visitors.

FORMER SEC'Y A. B. FALL HAS BEEN UNDER SURVEILLANCE

President Coolidge a Week Ago Had Ordered Department of Justice Agents at New Orleans Not to Permit Fall to Leave the Country "Under Any Conditions"—Announcement Made in the Senate by Senator Willis—Senate Spent Yesterday Debating the Walsh Resolution For Annulment of the Fall-Doheny-Sinclair Oil Leases—Debate Was Marked by Political Bitterness—President Coolidge Has Selected Counsel For Oil Prosecutions.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The move for annulment of the naval oil leases proceeded slowly today in a thickening atmosphere of political bitterness.

The senate again failed to act on the Walsh annulment resolution after an all-day debate in which the demand for the resignation of Secretary Denby was renewed and a similar attack was launched against Attorney-General Daugherty.

During the day Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, enlarged the area of oil fields to be recovered by introducing a resolution to assert title to sections of naval oil lands in California now in possession of the Standard Oil company.

Taking note of the attacks on him, Secretary Denby, after attending a two-hours' session of President Coolidge's cabinet, said he believed he had acted for the best in the oil transactions; that he would do the same thing again; that he would not resign even if the Robinson resolution demanding that he do so were adopted.

At the cabinet meeting, the president and his advisers discussed in every detail the course of the administration and it was apparent tonight that the lawyers to be employed as special counsel in the annulment suits virtually had been selected.

On the floor of the senate Chairman Lenroot, of the oil committee, revealed that Mr. Coolidge had been informed in advance of the sensational testimony given a week ago by Archie Roosevelt relating to charges of a $68,000 payment to the foreman of Former Secretary Falls' ranch.

Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, then announced that in the same day Mr. Fall and his foreman, Thomas Johnson, had been placed under surveillance by agents of the department of justice, who were instructed to prevent their departure from the country.

Advised that Mr. Fall was unable to appear before it today because of a threatened nervous collapse, the oil committee decided to examine his physicians tomorrow before deciding whether to accept an invitation to question him in his sick room.

The senate's debate on political features of the oil disclosures after centering most of the day about Mr. Coolidge and members of his cabinet, finally brought into discussion the name of President Harding. Defending Mr. Harding for transferring control of the reserves to the interior department, Senator Willis declared the dead president would not knowingly have violated any law, and the statement was accepted on the democratic side.

Partisan charges and counter-charges also figured in a brief house debate centering around a request by Secretary Daniels during the Wilson administration for congressional approval of the drilling of offset wells in the naval reserves.

As the senate proceeds with its debate tomorrow in the hope of reaching a vote before adjournment the house naval committee will examine Secretary Denby and other naval officials and interior department officers with a view to determining whether the Sinclair and Doheny leases are in the best interests of the government.

A resolution similar to that offered by Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, and proposing cancellation of the leases without going into the courts, was introduced by Representative Fairchild, republican, New York. The resolution declares the leases to be fraudulent and against the public interest.

Because of the turn of events which has brought him under congressional fire, Mr. Denby has abandoned his projected trip to Panama to witness the conclusion of the winter maneuvers of the United States fleet. He said tonight he would stay in Washington, available for any call that might come to him from any congressional committee.

Aside from the political features of the situation, the senate's debate today, which continued for six hours, touched many times upon the legal aspects of the leasing of the reserves. Chairman Lenroot, in a careful argument that was listened to attentively on both sides of the chamber for more than three hours, contended that while the policy pursued was in violation of law, congress should hesitate in making flat declarations of such an assertion in any resolution adopted because that was a question which would have to be decided by the courts in the contemplated proceedings.

Supporting the action of President Coolidge with respect to the initiation of annulment proceedings, Senator Lenroot declared that when it came to the rectifying of any wrong done, politics should stop. For that reason, he said, he resented criticism of the president for doing the very thing that democratic senators, through the Walsh resolution, were seeking to compel him to do.

ALBERT B. FALL HAS BEEN UNDER SURVEILLANCE

Washington, Jan. 29—Albert B. Fall former secretary of the interior, was placed under the surveillance of department of justice agents at New Orleans on January 26, Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, declared today in the senate. Orders went out to the agents from the department, the senator said, not to permit him to leave the country "under any conditions."

This was the day before Archie Roosevelt gave his sensational testimony before the senate oil committee and at the time that President Coolidge had been advised in advance of the nature of that testimony by Chairman Lenroot.

On the same day, Senator Willis said, department of justice agents at El Paso, were directed to place under surveillance Thomas Johnson, foreman of Fall's ranch and Three Rivers, New Mexico, for whom a committee subpoena was issued that day and who now is in Washington. He was not to be permitted to leave the country.

This message, sent to George Shanton, department of justice agent at New Orleans, by W. J. Burns, director of the bureau of investigation, emphasized the necessity for secrecy under pain of dismissal.

Senator Walsh said before that message had been sent, he and Chairman Lenroot had telegraphed the governor of Louisiana, asking that the state agencies be used to keep Secretary Fall under surveillance. The governor, replying, agreed to take the action requested, he added.

With reference to Agent Bennett at El Paso, Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, said he was an appointee of Mr. Fall and that the former agent there, an "excellent and capable" official, had been removed in order that he might be given the position.

Senator Willis read the telegrams from Burns to Bennet and Shanton to show that the department of justice had been active in the matter of the oil lease developments. Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, wanted to know why they had not prevented Harry F. Sinclair from going to Europe.

Senator Willis declared that if anyone wanted to make a fight on the attorney general and the department of justice, there would be an "interesting battle."

"I happen to know," he said, "that not only is the head of the department of justice not a man to run away from a fight, but that he is as clean as a hound's tooth."

EVEN WALSH VINDICATES LATE PRESIDENT HARDING

Washington, Jan. 29—The memory of President Harding smoothed down the storm of Teapot Dome debate in the senate today and broke party lines for a moment.

It was during debate on the language of Senator Walsh's resolution, which makes reference to the transfer of the naval reserves from the navy to the interior department as having been "in defiance" of the conservation policy of the government.

Senator Willis, of Ohio, here President Harding's home state, objected. "I know the senator from Montana has no such thought" he said, "but the unsupported charge was made here yesterday that the selection of Secretaries Denby and Fall for the cabinet were a prelude to this transfer. The fact that there are those in this chamber and out of it, cheap enough to seek a petty partisan advantage from such a false statement, is reason why the senate should not include such language in its resolution.

"I don't know anything about this transaction, but I say freely that Warren G. Harding made an error when he transferred these reserves from the navy department to the interior. But I know that man well enough to know that he never did anything which he thought was not for the good of the people of the United States."

"It is well known," replied Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, who is leading the attack, "that the late president was not a lawyer himself, and that he had complete confidence in the judgment of his secretary of the interior. It was the most natural thing in the world that he should follow Mr. Fall's advice."

SINCLAIR WILL WELCOME JUDICIAL DETERMINATION

Paris, Jan. 29—(By the A. P.)—When he has completed the business which brought him to France, Harry F. Sinclair, American oil producer, will return to the United States and "welcome the judicial determination" of the questions at issue with regard to the Teapot Dome oil concession. It is his purpose, however, to remain abroad until his business is finished.

Mr. Sinclair tonight sent a cable despatch to United States Senator Lenroot to this effect. He reiterated that he already had appeared five times before the investigating committee and given the committee "every fact or circumstance of a fact you have inquired about from me."

The oil producer said he had told the committee that neither he nor the companies with which he is connected "have ever given Secretary Fall or any other representative of the government any money or any consideration whatsoever in connection with the Teapot Dome lease, and I again repeat I have not done so."

COOLIDGE SELECTS COUNSEL FOR THE NAVAL OIL INQUIRY

Washington, Jan. 29.—President Coolidge tonight announced the selection of Silas H. Strawn of Chicago, republican, and Thomas W. Gregory of Austin, Texas, attorney-general in the Wilson administration, as special counsel to prosecute the government's case growing out of the naval oil inquiry.

Mr. Strawn is a former president of the Illinois Bar association and of the Chicago Bar association and is at present chairman of the committee on legal education of the American Bar association. He conferred late today with the president, who has known him for some them.

Mr. Gregory was attorney-general of the United States from August, 1914, to March, 1919. It was said at the White House that he would leave Austin for Washington tomorrow.

INSURGENT MINERS LEADING IN CONVENTION

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 29.—(By The A. P.)—Votes of 12 of the 27 districts tonight gave a lead of 53 votes to anti-administration forces in the United Mine Workers' convention, who are seeking to deprive International President John L. Lewis of the appointive power conferred on him by the miners' constitution. The total vote, after Illinois' vote had been taken was 1,523 to 1,475.

Delegates from Illinois, who include a majority of the insurgent forces in the convention, piled up a vote of 809 in favor of the change, and howled when their district officials, Secretary-Treasurer Walter Nesbit, and Vice-President Harry Fishwick, voted against it, with a small Illinois minority that totalled 86 in voting power.

According to leaders among President Lewis' adherents, the lead of 53 is not formidable and will be overcome in the rest of the roll call tomorrow when it is claimed the district organizations of Iowa, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Colorado, Wyoming, Missouri and Montana, will show an administration support that will swing the majority the other way with a final lead of between 200 and 300 voters.

In that event the report of the constitutional committee will be adopted. Their report recommended that section 5, article 9 of the constitution, which provides that the president "may appoint such organizers, field and office workers as may be necessary to conduct the affairs of the international union," be left unchanged.

NORTHWEST AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE NEXT MONDAY

Washington, Jan. 29—Invitations have been issued by President Coolidge to more than 80 representatives of interests affected by the agricultural situation in the northwest to meet in conference here next Monday to consider and advise on measures of relief.

Announcement was made at the white house today of those to whom invitations had been extended together with the statement that an effort had been made to "secure as far as possible, representatives of the farmers, of agricultural colleges, merchants, manufacturers, bankers, insurance, transportation, mortgage companies and chambers of commerce, including representatives of some national organizations of this character interested in this region."

The list of those invited, it was announced, is not yet complete because final replies have not been received from all the associations concerned in the problem which were asked to suggest committees.

Among nearly a hundred so far invited, one of the half-dozen easterners is R. B. Bissell, Hartford Insurance company, Hartford, Conn.

SURRENDERED FOR MILLION DOLLAR MAIL ROBBERY

Boston, Jan. 29—Bert H. Chapman, of this city surrendered to the federal authorities here today on an indictment returned by the federal grand jury in Los Angeles last October charging him and 22 others with conspiracy in connection with a million dollar mail truck robbery in the California city in March, 1921. Chapman's arrest revealed that $300,000 worth of bonds stolen from the mails at that time have been recovered here.

He entered a plea of not guilty and was held in $5,000 bail for a hearing. Warrants for the arrest of several others on the Los Angeles indictments are in the hands of the United States Marshal here, one of the men wanted is Charles Solomon, who is serving a five year term in Atlanta prison for subornation to perjury.

The stolen bonds were recovered by postal inspectors at the Old Colony Trust Company, the First National Bank and the Second National Bank. The banks had received them from brokerage firms with which they had been left as collateral for loans. According to officials the first of the bonds recovered here was passed in November 1921, eight months after the Los Angeles robbery.

WHY LENINE MEMORIAL WAS BARRED IN WILKES BARRE

Wilkes Barre, Pa., Jan. 29.—Mayor Hart, in reply to the protest of the American Civil Liberties Union against the breaking up of a Lenine memorial meeting here last Sunday, wired the union, that he will "not allow any meeting of anarchists or communists to be held in this city."

"I am in favor of the most enlarged liberties of free speech, but I shall not permit any one under the guise of free speech to promulgate anarchy and disrespect for the law."

"I shall not," the mayor added in his reply, "tolerate any organization holding meetings in this community that is opposed by the American Legion."

FRENCH DEPUTIES DEBATE TAXES AND ECONOMIES

Paris, Jan. 29.—(By the A. P.)—The debate on the government's demand for new taxes and economies amounting to six billion francs developed in the chamber of deputies this afternoon into a vigorous assault upon the Poincare cabinet. The socialists who have been prolonging the discussion by multiplying the side issues and drawing out their speeches took the offensive on the question of war damages and brought directaccusations of negligence against M. Reibel, minister of liberated regions.

Documents supporting the charges of swindling on a big scale in connection with war damages in the devastated region which were presented. Impressed the chamber and the deputies of the sub-committee on speculation in the liberated regions had declared that M. Reibel refused to collaborate with the committees.

The minister explained that there was only a difference of opinion as to competence between him and the committee while M. Verlot, chairman of the investigating committee, relieved the pressure by declaring that M. Reibel had always fully cooperated in searching out frauds.

Expert Reparation Committee in Berlin

German Non-Political Experts Anxious That the Investigation Be Rigorous.

Berlin, Jan. 29—(By the A. P.)—The first expert reparation committee under its American Chairman, Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes reached Berlin from Paris tonight. There was no official reception at the railway station when the delegates alighted from the regular express, and the committee immediately motored to their Hotel.

Germany's hopes of reaching a tolerable and final solution of her reparation problem center in the forthcoming discussion here of this committee and the second body of experts, from Paris shortly with Germany's official spokesman.

No program for the deliverations to be carried out in Berlin by Gen. Dawes' committee has been agreed upon. Although in official quarters it is assumed that further discussion of the projected bank of emission will constitute the first topic on its agenda.

Aside from expressing gratification over the impending assay of Germany's financial and economic assets by a body of non-political experts and stressing the wish that the forthcoming investigation be as comprehensive and rigorous as possible, official quarters refrain from venturing any prediction as to the ultimate results of the inspection about to be undertaken by the two expert committees.

Such German optimism as informally asserts itself seems largely prompted by faith in the impartial procedure and the authoritative qualifications of the personal of these commissions as was reflected in the preliminary discussions in Paris. Interest apparently centers in General Dawes, who already has become a picturesque figure in Germany on the strength of his pro-German plain spokenness and the unconventional manner in which he is conducting the deliveration.

In addition to Dr. Schacht, President of the Reichsbank the committee will immediately summon Dr. Luther, the Minister of finance, Dr. Hamm, the Minister of Economics and Dr. Eser the Minister of transportation.

END OF DE WOLFE HOPPER'S FIFTH MATRIMONIAL VENTURE

New York, Jan. 29—The fifth matrimonial venture of De Wolfe Hopper, musical comedy star, ended in failure today when Mrs. Elida A. Hopper, known on the stage as Hedda Hopper, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce and custody of her seven-year-old son, William, by supreme court Justice Van Siclen in Queen's county.

She was granted thirty per cent. of her former husband's weekly salary as alimony with the stipulation that the amount at no time be smaller than $50.

The divorce suit, started in February 1922, charged infidelity, specifying misconduct at Pelham, N. Y., at Boston and New York City.

De Wolfe Hopper, who is 64 years old, was married first to Ella Gardiner, his second cousin. She divorced him and he married Ida Mosher, of Boston, a member of a company in which he played a leading role.

His third wife was Edna Wallace, who appeared with him in many of his stage successes, and whom he married in 1896. The fourth was Nella Reardon Bergen, who divorced him in 1913 after living with him fourteen years.

BETTER MAIL SERVICE TO BE GIVEN NEWSPAPERS

Washington, Jan. 29.—As a result of several months of investigation and study by experts of the post office department, Postmaster General New today issued the first definite, concise and complete program that has ever been put out by the department for the mailing, transmission and delivery of newspapers.

This order is most important. It is far reaching. It gives the same expedition to newspapers as is accorded to first class mail.

The essence of the order is that newspapers shall not be mixed with parcels post at any point in their dispatch from the publishers' offices until their delivery to the addressees. Papers shall be handled by themselves, and kept in constant transit, not being sent to railway terminals to be reworked. In other words; they are to be handled in the same manner as first class mail.

An important feature of the order is that postmasters are required to notify publishers in each instance when they do not hit the dispatch which they advertise to hit; also to notify publishers when they are sending to wrong addresses and to the addresses of deceased persons. Publishers will also be notified when they are putting up their mail in an incorrect manner.

Under the new system, newspapers will be made up in separate sacks plainly labeled with the word "newspapers." If there are only a few copies of newspapers at the point of dispatch, they will be placed in pouches with first class mail or in separate sacks, even though the sacks are only partially filled.

COOLIDGE AT MEETING OF OHIO SOCIETY OF WASHINGTON

Washington, Jan. 29—President Coolidge, in attending tonight the annual meeting of the Ohio Society of Washington, fulfilled an obligation assumed by President Harding.

Prevented by unavoidable circumstances from attending the two previous meetings of his fellow buckeyes, Mr. Harding about a year ago definitely agreed to be present at tonight's meeting. The date was entered on the white house engagement book and President Coolidge accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge went to the meeting, held in memory of President McKinley, whose birthday anniversary was observed today.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 29.—Arraignment of 15 persons taken into custody last yesterday afternoon by federal dry agents on charges of violations of the federal prohibition laws, was begun today before United States Commissioner Crandall at the court house, and is still in progress. At least one other was arrested today.

Diplomatic Relations Resumed With Greece

Premier Veniselos of Greece Became Ill During Debate in the Assembly.

Athens, Jan. 29.—(By The A. P.)—The American government has announced resumption of diplomatic relations with Greece.

VENIZELOS BECAME ILL DURING HEATED DEBATE

Athens, Jan. 29.—(By The A. P.)—For the second time since his return to Greece, Premier Veniselos became ill today during a heated debate in the national assembly and was obliged to leave the chamber. He was taken to his home.

The physicians who attended the premier said he was suffering from a recurrence of his recent heart attack due to excitement while replying to the determined opposition of M. Papanastassios, the republican leader to the government's proposal to rescind the revolutionary decree suppressing the royalist newspapers. The uncomplimentary and menacing attitude of the republican leader, who at one time was a member of M. Veniselos' cabinet, angered the premier, who heatedly reminded Papanastassios that his uncompromising attitude endangered the peace.

A moment afterward Veniselos quit the chamber for the anteroom where he fainted.

Doctor Doxiades administered restoratives and ten minutes later Veniselos had sufficiently recovered to be driven home. There it was announced that his condition was not serious.

After the premier had departed the assembly by a vote of 208 against 59 adopted the government's proposal to rescind the revolutionary decree suppressing the royalist newspapers.

GREEK REPRESENTATIVE RECEIVED IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Jan. 29. — Diplomatic relations between the United States and Greece were resumed today when Secretary Hughes received M. Tsamados, Greek representative, in Washington, as charge d'affaires, and instructed Ray Atherton, who has been unofficially in charge of American affairs at Athens to act as charge d'affaires ad interim to the Greek government.

It is expected that the accrediting of a minister await decision by Greece of the constitutional question under consideration in Athens.

Relations were severed in 1920 after the death of King Alexander and the return to Athens of Constantine. The regime which followed the latter was regarded as frankly based upon military power with its position unconfirmed by elections. Recent elections now, however, have resulted in the establishment of a government in such a way as to enable the United States to extend formal recognition, although the question of whether a republican or monarchial form of government shall be established is yet to be decided at Athens.

EXTRA DIVIDEND ON U. S. STEEL COMMON

New York, Jan. 29—Directors of the United States Steel Corporation today declared an extra dividend of fifty cents a share on the common stock amounting to $3,541,512 in addition to the regular quarterly dividends of 1 3-4 per cent on the common and 1 3-4 per cent. on the preferred which jointly total $12,668,702. Last quarter an extra dividend of 25 cents was declared on the common.

Total earnings of the corporation fo rthe last quarter of 1923 after deducting all operating expenses, estimated taxes and interest on bonds of subsidiary companies were $49,955,980 an increase of $3,905,300 over the preceding quarter. This exceeded all previous estimates. Most of which predicted a slight decrease below the third quarte rof 1923.

Considering the amount of net earnings for the last quarter. The present volume of business and unfilled orders on hand. E. H. Gary, chairman of the corporation, said full justice to the stock holders required an extra dividend on the common stock of 1-2 to 1 per cent.

WOOD'S STATEMENT OF THE PHILIPPINE FUND

Manila, Jan. 29—(By the A. P.)—Governor-General Leonard Wood today reiterated the denial he made last May that he had any information to the effect that senators on congressmen had received money from the Philippine independence fund. The occasion was the receipt here of the full text of the resolution offered in congress by Representative Frear for the investigation of Governor Wood's administration and the establishment of the truth or falsity of assertions that information in the hands of the governor-general disclosed such payments had been made.

"I have at no time made any statement that members of congress received money from the Philippine independence funds for espousing the cause of independence," said Governor Wood's statement, in part "I welcome the fullest and most searching investigation of all my acts since I came to the Philippines."

ESCAPED FROM PATROLMAN WHILE WEARING HANDCUFFS

Boston, Jan. 29—Boston police were searching tonight for Richard Obientes who escaped from his Marlboro patrolman guard at the south station here today despite the fact that he was wearing handcuffs. Obientes has been charged with assault on a Marlboro girl and was being taken to the East Cambridge jail to await action by the grand jury when he made his getaway. The fugitive is said to be 19 years old, about five feet, three inches in height and weighed about 140 pounds.

DESTROYING CONFISCATED LIQUORS IN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 29.—The practice of shipping confiscated liquors to Boston for redistillation or destruction was abandoned today when state police officers sent from Boston poured 300 gallons of assorted liquors, the accumulation of six months of vice squad activities, into the sewer at police headquarters. The poor quality of most of the liquor and its consequent small value as a factor in the disposition.

Scores of persons have been frozen to death in the exceptional cold wave that prevails throughout Greece.

ANDERSON FOUND GUILTY OF FORGERY ON BOTH COUNTS

State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York Convicted by Jury of Third Degree Forgery—Jury Was Out an Hour and 40 Minutes—To Be Sentenced Friday, Feb. 8—Penalty For the Crime is From Two to Five Years in Prison—Bail of $5,000 Continued—It is Understood an Appeal Will Be Taken.

New York, Jan. 29—William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the anti-saloon league of New York tonight was convicted by a supreme court jury on both counts of an indictment charging him with third degree forgery in connection with the "splitting" of commissions with a former league fund solicitor.

The jury, after deliberating one hour and 40 minutes, returned to the court room at 9:18 o'clock when David Alexander, the foreman, in answer to Justice Tompkins' question, announced the jury had found Anderson guilty as charged in the indictment.

Justice Tompkins announced Anderson would be sentenced Friday, February 8. Bail of $5,000 in which he has been at liberty since the indictment was returned, was continued. It was understood an appeal would be taken.

The "dry" leader may be sentenced to a prison term of from two and one half to five years for conviction under the third degree forgery charge.

The verdict was not learned immediately by the expectant crowd that leaned forward in strained silence to catch the jury foreman's words. His voice was so low that it was not heard until the court clerk had made them known by the nature of his questions.

"What is your verdict, gentlemen?" the clerk asked.

The answer was not audible beyond the railing separating the bench, jury, and attorneys from the audience but Anderson interpreted the words that spelled defeat for his long fight. For his eyes closed, for one brief flash, he gasped audibly, and no more. But the crowd's eye swerve on the jury foreman and they did not see Anderson.

"Do you find the defendant guilty as charged in the indictment?" the clerk asked.

Again the answer was inaudible, but the whole room new knew. From the nature of the question that the "dry" crusader had been declared guilty on both counts of the indictment.

No Demonstration

There was no demonstration, for the court, before the jury had filed into the box with its verdict, solemnly warned that any demonstration would meet with instant punishment for contempt.

The jury discharged there was a departure from the usual procedure. Anderson was not required to answer the question usually put to convicted men as to their age, occupation and various other items concerning themselves. The brief scene ended with the excited crowd surging through the doors.

Anderson was the last to leave. He walked rathed dejectedly between two of his lawyers and was last seen with them emerging from the shadows cast by the grim bridge of sighs that spans the street separating the court building from the Tombs.

It could not be learned tonight whether or not Anderson would be tried on the four indictments still pending against him, charging grand larceny and extortion. These indictments was based on the "split" commission episode and on Anderson's collection from the league payments on the $24,700 which he claims to have advanced the organization for publicity purposes in 1913-14.

When the jury filed out of the court room Justice Tompkins declared a dinner recess until 8 o'clock.

Contrary to usual procedure, Anderson was not placed in the custody of the sheriff when the case was given to the jury, and he was permitted to leave the criminal courts building for dinner. The defendant has been at liberty on $5,000 bail ever since his arrest following his indictment last July.

There were two counts against Anderson in the forgery indictment Justice Tompkins told the jury in his charge. To convict on the first count, he said, it was essential that an intent to defraud be shown, although it was not necessary to show the intent was against any particular person or institution. He also declared that, under the first count, it was unimportant whether or not the fraud had been consummated.

The second count, the court said, could provide a conviction only if the falsification of an account was found to be intentional, "provided that the false entry may be used to the prejudice of the rights of the corporation or the owner of the account books."

Bitter Denunciation of Anderson.

Assistant District Attorney Pecora took three hours to sum up the testimony, devoting the last half hour to a bitter denunciation of Anderson and several of the defense witnesses. Just before he concluded Anderson, seated behind his lawyers, was seen to wipe his eyes from which tears were brimming. The court room, crowded as never before since the trial started Monday of last week, was as quiet as though it were empty as the diminutive prosecutor thundered his denunciations or in a strangely contrasting mild tone, launched his sarcasms in his comment on the testimony as he considered it to affect the case of the defendant.

Pecora grew sarcastic in his reference to "John T. King," vanished stranger who, Anderson had testified, made him a gift of $25,000, and "Henry Mann," the equally mysterious New York publicity man that the league head had declared had done publicity work for the organization and to whom he paid $24,700 of the sum given him by "King." To the alleged donor of the small fortune he referred as "This king of men," "this prince," "this man of royal ermine."

"Gentlemen," he told the jurymen, "this astounding testimony of the defendant's has created in me a belief in miracles. It also has convinced me that there is a Santa Claus—a Santa Claus, who comes not by way of chimneys, but who meets the favored ones in hotel lobbies and hands them $3,000 at the dinner table."

Near the close of his summation he intimated that the federal government might yet take steps on the income tax phase of the case.

Summation For Defense.

In his summation, given with the start of the day's hearing, Former Governor Whitman contended that the federal government had not been defrauded of income tax returns, as the money admittedly taken by Anderson from Phillips was credited by defendant to the league's $34,700 debt to him. As to the entries claimed by the prosecution to have been falsifications with intent to deceive and defraud, Whitman said they undoubtedly represented "poor bookkeeping but it is a far cry from poor bookkeeping to forgery."

Whitman dealt with the case of the mysterious "King," declaring that Anderson at that time was about to come to New York from Baltimore to fight "one of the most powerful, resourceful and vicious" organizations in the country, and that it was not at all improbable that some sincere adherent of the "dry" cause, with very good reasons to remain anonymous, might donate such a sum.

"The liquor organizations," he said, "was firmly entrenched and ready to use every weapon to insure its continued existence. Here was Mr. Anderson about to attack them—a man known for his belligerence, his pugnacity and a certain recklessness, and in some ways, a rather disagreeable fighter. Would not some sympathizer in Anderson's cause be likely to take this means of assisting him in his forthcoming fight?"

The former governor also dealt with "Henry Mann," declaring that the prosecution had failed to dispose of the publicity man.

Anderson's direction to change the book entries, he maintained, had been done as an accommodation to Phillips, who had complained that he would not pay income tax on the $4,400 which had gone to Anderson from his commissions. He contended that the testimony of experts proved conclusively that the entries had no bookkeeping significance and that the books today stood exactly as they did before the disputed entries were made.

WILLIMANTIC

Some of Willimantic's horsemen were interested in an account which appeared several days ago in the Putnam news of the Norwich Bulletin in regard to an agitation in Putnam for building a racing track and providing the adequate place for fair grounds. Considerable talk has been heard of late by a number of enthusiasts who are ready to invest sums of money to lay out a track in this city. Willimantic formerly had a race track on the old fair grounds, now known as Recreation Park and considered by the American Trotting Co. this is a fine railroad center and autos and cars crowded to this city every days from every corner of the state. For several years the Fair association retained large purses, as did also the merchants about town whose sales increased immensely on the days of contention.

An excellent location for a race track has already been found on land owned by Merrill H. Jones in the district known as the Windham Pinfield. Besides other holdings in this section Mr. Jones owns a 16 acre lot of land which is perfectly level and would allow ample room for constructing a half mile race track. Mr. Jones is a sponsor of the movement and he pointed out that the building of a track on the land would incur but a small expense. It would not be necessary to fill in, as the land is level and two or three men with a tractor could do the work in a short time. In one corner of the lot is a large barn owned by Mr. Jones. The building is in good condition and is 30 by 30 feet, following plenty of room for twenty or more stalls. Penning about the track would only be necessary on one side, where the lot runs parallel to the road. Mr. Jones' property is on the road which leads from Windham Road at a point opposite the entrance to the Camp Ground to Windham Center. The road is in fair condition and the hard and gravel roads would be about a mile and one quarter from the trolley car line, a mile over two miles from the center of the city. Horse racing is rapidly coming back to its own. This was proven the past two seasons by the crowds attracted to Recreation Park when matinee races were run off there. The horsemen plan to take advantage of the ideal location which they have selected and plans are to be drawn up to organize as a corporation and put the project over the top.

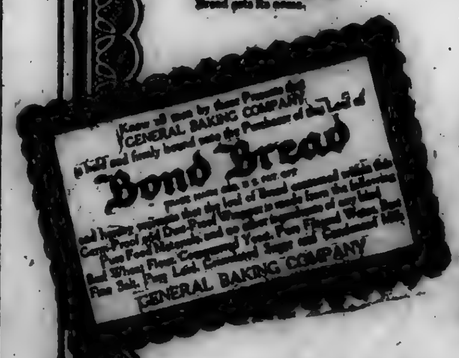
New Orleans and NORWICH both believe in Bond Bread

THE North and the South have never agreed more thoroughly than in hailing Bond Bread as the loaf that the housewives have always wanted.

In New Orleans—famed for its hospitality and its Mardi Gras—a hostess now shows honor to a guest by serving Bond Bread. "Mammy's" old-fashioned hot biscuit, and the creole chef's long loaf of "French" bread have both given way to the better healthfulness of Bond Bread. The New Orleans mothers realize that Bond Bread represents the combined skill of the 43,040 housewives who showed us how to make it.

The hostesses hereabouts also come of a long line of famous cooks. They quickly "discovered" this loaf whose flavor resembles the best of home-made bread. And these same women have looked beyond Bond Bread's matchless flavor. They have "discovered" the Bond on every wrapper which guarantees the pure ingredients used in Bond Bread. They know that this Bond spells health for them and their children.



THIS BOND, printed on each wrapper, guarantees such ingredients and identifies the loaf as the product of the General Baking Company. From this source and all that it implies, Bond Bread gets its name.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Danielson likely will experience a little building boom as soon as spring opens. A number of projects now under consideration call for construction work, one of these being industrially important. There is also a prospect, it was stated Tuesday that a number of new dwellings will be put on during 1924. Danielson continues to be short of homes. While construction costs are high, some who have held out for years waiting for lower prices have about decided that no material recession from present cost levels is in sight, so will go ahead with their building plans. Various remodeling operations also are getting consideration as well as the building of various structures of minor importance.

The Casino amusement arena is nearing completion. This venture is of a kind wholly new to this section of the state. A boxing exhibition probably will be the first attraction, some time in February. Roller skating will be another diversion not available here for years. Dancing also is one of the possibilities for the new arena, which will have seating capacity for upwards of 1100 persons.

Almost nation-wide publicity has been given the peculiar performance of Everett Harrington in connection with his plan to kill Edward Pinkham of East Killingly a few weeks ago. A recent Sunday edition of a Boston paper featured the story to the extent of an illustrated page. Press dispatches that carried early news of the happening to all parts of the country have since been elaborated upon to make hair-raising reading for impressionable people. All unaware of much of this, Harrington is again at the Norwich State hospital, still under the impression that he is Frank Weeden, the Rhode Island madman who escaped last summer and disappeared mysteriously.

Tuesday morning the funeral of Peter Renaud was held from his home on the West Side with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Joseph Beachaud, M. S., was celebrant of the high mass of requiem, attended by relatives and numbers of friends. The body was entombed at Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were John Renaud, Leon Renaud, Edmund Renaud, Romain Renaud, Peter Beaudreault and Peter Beaudreault. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Weather records dating back more than a century quoted in this column a few days ago, make it appear that a January like the present one occurred in 1810—was almost identical, in fact. This same set of weather records says that February of that year opened with a cold week, the temperature dropping to about 12 degrees. The second week was milder and during the third week the temperature ran up to 80 and there were thunder storms. Observers will note whether this will be duplicated the coming month, and go to satisfy the minds of some that the weather is in cycles of centuries.

News was received here Tuesday of the death at Burlington, Vt., of Mrs. Exima Tetreault, mother of Mrs. Howard M. Withey of Furnace street, and formerly a resident of Danielson.

Effort to get an exact balance and accounting of tax collections during the past few years in the town of Killingly is continuing. A few additional errors have been discovered within the past two or three weeks, those representing tax assessments showing on the records as unpaid, but for which those assessed hold receipts. The total involved was stated Tuesday to be about $248. An effort is now being made to clear the record of all uncollected taxes amounting to thousands of dollars and of which nearly $6,000 has been collected during the past few weeks.

Danielson, no less than other towns along the line, is interested in the fact that the N. Y., N. H. and H. Railroad company is preparing to lay new and heavier rails along the route running through Danielson. Rails ready to be put in place in the spring are strung along beside the present track practically all the way from Danielson to Putnam.

Those who are planning social events and are looking ahead on the calendar to note the beginning of Lent find that Ash Wednesday comes late this year—March 5—and that the entire month of February is available for diversions.

Mothers You Can Prevent Children From Taking Cold

Next Time They Come in Wet and "Sniffling" Rub This Vapor Salve over Throat and Chest.

When children come in from play with feet wet, noses blue and hands like lumps of ice, you feel sure that they are "in for a cold."

But the next time try Vicks. At bedtime rub this vaporizing salve well in over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth.

The body heat releases the ingredients—Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Juniper Tar, etc.—in the form of vapors, and these vapors go directly to the air passages, stimulating the mucous membrane to repel germ attacks.

At the same time Vicks increases the circulation of the blood thruout the chest region, thus helping to prevent any congestion developing.

If applied in time, Vicks will prevent many colds from getting a start and its use doesn't disturb the child's digestion as constant internal dosing is so apt to do.

PUTNAM

At the annual meeting Tuesday of the stockholders of the L. A. W. Acceptance corporation, with headquarters in this city, reports covering 1923 were presented and showed that the year recently closed was very successful and that large earnings accrued to the concern, which paid dividends at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum on the preferred stock and $1 a share on the common stock, which has no par value.

At the stockholders' meeting the following directors were elected: Louis A. Wolfe, Putnam; Maurice Freidman, Norwich; Simon Kaminsky, Putnam; L. M. Carpenter, Jewett City; George Greenberger, Norwich; Philip Coderre, North Grosvenordale; John F. Carpenter, Putnam; Dr. Elijah Burdsell, Norwich; Raymond J. Jodoin, Baltic; Walter E. Sayles, Elmville; John F. Lewis, Danielson; H. B. Chapman, Plainfield; J. C. Worth, Norwich.

At a meeting of the directors the following officers were elected: President, L. A. Wolfe; first vice president, John F. Carpenter; second vice president, George Greenberger; treasurer, L. M. Carpenter; assistant treasurer, Simon Kaminsky; secretary, Thomas J. Howarth; assistant secretary, Maurice Freidman.

The L. A. W. Acceptance corporation has been largely engaged since its organization about two years ago, in financing buyers of automobiles, and has found a profitable field for its activities.

There was special interest here and in neighboring towns, Tuesday, over the announcement that The Independent, edited for 39 years by Hamilton Holt, noted publicist who spends a large part of each year at Sunset Hill in Woodstock, has been placed in the hands of a receiver through an involuntary petition in bankruptcy filed in the United States District Court against the National Weekly Corporation of New York. Liabilities are estimated at $230,000 and assets at $58,000.

Attorneys for the company consented to the receivership and announced the action was the first step toward perfecting plans for reorganization.

Judge Winslow appointed E. Bright Wilson receiver, under bonds of $10,000 and authorized him to continue publication of the magazine. The claims against the publication are largely for serves or money advanced.

Mr. Holt has not been editor of The Independent for several years.

Liquids taken out of the possession of drunks arrested recently by Putnam police indicate that some of the hard-boiled boozers have taken to drinking ultra-poisonous alcohol—wood and denatured. It is not recorded that it has killed any of them—yet, but that is not an invitation for some other reckless person to trifle with death by indulging in the stuff.

Officer Alpherie Sponcey told Tuesday morning of seeing a man drain the dregs from a barrel of denatured alcohol into a cup and then drink greedily of what he obtained. The users of these alcohols describe them as "smoke" and let it be known that as a rule they cut them down with milk. Rubbing alcohols also recently have been used as beverages by drunks who have fallen into the hands of the Putnam police. Such drinkers are absolutely reckless of their fate. They are not of the class that confine themselves to moonshine, available in a hundred varieties—all bad—nor the class if drinkers that assumes no greater risk than is faced in drinking hard cider, made by the thousands of gallons in this territory during the past fall.

Along the line of the Norwich branch of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. south of this city toward Danielson new rails have been distributed with a view to replacing, in the spring, the present main track with heavier iron. The new rails weigh 90 pounds to the yard, whereas the rails in present use on the line weight but 72 pounds to the yard.

Replacing of the present main line rails with the new and heavy ones will be the largest and most important undertaking the New Haven has arranged for the line effected for a long term of years. This line, running from New London to Worcester and including the old Norwich and Worcester road carries an exceptionally heavy amount of traffic, principally freight, for a single track line and in the past score years the size of locomotives and cars and loads carried has greatly increased.

Information was not available here Tuesday as to how many miles of new rails are to be put in, but one story was to the effect that the entire distance to New London may be taken care of, though this was not verified. Distribution of the rails now covers a number of miles, however, indicating that the work to be done will be of an extensive nature. The improvement to be made will represent the expenditure of many thousands of dollars.

Mrs. Philomene Couillard, 84, native of St. Denis, P. Q., is dead at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Gomeau, on Van der Noort street. Mrs. Couillard had been a resident of Putnam for many years. In addition to Mrs. Gomeau, Mrs. Couillard leaves three other daughters.

Mrs. Julia Crowther, 68, sister of Frank Hopkins, died at the Hopkins home on the River road, Tuesday morning after an illness of considerable duration.

Another death Tuesday morning was that of Kate Mack, 63, who has been at the town farm. She was born in Ireland, but had lived the greater part of her live in this country.

John Dinsdale, year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dinsdale, is dead at their home here. The child was born in Scituate, R. I., where its parents made their home before coming to Putnam to live a few months ago.

Mrs. Edgar M. Warner, chairman of the Putnam town school committee, will be one of the speakers February 7 at the meeting of the Connecticut Association of School Superintendents, in New Haven. Supt. F. C. Jenkins of Putnam's schools is a member of the committee on resolutions for the meeting.

Ice 15 inches thick was being cut at Prentice's pond, where some of the city's annual supply has been taken for many years. Making the most of their first opportunity of the winter, icemen all through this territory were cutting Tuesday, when the temperature was running up and promising another period of warm weather.

As was suggested in this column Tuesday, there were those who improved the day to go fishing through the ice at Alexander's lake. These fishermen found the ice sufficiently heavy to allow of setting tilts. A considerable number of fish were reported taken. Tomorrow (Thursday) will the the last chance to fish the lake this winter as the ice fishing season on lake and ponds closes Friday.

Unemployment is more general in this city this winter than at any period in the last decade. Fortunately, however, the season has ben so open as to permit of a large amount of out door work being undertaken that ordinarily would have to wait until spring. This work has furnished something to do for numbers of men and the revenue obtained has been very pleasing.

Seeking to check the congregation of those who rather incline to a convivial time, the police issued a warning that a certain hall should be open only a certain number of nights each week. The alternative to accepting the decree was to be raided.

What We Forget Between 15 and 50

Schools teach, and nearly every home applies the rule against coffee and tea for children.

When middle age comes, a great many people remember the facts about the caffeine drug of coffee and tea, and how its regular use may disturb health. Often they have cause to remember what it has done to them.

How much better it would be not to forget—and avoid the penalties!

Postum is a pure cereal beverage—delightful, and safe for any age—at any time. Good for breakfast at home, for all the family; good for lunch at the club or restaurant; good with the evening meal; good with a late night dinner—good on any occasion. Postum satisfies, and it never harms.

Why not be friendly with health; all the time?

Postum
for Health

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

THE RADIO MONOPOLY.

In line with its duties the federal trade commission has called attention to the fact that a monopoly exists regarding radio service and supplies. Perhaps this has been surmised by the radio enthusiasts and perhaps it has not. Radio hasn't been with us so long as some other things about which the people have had a chance to become familiar. But since it was demonstrated and the service and supplies have been made available the demands have multiplied rapidly. Radio enthusiasts and radio sets are numerous and it is only a question of time before they will be much more so.

Whether it is going to be permanent, or simply a fad, remains to be demonstrated, though there is no indication at the present time that it is passing.

It is conceivable, of course, that even though there is a monopoly it may not be operated to the detriment of the public. Possibly through the facilities possessed and the results obtained those in control can serve the public more satisfactorily, and at a lower cost, than could others who must enter into competition with established business and be obliged to put forth inferior goods in order to get a foothold. If the situation that has been brought to attention by the federal trade commission means better service and better goods, the detrimental features of a monopoly may be lacking. If that is so, it is highly important that it should be kept that way and not be allowed to backslide.

Regulations in regard to radio must be expected. It cannot be expected to escape what is required of other organizations that are engaged in furnishing service to the public. The aim must be to see that the public is not imposed upon, and it is of course as much to the interest of the companies furnishing service and supplies that this should be assured as it is to the great army of radio users and fans. Radio must go through the same experiences that other monopolies have, but there is no reason why those directly concerned so go about it blindly.

EXPERIMENTS BY REFORMERS.

There are those reformers who have done much to provide a gleam of hope for those who have gotten into the criminal class. They have stood ready to lend a helping hand, and have not only been ready but have actually extended it. There are instances where it has been the very thing needed, but there are others which demonstrate lack of appreciation, the evident absence of a desire to live straight, and in view of such cases it is a question just how far such reformers should go in their efforts in view of the fact that certain tests that they make are actually a menace to public safety.

Perhaps there is no reformer that is better known that Thomas Mott Osborne. He has been called to important posts, and it is well known that he has strong convictions along his particular line. He has seen the good results of his ideas and he has seen them fail. He has been imposed upon and he has seen those who have used him simply as a vehicle to escape deserved punishment. In spite of all his experience his judgment is not infallible in the selection of those who are deserving of special favors in order to start them on the road to good citizenship.

The latest instance where advantage has been taken of his kindness is that of a young criminal who was impressed by Mr. Osborne's words when speaking in a western city, gave himself up and returned to the Massachusetts prison from which he had escaped. That was followed by Mr. Osborne's effort for his release under the promise that he would give him employment. His effort was successful and the young man was brought into close touch with the reformer only to result, in less than a month, in his arrest for attempting to rob with a pistol and knife.

The criminal instinct in the young man is apparently such that kindness and a square deal make no impression thereon. It is one of those instances which make the public feel that it is really entitled to protection against such individuals instead of being made a target for the misdeeds of those who take advantage of the leniency to practice their old tricks with the public as the target.

THE FIUME SETTLEMENT.

Fiume has for some time been a sore spot in the Adriatic. Italy wanted it because it was largely Italian in population. Had the war left Fiume the property of Austria there is no question but what the port would have been awarded to Italy as one of the prizes of the victory. Fiume instead of being Austrian was the outlet for Jugoslavia when the peace terms were fixed. That meant that it was the territory of an ally, from whom Italy could hardly expect to take it without trouble and resentment that would have kindled a bad neighborhood quarrel.

D'Annunzio, however, buckled on the sword and seized the city, but it was given up and became a free port. Even that didn't satisfy the Italian aspirations and there were plenty who advocated the seizure of the port as Italian property only to have Jugoslavia protest and an effort was made to come to an understanding regarding the city. The effort failed because the decision was not accepted, and when there seemed to be a good chance for an open clash further efforts at peacemaking were undertaken.

Now, if we can judge correctly from the reports, a settlement has been reached and Italy accomplishes its purpose. Fiume is henceforth to be Italian, but the important objection of Jugoslavia to the elimination of its chief outlet for commerce is met by giving it the port facilities to the south, which will not make it necessary to cross Italian territory to carry on its trade on the high seas.

It has required several years, plenty of threats and no little diplomacy to bring about the present adjustment. Italy is of course satisfied, and if Jugoslavia considers that it is not denied what it is justly entitled to the result should be a happy one for that region. Possibly it realizes that it is the best that could be done, and under the circumstances must be satisfied, whether it feels that way or not. Inasmuch as Fiume is largely Italian there's no question but what it regards the change with favor. If the sore spot is healed it is well for all.

FIGHTING DRUG EVIL.

Approval cannot be properly withheld from whatever efforts are put forth for the suppression of the great and growing drug evil. It is a cause that is entitled to receive all the help that can be obtained. The protection of humanity against dope in its various forms is something to be greatly desired. With one organization or one country waging the fight to prevent the demoralization of humanity the progress is certain to be slow. The chances are that it will not be sufficient to counteract the efforts of those who are profiting from such traffic, but with many organizations lined up in a common cause and many countries insisting upon restrictions in the production of such habit-forming drugs some headway can be expected.

For that reason much good is anticipated from the conferences which are to be held this year following the recommendation of The Hague convention, and at the invitation of the league of nations. These conferences will include in one instance, those nations which are much concerned with the production of opium and having far east possessions, and in the other instance nearly all the nations.

There will be the nations which will object to the wrecking of their business in this drug, quite the same as if they were those who peddle the stuff to make humanity miserable and care not what wreckage is caused so long as they get their dollars, and there will be those who take the larger view of contributing to human welfare. Considering the frightful effects of the drug habit the wisdom of restricting production to scientific and medicinal requirements should make a strong appeal. The world needs the benefit of concerted, worldwide action against the drug evil.

WHERE CARE IS ALWAYS NEEDED.

The explosion at Manville, R. I., which caused the death of 15 persons serves to place new emphasis upon the care that should be exercised in connection with the use of gas jets, gas stoves or other appliances where gas is employed.

"Don't blow out the gas" is old advice, but it is just as applicable as it was the day it was first put forth. With less gas being used for lighting purposes much more is being used for cooking and heating purposes, so that gas consumption is steadily increasing, which means that the need of exercising care wherever it is employed is still applicable. Too often are there instances of people looking for a leak with a lighted match, of accidentally kicking loose a pipe connected with a gas stove, of failing to completely shut off a gas stove, or of neglecting to shut off the gas after something has boiled over and put out the flame.

In Manville it was an explosion that caused so many deaths, but there is always the danger of asphyxiation from leaky pipes or valves, and this is particularly true of those fixtures where the shutoff works so easily that the mere touching of it permits the gas to flow even though there had been no intention of turning it on and no effort made to light it.

Long is the list of those who have lost their lives because of the failure to appreciate the danger of gas and leaky or loose fixtures. Such a list was by no means unavoidable. In too many instances carelessness and negligence were responsible. There is no dodging the value of gas in the household, but there can be no such thing as too much care in connection with the use of it.

FROM LUCILLES DIARY

At the first meeting of the Dix Amies after the invitations to the Greenly-Preston wedding had come out, the girls were all talking about how difficult it would be to get to Glencoe by 8:30 in the evening, at which time the ceremony was to be performed. Ursula Moore said it was perfectly simple for those who were married and whose husbands would drive them out in their own cars.

"But it's quite a problem for us unattached members of the club," she said, laughing, "and none of us could bear to miss seeing our beloved Catharine married."

"Even some of us who have husbands and cars are in a quandary," remarked Louise Fuller. "Canby will be out of town that evening, and so will your Jimmy, won't he?" She turned to Adelaide Hayslette, who nodded her head affirmatively.

"Girls," I cried, "let's hire one of those big busses and all go out together. It will be a lark. What do you say?"

"It sounds delightful," said Polly Gray, "but do you know anything about the service, Lucile?"

"I've heard how pleasant and convenient those busses are, and I'll appoint myself a committee of one to find out all the details and submit the plan to you, if it is your pleasure?"

"It certainly is," they nearly all exclaimed at once, and I felt a glow of happiness in being able to do the dear old Dix Amies this favor.

I found that arrangements could be made nicely. So I reported to the club, and I was instructed to order the bus. I decided not to do so at once, as I thought it was wiser not to have the order in too long in advance.

The week of the wedding Dexter Haines was calling at our house one evening, and he asked me to drive out to Glencoe with him. I was greatly surprised, for I did not know that he was invited to the wedding.

"Yes, indeed, Burling Preston and I are old shipmates," he said. "We were in the navy together during the war. Of course you must go to the wedding with me, Lucile. I should have asked you before, but I wasn't sure I should be in town."

It flashed across my mind that there was really no reason for me to go in the bus with the Dix Amies, so I gratefully accepted Dexter's invitation.

We had a most delightful drive out to Glencoe, and were among the first in the church. I was glad of that as I do like to have a good seat at a wedding. The Amies party did not come in until the very last minute before the ceremony. Indeed, I am sure that there entrance delayed it for a moment, as the organist had already begun the "Lohengrin" when they came bustling in.

"Why were you so late?" I asked Louise at the reception at the bride's home. "You girls should have timed your coming better. It was frightfully awkward."

"You, Lucile, should be the last one to comment on that," Louise always exercises what she considers the privilege of an old friend when she desires to criticise me, and says anything she wishes. "You just about balled up the whole arrangement."

"What do you mean—balled up? I detest slang."

"Well I detest having any one fall down on anything the way you did about the bus. When you so suddenly turned the matter over to Polly Gray why didn't you telephone her instead of writing? Then you would have discovered that she was out of the city. She came home this afternoon, and found you letters, and it was only by a fluke that she could secure the bus at this late date. And you didn't send any schedule of the places to call, and she spent a frantic two hours phoning the girls. As it was, we almost lost Ursula Moore, for she went down to your house, as you had asked her to do, to start from there, and you were gone, and she didn't know what to do. Fortunately she reached me by phone before the bus called at our home. The girls are all furious at you."

That was all the appreciation I received for thinking of the bus for the Dix Amies. I suppose the fact is they were all jealous because Dexter took me out in his beautiful car. —Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The National Union of Railway Men of England, the organization which ordered a general strike of railway employes at the critical moment when Labor was about to take the helm of government, has as its president, James Henry Thomas, one of the leading men in the British labor world and one who is believed destined for high office in any government formed by the Labor party. Like Lloyd George, Mr. Thomas is a Welshman. He became president of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants in 1910 and in the same year was elected to the House of Commons. During the war he was a staunch supporter of the Allied cause, and threw all his energy into the work of carrying on the conflict to the end.

Stories That Recall Others

Obedient Yearling.

They came across him under the shower in the gym, and one of his friends sung out: "What in thunder are you doing under that cold shower?"

The young fellow's chattering reply was: "Just got a letter from the sophomores of my extension university telling me to haze myself. I've only got about 15 more minutes to stick."

Perfectly Innocent

She is the meekest little school teacher imaginable, but very much inclined to forgetfulness. The other day her mother asked her to bring home a raisin cake. "Remember, raisin," her mother warned her. The last time I told you to bring home a cake you brought cocoanut, and your father doesn't like cocoanut. Remember raisin."

So every once in a while she would think to herself during the teachers' meeting after school, "Raisin-raisin."

Suddenly the superintendent who was showing an ideal method of adding looked at the little teacher and said, "Now what do we add?"

Her meek little answer was "Raisins" which was not correct but it created a hearty laugh.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Cost of Electric Current

Mr. Editor: I am sure that the people of Norwich are anxious for information concerning the gas and electric plant

This plant has been the bone of contention for some time, and if it is really true that electric current (as authoritatively reported) can be purchased by the city at wholesale for one third of the present manufacturing cost, is it not madness, and folly, and the height of irresponsible business management, to continue the manufacture of electric energy at three times the cost it can be purchased for?

Petty politics frequently play an important part in municipal enterprises of this kind, and if this holds true of Norwich, the sooner remedial measures are taken, the better satisfied will be the public in general, and the consumers thereof.

JOHN R. BOWMAN, Jr.
Norwich, January 29, 1924.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

AFGHANISTAN

"Afghanistan, which recently reported that it was bringing in German professors to do instructional work in the technical departments of the Amir's government, has not a single mile of railroad, and all the mail to the large cities or outlying districts must proceed by camel-back or runners along one of the ancient trade routes," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society of Washington, D. C.

"But even on the ancient roads motorcycles and automobiles are beginning to take the place of the swift Arab steeds which traveled the mountain passes, and Aghans or 'men of the hills' are beginning to smack their lips over prospects of visiting Vienna, Paris, London, or New York.

"For the first time in the history of the country, recent reports declare that the printing press has put in its appearance and that periodicals are actually daring to show their faces. A school for women has been opened at Kabul, and two years ago slavery was abolished.

"Geography played the major role in isolating the Afghan kingdom from the outside world, and patriotic and religious fanaticism have been strong supports in the east. Without exaggeration, the entire country may be said to lie within sight of the everlasting hills. From the Oxus, which time out of mind was the boundary between the great monarchies of southwestern Asia and the nomads of the central Asian steppes, it runs to the deserts of Baluchistan, which shut it off from the sea. From the Persian frontier on the west it extends through outlying spurs to the foot of the very Himalayas themselves.

"And those rugged and unprofitable heights have produced men who fear neither God nor man. The Afridis, who live in the vicinity of the great Khyber and Kohat Passes between their native country and India are powerful, independent, treacherous ferocious. They hide in the seams of the hills and pick off with their trusty muskets travelers on the roads below.

"Though the Amir is now one of the few absolute monarchs of the earth his tribesmen know no law but force. An Afghan chief may promise a stranger safe conduct through his territory and he will stick to his word, but in the meantime he has probably entered into an agreement with a neighboring chief for kidnapping the visitor as soon as he has entered the next territory. Though the 'keep out' sign is not visibly posted, its frigid inhospitality pervades the atmosphere.

"Vengeance among the Afghans is usually swift and punishment severe. Thieves are often hung, not mercifully by a rope, but in cages suspended from tall poles where they are left to die of hunger. These man-cages often greet one along the lonely mountain passes.

"Some of this wild land is exceedingly beautiful, resembling the famous Vale of Kashmir, the land of Lalla Rookh. Areas around the headwaters of the Kabul River, the most important river in the kingdom, have never been explored by Europeans since the days when Alexander made his way to India.

"One of the most interesting sights in Kabul, the capital and largest city (population 150,000) is its covered bazaar, or street of shops, similar to the Street called Straight in Damascus. In its mazes, struggling, burdened, sweating masses of humanity, donkeys, camels, beggars and dogs meet and mingle amid the purest odors of foods and the welter of misday. Only occasionally does the crowd part—when some important personage dashes through at a swift pace, the approved method of showing his distinction.

"If one can stand the fetid atmosphere of the bazaar and not mind seeing a poor creature drop in the streets with cholera convulsions occasionally, he can acquire anything from a Kashmir shawl or an ivory-handled dagger to a copper coin of the time of Alexander the Great or unwashed grapes, cantaloupes, and pomegranates.

"Practically every town in the country has its bazaar just as every American small town has its general store, but in Herat the attractiveness of the bazaar is enhanced by being centered about the public execution grounds, and it is nothing to see some poor wretch hanging stark and stiff over a bread or meat stall."

POETRY

Tenderer Ammor

Prithee tell me, Dimple-Chin,
At what age does Love begin?
Your blue eyes have scarcely seen
Summers three, my fairy queen,
But a miracle of sweets,
Soft approaches, shy retreats,
Show the little archer there,
Hidden in your pretty hair;
When didst learn a heart to win?
Prithee tell me, Dimple-Chin!

"Oh!" the rosy lips reply,
"I can't tell you if I try.
'Tis so long I can't remember;
Ask some younger lass than I."

Tell, O Tell me, Grizzled-Face,
Do your heart and head keep pace?
When does hoary Love expire,
When do frosts put out the fire?
Can its embers burn below
All that mass December snow?
Care you still soft hands to press,
Downy heads to smooth and bless?
When does Love give up the chase?
Tell, O tell me, Grizzled-Face!

"Ah!" the wise old lips reply,
"Youth may pass and strength may die
But of Love I can't be forsaken;
Ask some older sage than I."
—Edmund Clarence Stedman

Lingering Summer

Oh, Summer, you're an artist rare!
Such gentle songs you sing
That you can drive away the care
Your wayward moments bring.
But like so many singers sweet
Who make a real hit,
This one objection you must meet—
You don't know when to quit.

Oh, Summer, your poetic gifts
Enchant the wondering crowds;
The story that you tell uplifts
Our thought into the clouds;
Your chorus comes echoing loud or low,
Where breezes lightly flit,
But, like some orators we know,
You don't know when to quit.

When it is time to make a bow
And gracefully retire,
You take an encore and we vow
There's too much to admire;
The time has come for you to pass,
You've neatly done your bit;
We love you, dearly, but alas,
You don't know when to quit.
—Philander Johnson, in the Washington Star.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Mrs. Newed—Do you look in your husband's pockets, thinking he might be getting love letters from some other woman?

Mrs. Gayboy—No, dear. When you have been married as many years as I have all you'll look for is the change left out of a five-spot.—New York Sun and Globe.

"Mamma," exclaimed little Mary, bursting into the room, "they're teaching domestic silence at school now."

"You mean domestic science, dear" corrected her mother.

"Perhaps," interposed the father, mildly, "the little darling means what she says."—American Legion Weekly.

"Now, Bobby, how much do six and four make?"
"Eleven, sir."
"Guess again."
"Twelve, nine, thirteen."
"How about ten?"
"Oh, you can't mix me up that way! Five and five are ten!"—Washington Star.

Wants Everyone To Know Remarkable Experience

"The Tanlac treatment has built me up until I look and feel like a different person," is the striking statement made, recently, by Mrs. Mary Miller, at her beautiful home, 9 Morton Place, Augusta, Me.

"Seven years of stomach trouble with the complications resulting from it had brought me down to the verge of a complete breakdown. At times I was almost hysterical from headache, nervousness and pain and would have gladly given a hundred dollars for a good night's sleep.

"When I began taking Tanlac I only weighed one hundred and five pounds, and the pallor of my cheeks was unmistakable proof of my ill health. I now balance the scales at one hundred and forty-eight pounds and feel better than I ever did in my life. Anyone wishing to know more of my experience with Tanlac may communicate with me. If I could I would tell every suffering person what a grand medicine it is."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

REV. JOHN HANDLEY CALLS ON WOMEN TO WORK

The thing for us to do is to roll up our sleeves and go to work, said Rev. John Handley, a noted Paulist, lecturing Tuesday evening in the hall of St. Patrick's church under the auspices of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women. There was an attendance of about 200 at the meeting which opened at 8 o'clock, with Rev. M. H. May, rector of the church, presiding.

The program opened with two selections by a trio, Miss Agnes Brennahan and Miss Irene Wholey, violins, and Miss Mary Brennahan, piano. Edward T. Connelly, accompanied by Henry LaFontaine, then entertained with two vocal selections, In the Heart of a Rose, and Mother in Ireland. Father Handley was introduced by Father May. With reference to the work started by the National Council of Catholic Women Father Handley said: The reason it takes so long for the adoption of this work by the Catholics of this state is because it is so big. Father Handley went on to explain the working plan of the American army, telling how a huge fighting force can be quickly thrown into the field through either the volunteer or conscription plan to fill up the ranks of the regular army and the skeleton regiments of the reserve forces, at the call of the commander-in-chief.

You have your bishops, your pastors and your curates, who are the officers of this welfare army. They are thoroughly equipped for the work. Then you have your "regular" forces. This is the skeleton "regiment" to be filled in by volunteer workers. This organization of the diocese of Hartford is only a part of the organization of the Catholic church in the United States. This work is planned for every diocese in the United States.

There is not a single diocese in the United States that does not point to the Hartford diocese as a pioneer in this work. We are looked up to in this work. The Holy Father has officially approved this work. We are doing the same kind of work in Canada, in European and in South American countries. This movement will be a success if you people only respond to the call of the commander-in-chief and volunteer. Fill up these regiments, for war has been declared.

Speaking with reference to the persecution of the Catholic church Father Handley said: The Catholic church has always been persecuted. We can go down through history and see how the Catholic church has been persecuted in various ways. Why is it that the Catholic church has been blockaded in her efforts to carry on the work of Jesus Christ in this country? Because of this persecution which has been so successfully carried on. We are here to meet this persecution. The Catholic religion is universal. It takes into consideration every human being. Under the persecution I have outlined tonight, those who are bewildered and in need of help are being helped by the enemies of the Catholic church. Roll up your sleeves and go to work. Take care of those human beings in need. Show the true spirit of the Catholic church. Educate the Catholics and non-Catholics to this work.

We are not efficient. Those who are overshadowing the Catholic church are doing it with great efficiency. Without trained workers this welfare work cannot be carried on. Potentially we have hundreds of these workers. The thing for us to do is to roll up our sleeves and go to work. Don't let George do it.

At the conclusion of Father Handley's lecture Father May thanked him in the name of all present.

We are all delighted with Father Handley's talk, said Rev. W. A. Keefe, rector of St. Mary's church. Father Handley came here tonight to inspire us. This meeting and talk will mean absolutely nothing unless we begin here, this week, an active organization.

We can't have a big movement and have a little group here and a little group there. Get together, map out a plan and go to work. I know the organization in town has done wonderful work. They meet many difficulties and misunderstandings. We will be delighted to cooperate in every way in the movement, for I believe the need exists.

The meeting came to a close with two vocal selections rendered by Warren Kane, accompanied by Mr. LaFontaine. Mr. Kane's selections were, In the Garden of My Heart, and Roll on, Beautiful World, Roll on.

ROZANSKI DIED WITHOUT HAVING MADE ANTE-MORTEM STATEMENT

Coroner J. J. Desmond was not to take any steps Tuesday in his examination of witnesses who will be called before him in his investigation of the death of Raymond Rozanski, but he will at once proceed to learn all the facts that will determine the finding he will make in the case. The coroner was busy all day Tuesday on an engagement that took him out of town, but he expects to make the Rozanski investigation the next thing to be taken up.

When Rozanski was brought to the Backus hospital by Dr. W. T. Driscoll Sunday night for an immediate operation because of the bullet that had entered his back and perforated an intestine in its course towards the front of his body, his condition was too serious for an ante-mortem statement to be taken, and he died without having made one, according to Coroner Desmond.

Dr. C. C. Glidersleeve, the medical examiner, was present at the hospital to take a statement if one could have been secured, and Rozanski's brother also tried to talk to him, but the injured man's answers to questions were given in disconnected sentences, it is understood, and what he said did not throw much light on what had happened at the clubhouse of the Lisbon Schuetzenverein where he was shot Saturday night. Officer Patrick Murphy was sent from police headquarters to the hospital to try to get some information from Rozanski but was unsuccessful as the man was in a partial stupor.

One statement that is in the hands of the authorities is that the shot from the automatic revolver was fired while Rozanski and another man were grappling with each other, but it is pointed out that the absence of powder burns on Rozanski's clothing would indicate that the shot was fired from a distance and not when the man with the gun was close up to Rozanski.

WISDOM BETTER THAN WEALTH SAYS SPEAKER

The weekly meeting under Y. M. C. A. auspices at the Norwich Belt company was well attended Tuesday when Rev. E. C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist Church, delivered a very interesting message, basing his remarks on Proverbs 16:16, "How much better it is to get wisdom than wealth." The speaker said in part, "It was a rich man who long ago wrote the words of the text. Man is ever striving to get money, and yet more money, as if money were the only riches worth having; some are so determined to get money that they do not hesitate to steal to get it; the investigation now going on at Washington is suggestive. Of course we need money to live; we must buy food and clothing and it takes money these days to buy them.

Even the rich feel poor at times and they are poor indeed in some things; no matter how much money we have some one is always richer. I read of a man who had fifty millions; he was sick many years and ate ra while he told his nurse that he could not afford to keep her any longer; he worried as to what he would do if he lost all of his money.

When we seek only material wealth we lose priceless values all about us. The weather conditions in certain countries is unusually fine and yet in those very countries, the people fail to appreciate their wealth. I wonder if we really appreciate the wealth all of us have. I have not a lavishly furnished home, but I would not change places with any one in the world for then I would have to give up my wife and little boy, and these are among my most precious possessions, and I would not give them up for anything. I have some friends who mean nothing to you, but to me they mean much, they are a part of my wealth and I value them greatly. You have your home and your friends and you would not part with them for any amount of money.

I have sympathy for the man in the cartoon story of "Bringing Up Father" for his wife is always pulling him away from his old friends and he greatly values them, and he values their friendship so much that it hurts him to part with them.

Yes, we have wealth far more valuable than money, and we should duly value these other riches. We would not lose our hold on our home and loved ones, we would not lose hold of our kind friends, and certainly we should not lose our hold on God; we would not sell any of these for money, for they are more valuable than money. Let us constantly remember that there are other things that can justly be called riches that are far greater blessings to us than money can possibly be; let us cling to these, and above all else let us keep our hold strong on God.

THREAD CITY WOMAN FACES INDECENT CONDUCT CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Jan. 29.—A woman resident of the Hurley and Grant block on Main street will be given a hearing before the local authorities this (Wednesday) morning, probably on the charge of indecent conduct. The woman who was employed at the state sanatorium in Norwich until the latter part of November, came to this city to make her home at the time. She is said to be the mother of two children. Her apartment has gained some reputation about town. It is believed that the warrant for her arrest is made out at the instigation of Willimantic men who have visited her place. Officer Roderick Lariviere served the warrant on the woman early Monday evening and she became very much upset from the prospects of a court trial. She followed the officer out onto the sidewalk and her loud language attracted quite a crowd that stood close by and watched the performance.

Charles Engilman of Hartford spent Tuesday night in the local lockup while awaiting the opening of the city court this (Wednesday) morning when he will answer to a charge of violating the traffic law. Engilman drove his car from where it was parked on Main street, directly across that thoroughfare and shot to the left of the silent policeman at the head of Railroad street and down the left of that street. Officer Lariviere ordered Engilman to halt and placed him under arrest. Engilman at first said that allowances should be made for his mistake as he was a stranger of Willimantic, but he later got himself into complications when he said that he recognized Captain Grady as the officer who had at one time arrested him in this city for peddling without a license. The Capitol city man did not have to report on this occasion, being released on the payment of the license fee of $1.

ARMY-NAVY FIVE SWAMPS ALPINE TEAM OF BRIDGEPORT IN TAME GAME

The Army-Navy Five registered another victory on Tuesday evening at Parish hall when they took an easy game from the Alpine Five of Bridgeport, 50 to 25. The game for the first half was a good contest but in the second half the local team ran wild and scored at will. The first half resulted in an 13 to 14 score with the Alpines giving the local boys a tough run for the game.

When the second half started the pace was increased and the Army-Navy players launched such a whirlwind attack of brilliant pass work that they wore down the visitors and the game became a tame affair. The game was one of the cleanest played on the local floor, only one technical foul being called during the game. "Mondi" Normandin, former Willimantic Emerald flash, was the star of the game, caging seven baskets, many of his counters coming from difficult angle shots. Harry Mills was close on "Mondi's" heels, dropping six pretty shots through the hoop. For the visitors Dondero and Pederson were the high point men, each scoring four times from the floor and the former once from the foul line.

In the preliminary the Army-Navy Seconds took a well earned victory from the Baltic Bantams by a score of 26 to 19. This gives the Seconds the advantage over their Baltic rivals by one game. The Seconds now claim the junior basketball title of the eastern part of the state.

BROOKES MAY BECOME MENACE IN DAVIS CUP

New York, Jan. 29.—Tennis followers today attached unusual significance to the victory of Norman E. Brookes, veteran racquet wizard, in the Australian doubles championship with James O. Anderson, star of Australia's Davis cup team for the past two years.

Brookes' triumph was seen as convincing proof that he has made rapid strides in his come-back attempt and that he might once again be a potent factor in the Davis cup play, in which he was a dominating figure a decade and more ago. The return to form of the veteran, who has been mentioned as likely captain of the 1924 Australian team, would make the challenging combination from "down under" all the more formidable.

Added importance was attached to Brookes' performance because he and Anderson vanquished O'Hara Wood and Gerald Patterson, who defeated the American doubles champions, Tilden and Vincent Richards, decisively in the 1923 Davis cup challenge round.

Brookes made his last appearance in international play in 1920, when he was beaten by both Tilden and William Johnston, who brought the historic trophy back from the antipodes.

Sanction fees, which have been levied by British tennis authorities for some time, will add a substantial source of revenue to the association. Last season close to 300 tournaments were sanctioned, and fully as many are expected to seek official approval this year.

AMERICAN WOMEN PERFORM WELL IN OLYMPIC FANCY SKATING EVENTS

Chamonix, France, Jan. 29. — (By The A. P.)—The hockey teams of Great Britain and Canada triumphed over the representatives of France and Sweden in the Olympic games today. The Canadians added to their reputation for brilliant play by fairly smothering the Swedes, considered the strongest European team, winning by a score of 22 to 0. The English team defeated the Frenchmen, 15 to 2.

The women's fancy skating contest went to Mme. H. Szabo-Plank of Austria, with Miss Beatrix Loughran of New York, second. Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard of Boston, took fourth honors, and Miss C. Eustice Smith of Canada, sixth.

Canada's victory over Sweden has made the Canadians big favorites for the Olympic hockey championship. The Swedes never had a chance in the face of skill and speed, the like of which is said never to have been seen before in the old world.

Manager Mulqueen of the Canadians, said that his team in their present form equalled any sextette that ever took the ice, either in Canada or the United States, in the history of the game.

The official standing of the nations at the end of the fourth day was:

Finland 67 1-2 points, Norway 49 1-2, United States 19, Austria 16, Switzerland 10, France 7, Great Britain 4, Czechoslovakia 3, Sweden 1, Canada 1. This gives a total of 173 points, fifth and sixth place points having been cancelled in the military skiing competition.

The first line-up of the Canadians was:

E. J. Collett, goal; Beattie Ramsay, defense; Duncan Munro, defense; R. "Hooley" Smith, centre; Harry E. Watson, left wing; A. J. McCaffery, right wing.

In the first period the Canadians scored five goals, several of the reserve players being brought on to replace the regulars. They picked up seven more goals in the next period and 10 in the third.

The Swedes played only two men in the line, keeping one of the forwards back in defense and retaining four men continually in front of their goal during the early part of the game, evidently with the intention of holding the score down as low as possible. Throughout the first twenty minutes of play their rushes toward the Canadian goal were easily blocked. The combination of Watson, Smith and McCaffery found it easy to go through the Scandinavian defense. Watson scoring after one minute.

The Swedes, who displayed the best work of any European team thus far, made desperate efforts to keep their opponents back, but failed, the Canadians getting into their real top form during the second period. Although fast skaters, the Swedes appeared to be standing still, bewildered before the speed and tricky passes of the Canadians.

Ohlson, the Swedish goalkeeper, stopped one of Munro's cannonball shots with the left side of his face and was completely knocked out for three minutes, but pluckily resumed playing.

The superb teamwork and individual brilliancy on the part of the Canadians marked the match progress. At the height of their game in the third period the puck was seldom past mid-ice in Canadian territory. And the entire Swedish team were backed up around their own net, but the Canadians managed to squeeze through ten times.

Score by periods:

First: Watson, Smith, McCaffery, Watson, McMunn.

Second: Munro, Ramsay, McCaffery, Slater, Watson, Ramsay, McMunn.

Third: Watson, Watson, Ramsay, Smith, Smith, Smith, Watson, Munro, Munro, Ramsay.

By winning second and fourth places respectively in the fancy skating event, Miss Loughran and Mrs. Blanchard added eight points to the score of the United States, consisting of 11 points captured by Jewtraw and Bialis on Saturday. Both competitors showed utmost grace in their performances, but they failed in the eyes of the judges to come quite up to the high standard set by the Austrian representative, who scored 299 points. Miss Loughran's score was 279.

Miss Loughran gave Mme. Zabe-Plank her hardest battle, since the Austrian woman became champion in 1922. The cheerful American girl fought the stately, sombre Austrian woman for every point. The seven judges were long undecided, but finally voted for the Austrian.

The set figures in the men's fancy skating were concluded today and the competition will continue tomorrow with the free figures. The two displaying the most skill were Graftstrom, of Sweden and Bokked of Austria, and it is expected that the winner will be one of these.

In the hockey contest tomorrow, the United States meets France; Canada plays Switzerland, and England Belgium. The skiing marathon of fifty kilometres will also be run.

In connecton with Czechoslovakia's protest in the ski competition after the Finnish competitor, Mattila had fallen, the jury ruled that a skiier falling 300 feet down a precipice without breaking his neck was entitled to have the Olympic rules stretched in his favor. It therefore refused to entertain the Czech protest, and confirmed the result of the military ski race, placing Finland second.

Mattila broke a ski in his fall and then obtained a new one, instead of repairing the damage as specified in the rules governing the competition.

DWYER SIGNED AS COACH FOR GIANTS

New York, Jan. 29.—Frank Dwyer of Geneva, N. Y., former member of the New York State Athletic commission, today signed as coach of pitchers for the New York Giants for 1924.

Dwyer, a veteran of varied major league experience, broke into the limelight as a rookie twirler with "Pop" Anson's Chicago Nationals in 1890. He went to Cincinnati in 1891, remaining with the Reds for eleven years as a twirler. He also managed Detroit for a brief period and served as an umpire in both the National and American leagues.

An unusual incident in Dwyer's career occurred in 1891 when he pitched Cincinnati to victory over Boston by a score of 21 to 16, despite the fact that his second baseman, Robinson, fumbled all of seven ground balls hit to him.

Dwyer's term as boxing commissioner expired last January 1.

MRS. MALLORY OUT OF HEIGHTS TENNIS TOURNEY

New York, Jan. 29.—The withdrawal of Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory from the Heights Casino invitation indoor tennis singles because of a severe attack of influenza and one-sided victories by remaining favorites were features of today's tournament developments. Mr. Bernard F. Stenz of New York, advanced to the third round by default of the former national champion.

Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup of Wilmington, Del., who is attempting a come-back, and Miss Lillian Scharman of Brooklin, No. 4 in the national ranking list, won their second round matches without the loss of a game. Mrs. Jessup disposed of Mrs. B. F. Waring of New York, while Miss Scharman defeated Miss Isabelle L. Mumford of Boston.

Miss Leslie Bancroft of Boston, displayed powerful strokes in defeating Mrs. Walter Trumbull, also of Boston, 6-3, 6-2, but Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., another ranking player, was extended to vanquish Mrs. E. W. Raymond of Hartsdale, N. Y., 6-1, 6-5.

In the first round of doubles play, Mrs. Raymond and Mrs. Benjamin F. Briggs of Pelham, N. Y., defeated Mrs. J. H. Taylor and Miss Adele C. Stone and Miss Caroma Winn, Mountain Lakes, N. J., defeated Miss Isabelle L. Mumford and Mrs. Walter L. Trumbull, both of Boston, 6-3, 6-4; Mrs. Frederick Schmits and Mrs. Berger Wallach, both of New York, defeated Miss Rosamond Newton of Boston, and Mrs. H. Stuart Green of New York, 6-2, 6-4.

At half time the score stood 24-18 in favor of the locals. Near the close of the third quarter Gale caged five in quick succession, starting a drive which completely overwhelmed the Thompson outfit. Burton and Gale were the main cogs of the Battery scoring machine, while Armington, Godreau and Poirier kept down their opponents' count and fed the forwards. Johnson was the outstanding man for the losers.

JACKSON MAKES DENIAL OF "SERIES THROWING" CHARGE

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 29. Joe Jackson, former Chicago American outfielder, today denied on the witness stand that he was implicated in the "throwing" of the 1919 world's series to the Cincinnati Nationals. Jackson is suing the White Sox for $18,500, the amount he alleges he would have earned under his unexpired contract. His services were dispensed with under a ten day release clause which he claims he did not know was in the contract.

The former outfielder declared that Lefty Williams, a teammate came to him after the series and threw an envelope containing $5,000 at his feet as Jackson's share of the money alleged to have been paid for "throwing" the series. Jackson said he became angry and demanded of William what he meant. Williams, according to Jackson's testimony, replied that Jackson's name was used in dealing with the "gambling crowd that had figured in the throwing of the series."

The next day, according to Jackson, he did seek out Comiskey but was told by Harry Grabiner, secretary, that "the old man was not feeling good" and that he (Jackson) had better write Comiskey his business after he got home in Savannah, Ga. Later Jackson testified, Comiskey wrote him asking him by letter about the matter Jackson had in mind.

Sports writers who attended the games testified today that Jackson's playing during the series was that of a players doing his best for his club. They referred to his batting and field records in support of their statements.

NEW LONDON DRYEST CITY IN STATE, ENFORCEMENT AGENTS ASSERT

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Jan. 29.—There is very general satisfaction with the action of the city council last evening in placing the effort to secure a junior high school for this city in a position for the citizens to act on the matter and decide whether they want to spend a half million dollars for such a school as is proposed or whether they will abandon any such plan. Two years ago the people in town meeting defeated the project by a slender vote. So naturally the project was revived and comes to the front again as a matter not disposed of. There is little doubt that the city needs another school of perhaps two others, but whether it needs or wants a junior high school is quite a disputed matter. In many quarters there is a disposition to go back to the old method of graduating pupils from the district schools to the high schools and raising the grade of the studies pursued in the district schools. It is pointed out that the brightest and smartest men the city ever educated were graduated from the district schools and from those schools they went to the high school. Thence they graduated to the colleges without a post-graduate course or other instruction to equip them for entrance to the colleges. There is a well founded notion apparently that the same course should be adopted in educating those who get their education in the schools of the city. It is pointed out that there should be no gymnasium and swimming tanks provided in the schools as the citizens are now contributing to the Y. M. C. A. which provides those adjuncts to the social and athletic life of the school pupils. The matter will go to the citizens by referendum vote and by them will be disposed of.

State Policeman Bernard Kennerson had a journey tonight to that section of Ledyard known as Quakertown to arrest George Ball for an assault upon his wife and children. Mrs. Ball complained to the New London police, walking here this afternoon for that purpose. She was referred to the state police at Groton and there she lodged her complain. Officer Kennerson went by auto to Ledyard and came back with Ball in his custody. There are five or six children in the family. Ball lives on the Crouch place and makes but a miserable existence.

Manager Platz of the Standard Oil company, in charge of the business of the corporation in this city, notified the police this evening that a boy named George Carley of 14 Colver street, aged three years was alleged to have been hurt by falling from one of the wagons of the Standard company. The driver of the wagon was William Wennrich of 115 Blinman street. The oil wagon was on Colver street and there stopped, when Wennrich drove children away from the vehicle. After the wagon had been driven away a woman heard the cries of a child and going to where the sound came from she found the Carley boy, about 40 yards from where the oil wagon had stopped. The child was injured and Dr. Douglass was called and found the youngster had a sprained ankle. Wennrich is positive that the boy was not on the wagon, but he does not know whether the child attempted to get on the rear and fell and sustained the injury that is now afflicting him.

On the 28 inst. the New London police were notified that Mrs. Germain was seriously ill in Springfield. Relatives of the woman were notified and the woman's husband will go to Springfield tomorrow to bring her to this city.

Andrew Rembiss of Salem is in the police station here tonight where he is held for arraignment in the town of Salem tomorrow for a breach of the peace, the object of his wrath being his wife. Andrew has the reputation of being a desperate fellow and the circumstances under which he was arrested tonight indicate that he deserves the reputation. Andrew was prepared for anyone who might come to his premises. He had an army revolver that was fully loaded and several rifles that were ready for use. The revolver he carried in the leg of his right inocsalin. When Sergeant Bushy entered the Rembiss house, the officer stood at the foot of a stairway and requested Rembiss to come down stairs. Instead of obeying the order he drew back from the stairway. Then Sergeant Bushy, knowing the reputation of the man, bounded up the stairs, covered Rembiss with his revolvers in an instant, and disarmed him.

Some two years ago Rembiss was arrested for beating his wife. He then attempted to escape but was pursued by Sheriff Tubbs and the town constable at Salem and was shot in the leg. It was charged that Rembiss then had a still in operation at his home and that case is pending against him yet. He will be held in the New London police station a prisoner till 6 o'clock tomorrow evening, when he will be taken to Salem and arraigned for assault upon his wife. She is afraid of him for she is aware of the sort of man he is.

Prohibition enforcement agents assigned to Connecticut declare that it is more difficult to obtain liquor in New London than in any other city in the state. The agents assert that as far as they have been able to ascertain the sale of intoxicants here has practically ceased and that New London is the dryest city in the state, if not in New England. The agents have not made an arrest in New London in a number of months, although one or more agents is constantly on duty in the city.

City Manager Holt is considering making alterations and improvements at the Old Town Mill and if the contemplated plans materialize, a caretaker will be employed there throughout the year. If the changes are made they will be started within a few weeks.

A row occurred last night on Bank street between Lane A and Howard street in which several men and a woman participated. Blows were struck and sticks wielded. The brawl had ceased when the police arrived and no arrests were made.

The New London police were again requested, early this morning, by the New Haven authorities, to be on the alert for stolen cars. Payne, whose death occurred at the Norwich State Tuberculosis hospital Sunday, was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence of her brother, Charles H. Randall of 175 Howard street. Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Oliver A. Sterry, 70, died last night at his home 156 Willetta avenue, death ending an illness of many weeks. Mr. Sterry was for a long time employed as shipping clerk by the J. N. LaPointe company. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. W. A. Fones, of this city.

James Davis, a straggler, was presented in the police court this morning for vagrancy, having been seen to accost a Chinaman on Golden St., and it was supposed he was soliciting money. Davis denied that he tried to "touch" the washman but he admitted that he had that purpose in view. He is a clean looking fellow for a vagrant and the story he told the court was that he was hungry and was given a dime by a taxi driver who was his friend. This money he spent for a cup of coffee and two crullers. Davis said he was in hope of getting work at ice harvesting and came to this city for that purpose. Judge Prince allowed him an hour in which to leave town. As "Tim" was in the city this afternoon, it is certain he didn't hurry to leave here.

Groton, it is said, in greater degree than New London, has been hard-pressed for school accommodation. The question has been considered long and patiently. Last evening the school committee and a special committee of the borough considered bids on plans that had been submitted to contractors. The result was that they awarded contracts that will result in a new school to be called the Col. Ledyard and to be located on Chicago avenue, at a cost just under $75,000. The construction contract was awarded to the Arthur Jackson company of New London at $65,175. The heating contract was given to Peter Mono of New London at $4945 and the plumbing contract was given to H. J. Kennedy at $3469.

The B. P. Learned Mission finished a year of good work at the beginning of the month with a balance of $184 in the treasury. The mission has taken care of hundreds of men during the year.

Cough So Bad That He Spat Blood

Right Lung So Sore He Could Not Lie on Right Side.

Mr. Thomas Niekerson, formerly of 25 Flint Street, tells how he was cured of a racking cough and sore lungs by using Allen's Lung Healer.

He says: "I had a bad case of pneumonia, which left me with an awful cough. My right lung was so sore that I could not lie on my right side at all. When I had a bad spell of coughing I would spit up blood. Having used Allen's Lung Healer before, began to use it again and I am glad I did. I took three and a half bottles and am glad to say I was entirely cured. I can't say too much for it as a great lung healer."

Allen's Lung Healer is Sold in Norwich by Eagler's Pharmacy, Chas. T. Trast, Lerou's Pharmacy, Gray's Drug Store.

"Makers of Fine Candies since the Days of Lincoln"

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Flower of Youth Returned

"From flower to flower I flit all day,
Merrily O, merrily O!
And the sweet sugar water I sip as I say,
Merrily O, merrily O.
Oh, mine is so happy on foot or on wing,
Not even the lambkin that frisks in the spring.
The sweets from each flower I sip as I sing,
Merrily O, merrily O!"

Sang the tiny humming bird to the little rabbit as he sat on the porch of the little old woman's house on the hill.

By and by, the afternoon wore away and evening came, so the little rabbit hopped back to the wood to see what would happen when the fairies saw the little box at the foot of the big oak tree. Pretty soon the fairies came out of their homes in the flowers and ferns and tall grasses, and before long they spied the little box at the foot of the oak tree. As soon as they had told the Fairy Queen, she commanded them to open the little box. And what do you suppose they found inside? You'd never guess, so I'll tell you now. The smallest little ring in the world! Why, it was only large enough to slip on the little finger of the Fairy Queen. Then she read aloud a letter which lay just under the ring in the little box. "When this ring is on your finger,

You must deal with truth,
And return the bunny boy
The stolen Flower of Youth."

"Old Mammy Jill must be obeyed," said the Fairy Queen, and she commanded her subjects to bring the magic flower. "And be careful lest it fall from the crystal vase," she added.

In a little while they returned and handed the Flower of Youth to the bunny boy.

Dear me! He was so delighted to get it back that at once he hopped on Dapple Gray and started off. Just then, the old owl tooted:

"Where are your manners, bunny boy?
Now, than k the Fairy Queen.
For she's the loviest woodland sprite
That ever I have seen."

But would you believe it Little Jack Rabbit shouted back, "Why should I thank her for returning what she stole from me?"

This made the old owl blink his eyes and blow his nose on his pink pocket hankerchief.

"I will thank Old Mammy Jill who helped me find my precious flower," and away rode the bunny boy into the next story.

WHAT THIS COUNTRY NEEDS

What this country needs is not a new birth of freedom, but the old-fashioned $3 lower berth.

What this country needs isn't more liberty, but less people who take liberties with our liberty.

What this country needs is not a job for every man, but a real man for every job.

What this country needs isn't to get more taxes from the people, but for the people to get more from the taxes.

What this country needs is not more miles of territory, but more miles to the gallon.

What this country needs is more tractors and less detractors.

What this country needs isn't more young men making speed, but more young men planting spuds.

What this country needs is more paint on the old place and less paint on the young face.

What this country needs isn't a lower rate of interest on money, but a higher interest in work.

What this country needs is to follow the footsteps of the fathers instead of the footsteps of the dancing master.—St. Paul Crescent.

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY

New York, Jan. 29.—Reactionary tendencies prevailed during the greater part of today's stock market but the general list was headed upwards towards the close under the leadership of American Can which touched 119 1-4, the highest price ever recorded. Last minute profit taking sent the price back to 117 3-8, where it was up 3 5-8 on the day. Both industrial and railroad averages showed slight losses on the day with sales again running well over the million mark.

Declaration of an extra dividend of 50 cents on the common stock of the United States Steel corporation, as compared with an extra of 25 cents the last quarter, was not announced until after the market closed. Wall street apparently had not been expecting an increase in the extra because the stock closed at 103 1-4 or 3-8 below yesterdays final figure. Total earnings of the corporation in the last quarter of 1923, which amounted to nearly $50,000,000, also exceeded earlier estimates, many of which had counted on a figure below the $47,000,(000 total of the previous quarter.

Strength of Erie common, which touched 37 1-4, the highest price since 1917 the railroad list. Wisconsin Central moved up a point and Southern Railway, Baltimore and Ohio and Great Northern preferred improved fractionally

Erratic fluctuations took place in a number of the high priced specialties which market observers found hard to explain. General Electric fluctuated between 210 and 215 1-4, closing at 212 5-8 for a net loss of 1 7-8. Famous Players closed three points lower at 83 3-4 after selling between 61 and 64 1-8. Davison Chemical broke from 54 1-4 to 45 and then rallied to 52 1-8, off 3-8. American Woolen was again under pressure, selling as low as 71 5-8 and closing a point higher for a net loss of 1 1-2 on the day. Baldwin closed 1 3-8 lower at 122 7-8 after having sold as high as 125. Corn Products dropped from 185 1-4 to 179 and then rallied to 183 1-2 up one on the day.

Chemical shares made good recovery from recent heaviness. American Agricultural Chemical preferred jumping more than four points and Virginia Carolina Chemical preferred 1 1-8. Domestic oils, which have been somewhat adversely affected by the testimony before the senate committee investigating naval oil reserve leases, displayed a firm undertone. Houston closed 1 5-8 higher and Pacific touched 56 1-4, the highest since 1922.

Some of the other strong spots were U. S. Alcohol, which has been heavily bought on speculative expectation of a resumption of dividends. Omaha, which advanced 4 1-2 points on rumors of a possible merger, with Chicago and Northwestern and Sears Roebuck, which advanced more than a point in reflection of increased earnings.

Call money ruled unchanged at 4 1-4 per cent, the higher renewal rate being attributed to month end requirements. Time money was quoted at 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 with little business transacted. Commercial paper was unchanged, prime names commanding 4 3-4.

Settlement of the British railroad strike caused further strengthening of sterling exchange, demand bills being quoted a cent higher at $4.26. Other European rates improved in sympathy.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 29.—Aside from strength in Liberty bonds, which recorded marked gains, reactionary tendencies prevailed in today's irregular but active bond market. Low priced railroad issues generally lost ground, while recessions also took place through the public utility and industrial list, except where certain bonds were sought for individual attractiveness. Trading interest developed in some of the ordinarily inactive foreign issues, which advanced fractionally.

Chief interest centered in the investment section of the market when it was reported that subscriptions to the $50,000,000 Southwestern Bell Telephone issue exceeded $400,000,000 and that allotments would be cut down to between 10 and 15 per cent. Bankers were said to be negotiating for early offering of other issues, the principal one being the Japanese loan for about $50,000,000. The delay in placing the bonds on the market, it was stated, was caused by the rumored refusal of the Japanese government to guarantee the loan.

Profit taking after the recent advance in prices, accounted for the hesitancy of the general bond list. Traction issues, including B. M. T. 6's and Interborough refunding 5s, St. Paul convertible 4 1-2's and other rails, sugars and coppers were affected. Traders, however, reported a good understone, despite the disposition to take profits.

Public offering will be made tomorrow by a local banking syndicate of $4,351,600 Baltimore & Ohio equipment trust 6 per cent. notes at prices to yield 6.35 to 5.85 per cent. and $3,000,000 State of Michigan highway 20-year 4 and 4 1-2 per cent. bonds to yield 4.20 to 4.25 per cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Corn, wheat and oats all scored upturns in price today, largely as a result of assertions that farm stocks of grain are decidedly smaller than has been generally supposed or else the farmers have developed an unsuspected ability to hold on to their supplies. Corn closed unsettled at a shade to 3-8 a 1-4c net advance, May 80 1-4 to 80 3-8, with wheat firm 1-4 to 3-4c up, May $1.09 7-8 to $1.10, oats unchanged to 3-8c higher, and provisions varying from 4c decline to 6c gain.

One of the leading crop experts gave the weight of his authority to a decidedly bullish view as to the smallness of farm stocks of grain and regarding the alternative that growers were successfully carrying out a policy of holding grain back for better prices. He pointed out that the corn market had advanced more than six cents a bushel since January 1, but that nevertheless this was the first January in many years showing no substantial accumulation at the chief distributing centers. Similar comment was made as to wheat and oats.

A sharp rally in prices followed the circulation of these opinions, and the entire list of cereals finished at virtually the day's top level. Previous to the bulge, the corn market which early had shown a rising tendency became temporarily bare of buying orders, and underwent material sag. Renewed purchasing grew active, however, especially in the last 30 minutes.

Sudden disappearance of snow covering in much of the winter wheat belt led to fears of damage from a recurrence of zero weather. Partly in consequence of this circumstances wheat had the highest close in about two weeks.

Provisions were influenced on the hand by some investment demand but on the other hand by foreign interests selling.

CURB MARKET

New York, Jan. 29.—Speculators for the decline, aided by a heavy volume of profit taking in various sections of the list, brought about a further reaction of prices in todays curb market.

Oils yielded rather readily to selling pressure, particularly the high priced issues. Prairie Oil & Gas and Standard Oil of Nebraska touching new lows on the movement but closing well above their bottom figures of the day. Net losses of 1 to 3 points were recorded by Standard Oil of Kentucky, Solar Refining, South Pennsylvania Oil, Magnolia Petroleum, Buckeye Pipe, Cumberland Pipe and Imperial of Canada.

Ford Motors of Canada advanced 8 points to 470 as against last year's low of 392, but it slipped back to 467 at the close. Durant Motors was heavy. Candy Products was very active, but closed unchanged on the day. Radio stocks were again in supply on selling apparently inspired by the federal trade commission's complaint of a radio monopoly.

BONUS WOULD COST THIS DISTRICT $11,832,000

Knowlton Durham, national president of the ex-service men's anti-bonus league, has arrived at the figure of $11,832,000 which he says would be the cost to the people of the second congressional district in this state brought on by the proposed soldier bonus. He has put his figures and his argument against the bonus in a letter which he has sent to Congressman Richard P. Freeman. While he lays stress upon the economic argument, this he says is not the conclusive one.

Mr. Durham points out that much confusion exists in the public mind regarding the cost of the soldiers bonus because official and unofficial estimates have not included the same factors. Some members of the congress, says Mr. Durham, base their estimates upon the amount of cash that would actually be received by the ex-service men, ignoring the interest charges that must necessarily be paid. These interest charges are inevitable, since the country has no available cash resources and does have a debt, of more than $21,000,000,000. Then too, as Mr. Durham points out, very few estimates have included the cost of administration.

The figures made public by the treasury department said Mr. Durham, place $4,500,000,000 as the minimum cost of the bonus, including principal and interest. The minimum cost of administration is estimated at $1,000,000,000, making the total minimum cost $5,500,000,000, which must be paid by the public in addition to other public debts—municipal, county, state and national.

While federal taxation is not levied upon a per capita basis, per capita figures, says Mr. Durham, are illuminating. Basing his statement upon the official estimates, Mr. Durham points out that the minimum per capita cost of the bonus—principal, interest and administration—would be $51 or $51,000 for every 1,000 population. On this basis, the cost of the bonus to the various counties in the Second Congressional district would be:

County	Cost
Middlesex	$2,397,000
New London	$5,304,000
Tolland	$1,377,000
Windham	$2,653,000
Total	$11,832,000

Figuring the cost of improved dirt roads at $15,000 per mile, $11,832,000 represents 788.8 miles of highway or figuring in terms of permanent improved roads at $40,000 per mile, $11,832,000 represents 295.8 miles of permanent highway.

However, says Mr. Durham in his letter to Congressman Freeman, the economic argument is not the conclusive one.

"The Ex-Service Men's Anti-Bonus League," he says, "differs fundamentally with those who seek a government dole. It is held in justification of the adjusted compensation plea that the government is obliged by some sort of an implied contract to compensate the ex-service men for services rendered. This view presents the ex-soldier as a man who, when the call came, did not immediately respond, but stood up in his place and bargained for a wage. This was not the disposition shown in 1917. There was not one single soldier out of the approximately four million inducted into the service who asked a contract indemnifying him against economic loss. The men of 1917 did not question the conditions of the service. They recognized the need and they stepped forward into the ranks, not as hirelings but as men who had consecrated their efforts, and, if necessary, their lives to the service of their country.

"It is this picture of splendid service that those who stand for bonus legislation would obliterate. It is proposed to besmirch with the mud of greed the most precious memory of our nation in all the days of its history.

"And it is against this disposition to reduce the service rendered by the soldier to the level of the service rendered by the man who digs a ditch for a wage that members of the Anti-Bonus League emphatically protest.

"The league holds that a memory of splendid service constitutes the most precious possession of a nation and it is that possession that it is pledged to protect.

"This memory is one that I believe sons of chivalrous Connecticut will regard as a precious heritage that cannot be purchased by a bonus.

"The purpose of the league," continued Mr. Durham, "is to give every ex-service man who does not believe in pay for patriotism an opportunity to place himself on record definitely to that effect, through an organization whos sole purpose it is to register soldier sentiment upon what is essentially a patriotic issue."

AMERICAN WOOLEN COMPANY

Evolution of Industry

LONG before the dawn of history, men had acquired a method of weaving or plaiting fabrics.

As civilization advanced, weaving became one of the fine arts. Itinerant weavers operating "one-man looms" created fabrics of enduring beauty. But with the growth of population, the demand for cloth increased, beyond the productive capacity of these itinerant weavers.

Production in larger and larger quantities became a vital necessity, hence in time great textile industries were created which through their large scale operations have contributed much to the benefit of mankind. They have been and are producing fine fabrics at a cost which enables men and women to buy and enjoy the comforts of good clothing at prices well within the reach of every one.

At noon this fire was approaching the buildings of the Edward Platt place and Prudential Land Company's house. The fire caused by the railroad engines was checked by Frank Congdon and Frank Cleaves, aided by school boys.

Broadway Theatre

No more representative Broadway attraction with the brilliant star could be booked for this city during the early days of the new year than Mrs. Leslie Carter in a dramatization of Olive Higgins Prouty's novel "Stella Dallas" by Gertrude Purcell and Harry Wagstaff Gribble, which comes to the Broadway for one night, Friday, Feb 8.

The Selwyns feel in offering this attraction they have selected one that will reach the hearts of those who really enjoy the best story of the last year. Although touched with a quality of humor the role of "Stella Dallas" provides Mrs. Carter with rich opportunities for the emotional acting which has made her famous. Stella is a big-hearted woman whose marriage is unfortunate chiefly because she and the husband come from contrasting environments and cannot reconcile their views of life. Stella is light-hearted and pleasure loving, her husband is more serious minded. They separate, their one child, a daughter alternately spends some time with both her father and mother; the child is devoted to both of them. Stella idolizes her, but when the break comes she makes a supreme sacrifice for the sake of the daughter, thus showing the mother love for her girl.

Prices 50c to $2.50 plu taxes. Mail orders accepted now. Seat sale Wednesday, Feb. 6.

Broadway Theatre Starting Thursday

Henry F. Sullivan hardly needs any introduction for his name has been broadcasted for years as one of the world's premier swimmers.

Mr. Sullivan returned from England on the S. S. Leviathan after swimming the English channel from Dover, England, to Calais, France, on August 5th and 6th, in 36 hours and 50 minutes, winning the world's endurance swimming championship, the world's breast stroke swimming championship, the Alexander Channel cup and the Daily Sketch 1000 pound prize.

This swim was accomplished in open sea swimming, water temperature of 57 and 62 degrees, without any assistance from boats or tug and without any artificial protection of any sort.

He will be seen at the Broadway theatre this week starting Thursday, with five other acts of Keith vaudeville.

AT THE BREED THEATRE

Charles Jones in "Second Hand Love" is the feature attraction at the Breed theatre today and Thursday. Charles Jones appears in a role which, remarkably enacted, bears little resemblance to anything he has hitherto attempted.

He is a lovable, carefree hobo, whose only possessions are good nature, probity, strong limbs and a broken down horse buggy.

The scenes are all admirably prepared, full justice having been given to the development of the story. Light, airy and beautiful, rustic arrangements are plentiful, lending a delightful touch to the entire dramatic structure. In season or out of season, in spirits or out of spirits, the picture is of such a curious combination of drama, melodrama and comedy as to assure entertainment at all times.

Ruth Dwyer, popular leading lady, plays opposite Jones, while Charles Coleman, Frank Weed and Harvey Clark are other Thespians of considerable repute who perform satisfactorily.

Other pictures on the bill include the Fox news, a scenic and a roaring two part Sunshine comedy.

Long Service Saves Money

"It seems like a surprisingly large number," said the local Dodge Brothers dealer, in commenting on the fact that over 90 per cent of 1,000,000 Dodge Brothers cars are still in service.

"But when you consider the number of faithful 'old-timers' to be seen everywhere you go on the country roads, in cities and villages, you begin to wonder if these Dodge Brothers cars ever wear out. As a matter of fact, I don't believe they do—or, at least, I haven't heard of any.

"Just as a matter of curiosity, when this latest Dodge Brothers advertisement came out, telling about 90 per cent of 1,000,000 cars still in service, I interviewed all the junk dealers I could find.

"They confirmed my opinions absolutely. Of all the old cars they take in, the Dodge is the least numerous. Some of them have never received one. Others say that most of the few that do come in have figured in accidents so disastrous as to make them worthless.

"So it is more than simply a case of long life. It is long service that the owner values in his Dodge Brothers car. Nobody is going to cling to an old car just because it is a relic. They do that with heirlooms that have passed down from one generation to the other, but not with motor cars. But if the car continues to give the same dependable service year after year, without undue expense for parts, replacements and frequent overhauling, it becomes the most economical transportation that a man can possibly get. You can figure that by distributing the original list price of the car over the number of years of service. When a man has owned a car five, six or seven years, as is often the case with car owners, his annual investment is reduced to ridiculously small proportions."

IMPRESSIVE ADDRESS
— AT SHOP MEETING

The local Y. M. C. A. conducted another noon meeting at the Richmond Radiator plant Monday with a good attendance of the employees. Rev. C. H. Ricketts was again the speaker and held the closest possible attention of his audience.

He spoke in part as follows:

Jehovah appeared to Moses in Midian and put into his hands a job that seemed to be insuperable. Moses naturally shrank back from such an undertaking, but God promised to be his helper. Based on this Biblical statement the speaker announced his topic: Our Help in Meeting the Hard Duties of Life. On this topic he said.

1. Every life worth living has its hard duties. The man who goes through life with little to do and nothing to combat usually amounts to little. The struggle we put forth to exist creates in us the power of larger existence. The white oak has a hard time of it in the exposed rocky pasture but it lives for more than a century. Struggling to live makes life more abundant.

The job given to Moses was hard for three reasons; first, he was called to oppose a mighty power, that of Egypt, the strongest nation in the world; he was called upon to demand that Pharaoh give up the chief source of his wealth, the Hebrew slaves. Second, it was hard because it called him to do new things, and, thirdly, he was called to go back and face his old enemy.

2. In our unaided strength we naturally quail before hard duties. Moses did not boast of his ability for the job, but rather said, "who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring the children of Israel out of Egypt?" It is not the boastful man or always the man ready to tackle a hard job that is the most useful man. The speaker made much of the fact that when God has a hard job to do he always knows where to find the man, the case of David was called up before that of our own Lincoln.

3. We always have promise of aid in attacking a hard job. "Certainly I will be with thee," and he was in

NORWICH TOWN

Because of the extreme cold weather, the Sunday morning service at the First Congregational church was held in the chapel. The Mission of the Seventy was the theme of Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey's sermon with reference to the Text, Luke 10: 1. After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before His face into every city and place whither He Himself would come.

A bouquet of carnations was on the platform, the gift of Mrs. Dwight W. Avery in loving memory of her father, Rev. John Otis Barrows, the anniversary of his death coming the latter part of January.

In his beautiful tribute to Rev. Mr. Barrows, Rev. Mr. Bailey mentioned especially his work in foreign fields as well as his work in the homeland. Rev. Mr. Barrows having held several pastorates in Connecticut. For a number of years prior to his death he was pastor of the First Congregational church of Stonington.

Arthur Avery was leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service at 6:30. The topic was—How Can Christian Endeavor Help Our Church and Denomination? The Scriptures referred to were II Corinthians I:II; Hebrews 10:23—25.

ASSESSORS RAISE GRAND LIST BY INCREASES AND ADDITIONS

In making up the grand list for the town of Norwich, which the Board of assessors, Arad R. Manning, John B. Oat and Fred G. Prothero, have just completed, they found 296 lists that had been put in at valuations too low, in the opinion of the board. These lists were consequently increased to the figure that the assessors thought was a fair taxable value and the total that was added to the list in that way was $156,089. The owners of property on these lists put their property in at $935,612 which the assessors raised to $1,141,701.

Another way in which the grand list was raised by the action of the assessors was in making additions to lists in cases where owners had overlooked or forgotten pieces of property which otherwise would have escaped taxation. In a number of cases these omitted items were automobiles. There were 78 cases in which additions were made and the total valuation added was $37,305.

With the increases to lists and the additions made the assessors added a total of $193,394 to the taxable grand list.

Notices have been sent to the property owners on whose lists the assessors have made additions and any who feel aggrieved will have the usual opportunity to appear before the board of relief on the first twenty days in February to put in their claims to have their lists reduced.

DOG IS FOUND WITH SHOT WOUND IN JAW

About 1.30 o'clock Monday afternoon, word was received at Police Headquarters that a dog which apparently had been shot, was in a suffering condition at the rear of the old Reynolds place on Washington street. Dr. Charles H. Lamb who was in the city at the time was notified and in the interests of the Connecticut Humane society went to the place and made an investigation.

About half an hour later, the dog warden, Frank Tuttle who also had been notified arrived and with the caretaker at this estate searched for some time as far as the river bank at the rear of Backus Hospital, but without finding the dog. Blood stains were found on the veranda floor at the caretaker's home and traces of blood were found along the river bank.

This being an emergency case and because of not finding the animal right away, Dr. Lamb, who has been identified with the humane society for 24 years, kept at work on the case the remainder of the afternoon. During the time intervening the dog had evidently wandered up through Norwich Town to a location near Wightman's switch. About 5:30 a resident on West Town street found the dog on the veranda at her home and having discovered blood about the mouth cared for the animal and reported the case to Dr. Lamb, who then turned the case over to Dog Warden Tuttle.

In the early part of the evening he notified Dr. Lamb by telephone that he had been to Norwich Town and had brought the animal back with him. Dog Warden Tuttle stated that upon examination he found the under jaw had received a severe gun-shot wound and at this time the hemorrhage had ceased.

Dog Warden Tuttle has the dog in his keeping and is administering the proper care until such time as further steps are taken.

Under the statutes of Connecticut for shooting a dog like this the fine is $250 or one year in prison or both.

Dr. Gasson to State Prison

Dr. Charles A. Gasson of Waterford convicted in the criminal superior court at Norwich a few days ago of the charge of abortion, was taken from the county jail in New London Tuesday to state prison at Wethersfield to serve a sentence of from two to four years. He was in the custody of Sheriff Sidney A. Brown.

CELEBRATED ORGANIST IS TO PLAY IN NORWICH

Samuel A. Baldwin, professor of music at the College of the City of New York, has devoted the past 17 years "to bringing music to the people". He is the first organist in America to play a municipally owned organ paid for by the community—the one in Great Hall at the City College.

Mr. Baldwin said in a recent interview that "there is a great difference between listening to music and hearing it." To help the public to hear it is the task to which Mr. Baldwin has devoted his life; and while he plays and believes in playing the works of the great masters, he also believes in lightening his programs to appeal to the public. Many of his lighter numbers are his own arrangements for the organ of popular orchestral works. It has been said of his recitals at Great Hall "they have come to listen and he made them hear."

Mr. Baldwin will be heard in Norwich on Monday evening, February 4th, on the new Gale Memorial Organ at the Central Baptist church. The admission is free and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Pets May be Infection Cause

While workers at the state bureau of laboratories were examining a specimen of feces for amoeba coli recently, an organism was found which in its adult stage, is a common parasite of dogs and cats, the larval stage being passed in lice and fleas. It is reported that cases of human infection, many of which occur in children, have been caused by a mouth contact with fleas from dogs or cats. Parents should be cautioned not to allow children to come in too close contact with cats or dogs known to have fleas. A good dog does not necessarily have fleas. This information may throw light on some obscure cases of children who lose weight and "waste away" without any easily found cause.

GOVERNOR ASKS SCHOOLS TO CELEBRATE MAINE DAY

Hartford, Jan. 30.—The first proclamation designating Maine Memorial day, February 15, in the history of the state recommends that "this day be appropriately observed, not only in the schools as required by law but by the people of this state generally," as the destruction of the U. S. S. Maine, "marks in fact one of the great turning points in the history of the United States." The proclamation was issued by Governor Templeton in compliance with Chapter 256 of the Public Acts of 1923, approved June 2.

The proclamation follows;

"Pursuant to Chapter 256 of the Public Acts of 1923, I designate Friday, February 15, next, as Maine Memorial day.

"On this day, twenty-six years ago, 260 officers and men of the battleship Maine gave their lives in the service of the United States. Whether the explosion which destroyed their ship in Havana harbor was caused by a mine or torpedo from without, or by spontaneous combustion from within, there can be no doubt that this calamity crystallized public opinion in favor of the liberation of Cuba and so precipitated the war with Spain. From this resulted our acquisition of the Philippines and our first entry into world affairs. Thus the destruction of the Maine, isolated as the event appeared, marks in fact one of the great turning points in the history of the United States.

"It is fundamental to these men of the navy who died aboard the Maine, and to those men who gave or offered their lives subsequently, Maine memorial day has been established. The Spanish war was not a long war, but it was fought under exceptional hardships and its results were momentous.

"I recommend that this day be appropriately observed, not only in the schools as required by law but by the people of this state generally. It is well that the nation should keep in remembrance the patriotic sacrifice of those who served it faithfully."

In a letter to the executives of town school committees, superintendents and supervising agents, Dr. A. E. Meredith, commissioner of education calls attention to chapter 256 which providing that "suitable exercises having reference to the historical event commemorated thereby shall be held in the public schools."

A copy of the governor's proclamation accompanies each letter.

SENATE REJECTS AMENDMENT TO THE WALSH RESOLUTION

Voted Down, 46 to 38, an Amendment by Senator Lenroot Which Would Have Eliminated Direct Charges That the Fall Oil Leases Were Illegal—Two Other Amendments of Similar Purport Were Rejected—Demands For the Resignation of Secretary Denby Were Renewed—Senate Oil Committee Has Decided to Appoint a Medical Commission to Examine Former Secretary Fall.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Affirmative action looking to the annulment of the naval oil leases was initiated today while the senate still was engulfed in a swirl of debate over the Walsh annulment resolution.

Silas H. Strawn, who, with Thomas W. Gregory, has been selected to prosecute the oil cases, conferred with President Coolidge and then began examination of evidence collected by the senate oil committee.

Although it failed to reach a final vote on the Walsh resolution the senate rejected three amendments designed to modify its language and then launched again into further and bitter discussion which forced the measure over until tomorrow.

Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, interrupted debate long enough to introduce a proposal to bar as special government counsel in the oil cases any person who has been connected with any oil company, as counsel or otherwise.

Starting an oil inquiry of its own, the house naval committee heard two admirals, one of whom, J. L. Latimer, judge advocate general of the navy, testified that he had informed Secretary Denby in December 1921 that it would be legal to enter into a contract with the Doheny interests for the construction of tankage at Pearl Hrbor, Hawaii, in conjunction with their lease of the California reserve.

Demands for the resignation of Secretary Denby for his part in the oil leases were renewed in the senate, while Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, stated privately that he would press his resolution for such resignation at the first opportunity.

The senate oil committee was told by four physicians that the present condition of Former Secretary Fall made it inadvisable for him to appear at a public hearing but the committee decided to appoint a medical commission of its own to examine him.

E. L. Doheny returned to Washington with a request that the committee hear him again and he probably will take the stand at the next session on Friday. He declined through his counsel to reveal the nature of the statement he intends to make.

The senate appropriation committee reported favorably the house measure carrying $100,000 for the employment of counsel to prosecute the oil suits, but it added an amendment requiring confirmation of such counsel by the senate.

The McKellar proposal to bar as counsel persons who are or have been in any way affiliated with oil companies is designed as an amendment to the appropriation resolution. Its approval by the senate and acceptance by the house was forecast, but whether it would affect in any way the president's selection of counsel did not appear.

Senator McKellar said it was not directed at either Mr. Gregory or Mr. Strawn, as he had no information that either ever had acted as counsel for an oil company. He added, however, that he believed such a prohibition in the appropriation measure would be wise.

Some color to speculation as to the possibility of a hitch in the employment of Mr. Strawn or Mr. Gregory, was given, however, by a visit to the White House by Assistant Attorney-General Holland who has been observing the senate inquiry. He conferred with Secretary Slemp on the question of counsel and Mr. Slemp afterwards had a long conference with President Coolidge.

Running its course for the third successive day, senate debate was marked by bitter exchanges between republicans and democrats and culminated in a personal tilt between Chairman Lenroot, of the oil committee, and Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, who has had the leading role in the inquiry. Senator Walsh bluntly charged that he had received no cooperation from the chairman or other republicans on the committee up to the time Archie Roosevelt testified. Senator Lenroot said he was content to let the country judge from the record of the hearings.

Partisan politics ran through practically all of the six hours of debate and at times there was such a hubbub that President Cummins had difficulty in maintaining even a semblance of order. Democratic senators indicated by laughter and smatterings of applause their approval of shafts sent flying by speakers on their side and twice the presiding officer was obliged to warn the galleries against demonstrations.

President Coolidge, Mr. Fall and Secretary Denby were assailed time and again, while towards the last democrats charged the republicans with undertaking to "soften" the language of the Walsh resolution. Taking exception to these charges, Senator Lenroot declared that republican senators approved the language with respect to indicated "corruption and fraud" in connection with the leases and had sought only to make less positive the declarations concerning questions of law involved in the case and upon which the courts must pass.

A group of republicans—insurgents and progressives—joined with the solid democratic minority in voting down amendments designed to modify the expressions as to the want of authority for the leases. The two farmer-labor senators from Minnesota, Shipstead and Johnson, also opposed the amendments.

THREE DOCTORS SELECTED TO EXAMINE A. B. FALL

Washington, Jan. 30. — Doctors Thomas A. Claytor, Daniel D. V. Stuart, Jr., and Sterling Ruffin, all of this city, were selected tonight to examine Albert B. Fall, for the senate oil investigating committee and report upon the question of his fitness to testify. They are expected to visit Mr. Fall tomorrow.

The first two were chosen by Senators Smoot, republican, Utah, and Walsh, democrat, Montana, acting as a sub-committee, and by agreement the physicians then selected Dr. Ruffin to act with them.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN NEW ENGLAND

Boston Jan. 30—Business is about on an average basis, with good evidence of fundamental strength and a tendency toward a slightly higher commodity price level, says the monthly review of the federal reserve bank of Boston issued tonight.

"The new year," the review says, "has started with general business conditions on about a 'normal' or average basis, with but little uniformity as between industries, or, in many cases, as between the various branches of the industry. These conditions make it difficult for the business men to get a clear picture of the general business situation because the chances are that his business is either better or worse than the others. Nevertheless, there appears to have been almost no net change in the volume of business of the entire country since last summer. Of course, this is a generalization based on the average of many different experiences, and reflects a condition for the country as a whole somewhat better than has prevailed in New England. Even in this district, however, good and adverse elements are tending to balance out, and the result is a nearly static situation.

"There is good evidence of fundamental strength underneath the surface movements of irregularity between industries and a tendency toward a slightly higher commodity price level. Commodity prices had declined with business activity in the spring and summer of 1923 and, like business activities, had shown greater stability toward the end of the year. During January prices were stronger. This strength seems to indicate a better demand for goods.

Reports which have recently been received covering employment and production during December emphasize the impression which prevailed at that time that some thing more than the usual seasonal contraction of production was taking place. In Massachusetts, for example, only slightly more than half of a large number of reporting manufacturers were operating at normal capacity. In the country as a whole, also, activity was not at as high a rate as in November, but a larger proportion of concerns were operating at normal capacity than in Massachusetts. The federal reserve board's index of production in 23 basic industries was lower in December than in November, and, in fact, was at the lowest point of the year. The decrease of the month was in large measure due to reduction of activity in New England's leading industries, cotton and woolen textiles.

"Retail trade was as usual, quiet during January. The volume of trade is usually at its lowest point in February. Sales of representative New England department stores in December were five per cent larger than in the corresponding month the year before, and were, in fact, the largest ever reported. Notwithstanding the present seasonal quietness, the volume of retail distribution continues relatively larger in proportion to production. The demand for currency at Christmas was only moderate, and the subsequent contraction was unexpectedly large. Money rates declined during January, and were at the lowest point since April last."

WOULD HAVE UNIFORM LAWS FOR DAIRY PRODUCTS

Boston, Jan. 30—A resolution urging that laws relating to dairy products in New England states be made uniform was adopted by the New England Milk Producers' Association at the annual meeting here today. Another resolution called for the passage of a law in Massachusetts defining a legal standard for grade A milk "to protect legitimate dealers, producers and consumers from ordinary milk masquerading as a superior product."

The association adopted a plan of reorganization which will provide 300 voting delegates from the membership of 21,000 instead of 57 as at present. The annual meeting date was changed to the last Tuesday in October with local meetings to be held immediately afterward.

Dr. George R. Little of Schaghticoke, N. Y., was elected president of the association and R. W. Sikes, of Ellington, Conn., vice-president. New directors elected were R. L. Worthley of Strong, Maine; George Dunsmore, T. Albans, Vt., and Frank T. Peckham, Newport, R. I.

TRIED FOR A ROBBERY THAT NEVER OCCURRED

Boston, Jan. 30—Testimony that a supposed robbery for which Joseph Kelley and Charlotte Cheeney were indicted never occurred led Judge Flynn to direct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty for both defendants in the superior court today.

The indictment charged Kelley with having stolen a ring and a pin valued at $1,000 each, a revolver and $140 in money from Walter I. Rand, a dealer in "lucky stones" in April, 1923. Miss Cheeney was accused of having incited Kelley to the robbery.

Miss Cheeney testified that on the day mentioned in the indictment she was at Rand's store as an employe and that at Rand's instance she notified several newspaper offices of the purported robbery. There was no robbery, she said. Several newspaper reporters testified that she was at the store when they arrived there in response to the notification.

May Reduce Taxes On Incomes of 1923

Under Decision Reached by Republican Members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Washington, Jan. 30—A reduction in the personal income taxes for 1923 and payable this year was decided upon today by republican members of the house ways and means committee, Chairman Green said no rate of reduction had been decided but it might be as high as 25 per cent.

The reduction which will affect all income tax payers, was not included in either the Mellon or Garner tax revision plans which would have made the new rates effective on this year's taxes.

INCREASE IN REVENUE OF INTERNAL TAXES

Washington, Jan. 30.—Internal taxes brought more money to the government in the last six months of 1923 than in the csorresponding period of 1922, showing in the opinion of treasury officials, a healthier and more active business condition generally.

Statistics of receipts between July 1 and January 1 last, as made public tonight by the internal revenue bureau, showed payments to the government of $1,339,797,652 from all internal levies including income and profits taxes. Receipts for the corresponding period in 1922 were $1,167,646,458.

Income and profits paid their usual large share of the total, $821,259,551, coming from that source, while in the last six months of 1922 this source yielded $76,796,120.

New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois, in order, furnished the greatest amount of taxes. Collections from New York amounted to $144,153,737; Pennsylvania, $126,081,144, and Illinois $104,961,195. Total taxes paid by New England states for the last half of 1923 were as follows:

Connecticut, $18,372,897.
Maine, $4,772,754.
New Hampshire, $2,423,175.
Rhode Island, $10,998,619.
Vermont, $1,455,102.

RELIEVED AS MANAGER OF VETERANS' BUREAU

Washington Jan. 30.—E. J. Cummings, will be permantly relieved as sub-district manager of the New York office of the veterans' bureau as a result of an investigation just completed of the administration of that office.

Director Hines of the veterans' Bureau expects to announce in the next few days whether William F. Lent will be kept as district manager in charge of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut area, or change to another position in the field.

The case involved charges and counter charges in connection with a drinking party in the bureau's office in New York on New Year's eve. As a result of the investigation, Director Hines today said it had been decided that "a change in the management will be necessary in the interest of those concerned as well as the disabled service man."

The director added that instructions would go out shortly suspending Cummings and ordering additional minor change in personnel.

Edward Olmstead, recently named acting district manager at New York, will continue to serve pending the decision in Lent's case. Mr. Hines said he had relieved Lent for the time being, "in order that it may not be said against him, that the investigation in number 2 is being hampered and in order that he may give his time to such defense as may be necessary."

"Retail trade was as usual, quiet during January. The volume of trade is usually at its lowest point in February. Sales of representative New England department stores in December were five per cent larger than in the corresponding month the year before, and were, in fact, the largest ever reported. Notwithstanding the present seasonal quietness, the volume of retail distribution continues relatively larger in proportion to production. The demand for currency at Christmas was only moderate, and the subsequent contraction was unexpectedly large. Money rates declined during January, and were at the lowest point since April last."

He added that he still had confidence in Lent and "will have until and unless the investigation brings out facts which cause me to change."

British Premier Has Bold Policy

MacDonald is Expected to Be Firm, Frank and Fearless in Dealing With Premier Poincare of France.

London, Jan. 30 (By the A. P.)—Premier MacDonald's frank letter to Premier Poincare of France, in which he expressed regret that Franco-British relations were not as cordial as they might be and advanced the hope that France might adopt a conciliatory spirit, was the topic of animated discussion in political and governmental circles today.

It was said authoritatively that the new labor prime minister's letter may be taken as the keystone of the future foreign policy of the government. Mr. MacDonald believes that free and open negotiations along human, liberal, conciliatory lines will bring about settlement of the Ruhr reparation and Palatinate questions and the restoration of Europe—quicker than the old time secret diplomacy with its uncertainties, suspicions and delays.

While the world "bold" may be too strong an adjective to be applied to the policy which Premier MacDonald is expected to adopt toward France, it is certain to be firm, frank and fearless. This is evidenced, his friends say, by the premier's candid statement to M. Poincare that British public opinion views the French policy with a certain degree of suspicion and is apprehensive of what is going to happen in Europe.

His supporters also point to the prime minister's recent outspoken utterances regarding India, in which he warned the home rulers against methods of force, and his action in calling a conference of the Irish Free State and Ulster government heads on the different and delicate boundary question which might easily be postponed. These are cited as examples of the labor leader's determination to take a firm line in clearing up all outstanding questions at home and abroad.

Of all these questions the unemployment in England which has caused such widespread misery since the armistice is naturally the closest to the labor premier's heart. He is firmly convinced that settlement of the European problems along the broad humanitarian lines suggested in his letter to M. Poincare will do more to relieve England's troubles in other directions than any formula.

His own initial contribution to such European settlements, it is pointed out, is his bold step in destroying the barriers between Great Britain and Russia, recognition of the soviet government being forecast to occur within the next ten days.

DE BOUCHEL-CANDLER $50,000 BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 30.—Reading of letters said to have been written to Mrs. Oneslma De Bouchel of New Orleans, Asa G. Candler, Sr., Atlanta capitalist, and a contention by defense attorneys that Mrs. De Bouchel was legally married to Adolph Rocquiet of New Orleans at the time she became engaged to Mr. Candler, marked the first day's session of the trial of the suit for $500,000 damages for breach of promise, filed against Mr. Candler by Mrs. De Bouchel.

The contention that Mr. De Bouchel was married at the time she become engaged to Mr. Candler was contained in amendment to Mr. Candler's answer, filed just prior to the reading of the letters by Albert Howell, Jr., leading plaintiff's counsel.

Mrs. De Bouchel, with several New Orleans friends, sat with her attorneys. Mr. Candler was present while the letters were being read.

In a statement to the jury, Mr. Howell outlined hte plaintiff's case, detailing the courtship preceding the engagement, the alleged breaking of the engagement by Mr. Candler and his subsequent refusal to name persons who he charged had given him information that Mrs. De Bouchel had been visited by two men in her room during the Confederate reunion in 1913.

INSURGENT MINERS DEFY INTERNATIONAL PRESIDENT

They Became Riotous When President Lewis Ruled That the Anti-Administration Forces Had Failed to Get Sufficient Votes to Secure a Roll Call—"Shooter" Smith Halted the Onslaught — One Delegate Was Knocked to the Floor by a Blow in the Face While Yelling For a "Square Deal."

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 30—(By the A. P.)—Defiance of international president John L. Lewis burst bounds in the United Mine Workers convention late today and for one hour turned bedlam loose.

"Shout till you meet in Hell," President Lewis thundered when the rioting reached the edge of his platform, "but the chair won't change this rule." He had first ruled that anti-administration forces had failed to get sufficient votes to secure another roll call, on a proposition to change representation in the convention.

Insurgents fought for a return to the rule in effect before the 1922 convention, when, it was charged representation was reduced because of the size of the anti-administration delegates from Illinois. They lost on division by 78½ to 69½, and then voted 558 for a roll call, which was an insufficient number.

Insurgent delegates from Illinois were the leaders in the demonstration. Refused in a demand for a recount of those who had voted for a rpl lcall, Joe Lynal of Peoria, Ill., gained the front of the hall and yelled for a following and waved toward the right approach to the platform.

He ran into the most picturesque of the administration's supporters, whose reputation has given him the name of "Shooter" Smith. "Not a one of you goes," the bewhiskered old man shouted, "while I am here to stop it." The bold front of this delegates from Raysville, Tenn., deprived Lynal of a following.

For an hour President Lewis, at one time demanding, then appealing tried without effect to restore order. Shrieks of "give us justice," and "we want a square deal" filled the immense Tomlinson Hall to the echo, each time he called on Secretary Van Bittner of the constitution committee, to continue reading items of his report. Finally, at 10 minutes before adjournment, while stamping of feet and yells prevented hearing even at the edge of the platform, President Lewis advised Bittner to proceed, and one section of the constitution was adopted, of which only six delegates had knowledge.

One delegate was hurt in the fray. Alex Piazze of Local 3137, Bairdford Pa., was knocked to the floor by a blow in the face while yelling for a "square deal." He declared he did not know the name of his assailant but could recognize him, and would "get him."

Jim Deach, president of the Taylorville, Ill., sub-district, a member of President Lewis' own local at Panama, Illinois, and William Harkness, president of the Peoria sub-district were leaders in the demand for a re-count. Opposition to the chair's ruling center about them, and it was owing to the fact that they were placed in the center of the hall surrounded on all sides by administration men, that no more serious demonstration resulted. Remembering the disorder in the 1922 convention when Alexander Howatt was unseated newspapermen cleared their way for a quick exit.

Today's excitement followed the dullest period of the convention, the roll call on the proposition to take appointive powers from the international president, which was lost by a vote of 2106 to 2263, a scant margin of 157 votes. It gave the opposition confidence, although they had lost, and resulted in the evidence of a fighting spirit.

Convention representation, similar to that in effect two years ago, to which the insurgents seek a return would bring a greater number of delegates to the convention, and have a decided effect on the viva voce and rising vote, but not on the roll call. Instead of the rule now, which gives each local one delegate for each 500 members or less, and empowers him to cast a vote for each 100, it would give each local one delegate to each 100.

Before considering this section of the constitution which was left without change by a vote, the convention defeated all the attempts by insurgents, and left the constitution unchanged, insofar as considered. When they resume sessions tomorrow, morning, the first section to receive consideration will be the one which forbids any union miner the privilege of joining the Ku Klux Klan.

THREE TRAINMEN KILLED IN WRECK OF BUFFALO FLYER

Franklin, Pa., Jan. 30.—Three persons were killed and eleven passengers injured, none seriously, when the Buffalo-Pittsburgh express of the Pennsylvania railroad, was derailed on a curve at the St. George flag station, 23 miles south of here today. Two coaches and a Pullman car were partly overturned, an express car was partly submerged in the Allegheny river while a combination baggage and mail car ploughed into the hillside. The engine went over the bank and turned around at the edge of the river, the tender sinking below the surface.

James Hulings, engineer, Pittsburgh.
W. R. Jenkins, fireman, Mercer county.
H. S. Sharp, Pittsburgh, negro porter.

Hulings' body was found under the engine, badly crushed, while that of Jenkins was found 50 feet away. The porter was killed in the Pullman car when part of the roff was ripped off as the car turned partly over. Most of the injured passengers were riding in the Pullman car. The injuries of but two of them necessitated their removal to hospitals.

After leaving the rails the train ploughed along the roadbed for several hundred feet. Communication with St. George was interrupted for several hours when the derailed train broke the telegraph and telephone lines along the right of way.

A relief train from Oil City reached the scene within an hour after the wreck.

MAYOR OF WILKESBARRE WILL HALT COMMUNISTS

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 30—Investigation by the state authorities of alleged activities of communists in this section was expected today as the result of a remark by lieutenant Governor Davis at a dinner here last night that he would bring to the notice of Governor Pinchot, the action of the American Legion post which broke up a Linine Memorial meeting last Sunday.

Mayor Hart today received a communication from the America Civil Liberties Union, New York, that an effort would be made February 10 to hold the memorial meeting; that special counsel had been engaged to compel Mayor Hart, to furnish protection for the meeting and that Governor Pinchot had been notified of the intention of holding it. "We expect to have on the platform a bishop of the Episcopal church, a lawyer of national prominence and world war veterans, who will protest against the lawless action of the local post of the American legion and of your municipal and police authorities," the letter said.

Holden foreman of the jury.

Two appeals to the superior court asking the review of the action of the state eclectic examining board in revoking their licenses, were filed today by Dr. David Arohson, of Waterbury and Dr. James W. Cotner, of Stratford.

OBITUARY.

Miss Margaretta Palmer

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 30—Miss Margaretta Palmer, a member of the Department of Altronomy at Yale University died suddenly at her home today. She was graduated from Vassar in 1887 and attained her doctor's degree in 1894. She took up work at Yale Observatory at that time and became a research assistant in 1912.

Miss Palmer belonged to a Branford family whose connections go back to Colonial days. She had published some articles and dissertations on astronomical subjects more particularly on the orbits of several comets.

The funeral will be at Branford Friday afternoon.

For Union of Soviet Republics.

Moscow, Jan. 30 (By the A. P.)—The first step in the consummation of Lenine's plans to organize a union of soviet republics was taken tonight when in a huge theatre draped with mourning in memory of Russia's late leader, the federal congress of soviets convened in business session. The congress will approve the federal constitution, elect the two houses of the federal parliament and probably name Nicolai Lenine's successor—either a new president of the council of commissars or several joint presidents.

WILLIMANTIC

About one hundred and fifty children were marched out in an orderly manner to safety, shortly before 11 o'clock, Wednesday forenoon, when fire broke out in the old Windham Street Model Training School building, corner of Windham and Valley streets. The structure was gutted, the damage being estimated at $9,000.

Miss Annie Buchanan, of the faculty, discovered the blaze in a small room of the basement at the northwest corner of the building and rang the school alarm. Well trained through fire drills, the children stood in line and awaited orders from the teachers. In about one minute every child had left the building a number of them mourning the loss of overcoats or hats which had been left to the mercy of the flames.

August Benson, the janitor, was warned of the situation by Miss Buchanan. Miss Catherine Cahill, a teacher of the fifth grade, and Miss Mary Quinn, another teacher, ran to the fire alarm box at the corner of the two streets and pulled in the alarm from Box 17.

Within a short time both the permanent and call members of the fire department were at the school and worked fast and furiously in their battle with the flames. Three hose connections were made and the streams were turned to advantage on the burning building. The building was a wooden affair and was totally ruined, although much of the frame-work remains.

Volunteers entered the building and recovered books and other articles which belonged to the children, and desks and other fixtures were taken from the burned building after the fire was under control, but most of the furniture was found badly damaged.

The exact origin of the fire could not be determined. The central heating plant for the three schools in that vicinity is located on the Normal school property, on the opposite side of Valley street. Children have never been allowed to enter the small room where the fire started and the door is always locked.

The onlookers were satisfied with the work done by the firelads. Chief James J. Tighe was in charge of the firefighting, with Assistant Engineers James Rowan, Thomas Moran and Frank M. Lincoln. Lieutenant Henry J. Kelley and Fireman Joseph Grimes were in charge of the pumper which was pumping water from the hydrant, corner of High and Valley streets. Superintendent of Water Works H. S. Moulton said that the water pressure was good.

While the fire was at its height several portions of the roof fell through, but no one was injured. Volunteer Amos Barber received slight burns while he was in one of the rooms of the second story, when part of the ceiling fell on his back. He was fairly well protected from serious burns by his wet raincoat.

At 12.02 the recall was sounded and a short time later the fire had been completely extinguished. Through the courtesy of Hallock Inc, the firemen were served hot coffee and crackers by David Peacock.

The building was erected some forty years ago and contained four large grade rooms and wide corridors. The school is the property of the town of Windham but the state has maintained it and paid the expense of its operation in order that it might be utilised as a training school. Insurance to the amount of $7,000 was carried on the building in the name of the state. It is said that the state will rebuild a more modern structure or erect an addition to the new school which was built a few years ago, near the old one. The second and sixth and the lowest and highest fifth grades were located in the building. The pupils have been notified to report at the new Model school where they will be provided for.

Fortunately the firemen were not handicapped in their work by a strong wind. One spark, however, made its way to the roof of the home of Carl R. Alford on Windham street some 200 yards distant. The blaze was seen in time and was extinguished by several volunteers.

The already overcrowded condition of the local schools now becomes more acute, through the destruction of the old Model school. The pupils will probably be crowded into the new Model school building and in some other part of school in that section. It is expected that the work of replacing the burned structure will be started as soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed.

Local fans were surprised to learn that the Windham High school quintet had blotted its fine record by suffering defeat at the hands of the fast Killingly outfit. The high scores of 34 to 31 show that both teams were playing a good game and that with a few more minutes of play Windham was likely to keep her winning streak unmarred. The Killingly basketeers are playing a fast game this year and with this new feather in their caps they are likely to give the Tourtellotte outfit a trouncing, but when it comes to a flat hand show-down the average high school team in eastern Connecticut has to step lively to come out at the larger end of the score in a tussle with Windham. Killingly was defeated on Windham's home floor 40 to 24 and the local lads were disappointed when they failed to defeat Killingly in a second encounter.

Miss Margaret B. Freeman, daughter of Mrs. Ann Freeman of 90 Oak street, and James J. Quirk of Lynn, Mass., were married Wednesday morning at St. Joseph's church. The marriage was solemnized at 8 o'clock by Rev. John E. Clark, the pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Friel of this city were best man and matron of honor respectively. The choir gave special music during the nuptial high mass. The bride wore a gown of gray duvetyne, trimmed with squirrel fur and had a hat to match. She carried Mrs. Aaron Ward roses. The matron of honor was attired in a suit of blue tricotine with hat to match and carried a bouquet of carnations.

After the ceremony the bridal party motored to Hartford where they breakfasted in a hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Quirk are on a honeymoon journey in New York and to Canada. They will be at home to their friends at 16 Ann street after March 1st. The bride's traveling gown was of brown brocaded material. Mrs. Quirk has been employed in the inspecting department of the local American Thread company. Mr. Quirk is employed by the New Haven railroad. The bride received many gifts of cut glass, silver, china, linen and money.

Mrs. Ellen Lynch has been elected president of the Windham Women's Democratic club, which has been formed here through the efforts of Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch and others. Other officers are: Vice president, Mrs. Joseph F. Gaudreau; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Loretta Costello. Mrs. Hormisdas Dion was appointed chairman of the membership class. The club now has about thirty members.

The members of the local police department will begin to note a change of scene, beginning next Friday, when the police department goes back to the old system of changing the officers from one beat to another each month. For about three years the officers were assigned permanent beats, with a regular traffic officer for the day work. Under the former system each officer does the rounds of the beats as the months go by and then spends a month on day duty. The notification of the change was sent to Chief of Police Allan MacArthur by Alderman George W. Hickey, chairman of the committee. Chief MacArthur then announced the assignments for February as follows: Officer William Hurley, Sodom; Officer Edward Leahy, Jackson street; Officer Grant Bombrid, Center beat; Officer Arthur Hurley, West Main street, and Officer Roderick Larivierday duty.

Miss Alice D. Chase, daughter of Mrs. Clarinda Chase of 32 Carey street and George A. Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Thompson of 1157 Main street, were married Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Mary's rectory. Rev. H. C. Beleo performed the ceremony. The best man was Everett Beckwith. Miss Alma Chase, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The bride wore a gown of blue and silver material with a hat to match. Miss Alma Chase was attired in a modish gown of gray and rose-color intermingled. She wore a hat to match and carried pink roses. A breakfast was served the bridal party at the home of the bride's mother. Relatives and friends were present from Jewett City, Brockton and Canton, Mass., Providence, R. I., and this city. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will spend their honeymoon in Providence and will later reside at 403 Pleasant street. The bride received many choice gifts.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Uncle Lucky Get Better Fast

Now let me see. Oh yes. I remember now. Kind Mammy Jill had helped Little Jack Rabbit find again the Power of Youth. Then, off he started again for dear Uncle Lucky's little white house on the corner of Lettuce avenue and Carrot street, Rabbitville.

By and by, a great cloud of dust arose in the distance. Sniffing the air anxiously, Dapple Gray asked:

"Who is it rides so furiously toward us?"

But before there was time to answer, a man on a foam covered steed drew rein—

"Is this Little Jack Rabbit?"

"It is," answered the bunny boy.

"Then, make haste, little rabbit," replied the horseman, "for your dear Uncle Lucky is dangerously ill."

"Oh, dear me. When the little bunny heard that he was sick at heart.

But, wasn't it lucky, he had the Flower of Youth?

"Dear Dapple Gray," he whispered to his faithful steed. "Run as you never ran before. Take me to dear Uncle Lucky."

Away sped the little pony, and pretty soon the horseman was left far behind, and they came to Rabbit Land.

"We're almost there," panted Dapple Gray, and he galloped faster than ever and before long the good little pony had halted before the old gentleman bunny's house.

"He is in the sitting room," cried Lady Love, opening the door and kissing her bunny boy.

No sooner did Uncle Lucky see his little bunny nephew than he stretched out his paws and Little Jack Rabbit placed in them the Flower of Youth. And would you believe it? From that very moment the old gentleman bunny grew better and in a few days he looked like himself again.

The next day as he and the little rabbit boy sat in the garden, beneath the apple tree, a little bird began to sing:

"The Flower of Youth is a wonderful thing.
It blooms in the heart of all;
The years may go by, but it's always Spring,
Spring, and the blue bird's call."

And when Little Jack Rabbit looked to see if the Flower of Youth was still in the crystal vase, he found it gone. Only the empty vase stood on the mantlepiece. Perhaps the flower was blooming in Uncle Lucky's heart, making him young again.

For nearly a week, dear Lady Love stayed at the little white house to take care of the old gentleman bunny. She wished to make sure he was well and strong before leaving. Then, bidding him goodbye, she and Little Jack Rabbit hopped home to the dear Old Bramble Patch.

Goodness me! How glad Little Miss Cricket and the Three Little Grasshoppers were to see them. They sang and fiddled that evening all through supper. The lollypop stew never tasted so good, so the bunny boy thought. And when the tiny cuckoo bird looked out of her clock home and sang:

"Time for bed,
You sleepy head!"

The bunny boy kissed Lady Love goodnight and hopped upstairs to bed.

AT THE BREED

Powerful in emotional appeal, the climax of "Second Hand Love," the Charles Jones star vehicle which opened at the Breed Theatre last night for a two day run, scored with great reaction from the audience.

But Andy, unfortunately, still bears the handcuffs, an insurmountable hindrance. He is being worsted when his dog arrives, trips up Dugg, who falls into the river, and jumps in after him.

Other pictures on the bill include the Fox News, a scenic and a comedy.

AT THE PALACE

Heading a new program the last three days of this week will be seen one of the most sensational aerial acts in vaudeville, Howard, Winifred and Bruce, and who have played nothing but the largest vaudeville theatres throughout the country and who were a sensation at the Palace Theatre New York City within the last few weeks. It is one of the costliest acts of its kind in show business and will prove to be a most out of the ordinary act ever seen in Norwich. Another act which is direct from the big time is Fred La Riene & Co., and is a sure fire laugh producer, this act is called a current of fun and is a sure cloom chaser. To tell about it would only spoil the fun, so we must be content with assuring all that if you do not want to laugh do not attend the Palace. Bigelow & Pliz is Mr. Long and Mr. Short are eccentric comedians, and have a clever and entertaining way of putting their "stuff" over. The Two Steppers, come direct from the Shuffle Along Co. and are dancers of the snappy variety. The Willeys in a musical fantasy complete the vaudeville program. Colleen Moore the vivacious star of "Flaming Youth" will be seen in her second great triumph "The Huntress," a First National picture. Colleen has without doubt, one of the most delightful roles of her whole screen career.

In this picture the winsome young star plays the part of a vivacious care-free white girl, who has been reared as an Indian. She learns she is white and then "the fun begins" when she decides to win a white husband.

She kidnaps a bashful city youth, who has come into the country prospecting. Her efforts to hold him and finally to win him, naturally create a series of highly humorous and at times dramatic situations.

The picture is most unique and will prove a refreshing departure from the ordinary run of plays.

BROADWAY THEATRE NOTICE

Manager Davidson, in keeping with the trend of the times in the big cities has just arranged with the Linton Brothers, of New York, the producers of the celebrated Hometown Follies and Minstrels, which has been playing in the Keith theatres to make a production at his Broadway Theatre for the week of Feb. 11th. To this end he is desirous of having all boys and girls over the age of eighteen to leave their names and addresses at the box office so that the director can send for them for the rehearsals which will take place during the week of the fourth. This is a wonderful chance for talented boys and girls to find out if they have talent, besides having a lot of fun during the rehearsals, to say nothing of learning a number of the latest songs and dances. Beautiful prizes are awarded to the most popular of those boys and girl who will take part and quite often these performances are the beginning of a great career.

MRS. LESLIE CARTER

Those who have much to do with the theatre know it is only an unusual star and a remarkable play that will cause people to go out of their way to speak favorably of them. When theatregoers see a good play they are satisfied and leave the theatre feeling their money well spent. It is only the unusually good and out of the ordinary attraction that brings forth favorable comment. At the Broadway Friday, Feb. 8th, the Selwyns offer Mrs. Leslie Carter in a dramatization of the best seller during the year just past. Olive Higgins Prouty's novel "Stella Dallas" adapted by Gertrude Purcell and Harry Wagstaff Gribble with an exceptional cast including Margaret Hawkins, Beatrice Moreland, Kay Harrison, Anne Morrison, Ruth Darby, Edward G. Robinson and George W. Howard and others.

The play tells the story of the fine courage and breadth of vision of a mother who sacrifices herself on the altar of her daughter's happiness. So true to life is the story in the telling and so realistic is the acting, that many suppositions are offered as to which particular social family has been used as a basis of the play, but Olive Higgins Prouty the author of the book has just observed life and written thereof.

Prices range from 50c to $2.50 plus taxes fifteen per cent. Mail orders now accepted. Seat sale starts Feb. 6.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Wednesday, in the light of future developments, likely will be regarded as a day of destiny for the Connecticut Mills, Inc., for it marked the passing of the control of the big concern's affairs to a group which for all local intents and purposes may be regarded as headed by Obadiah Butler, vice-president of the company and active head of its manufacturing activities for a number of years past. He is Danielson there are numbers of people who have a total of many thousands of dollars invested in the various issues of the stock of the company, and, insofar as can be ascertained they have been almost a unit in their desire that control of the company's affairs should rest in the hands of the group that Mr. Butler heads.

For weeks past, there has been sharp competition between interests in the concern represented by Mr. Butler and other interests represented by R. J. Caldwell, selling agent of the concern and one of its officials for years (or some) of the Class A common stock of the corporation, in which issue of stock the voting power has rested since a certain number of dividends on the first and second preferred issues have been passed.

Opportunity to gain such control came Wednesday when, in New York sealed bids were received from the contending interests for a block of 21,840 shares, sufficient to give control, from the estate of Tracy S. Lewis, formerly president of the company.

It was stated at the mill late Wednesday afternoon that a telephone message from New York had brought the information that the Lewis estate stock had been obtained by the Butler group and that control now rests in the management of the concern. No details of the important transaction were made available to officials here in the telephone conversation other than what is herein set forth and the expression of the opinion that Mr. Caldwell's contract as sales manager will be terminated on April 1.

Probably the largest crowd of the season will see the Killingly-Plainfield basketball game here Friday evening. Plainfield High will have the backing of a big delegation of rooters, who are confident that their team can do something that has not been done here this season—beat Killingly on her own floor. This view, of course, is not shared in the least by the Killingly school and its friends but it is indicative of the great interest in this particular game. Plainfield has a strong team this year and should give Killingly a great game.

An official visitor at the state armory Tuesday evening, when the service battery held a regular drill, was Major Kenneth R. Lord, F. A., of the detached officers list, from New London. He came on a visit of inspection.

Of interest to the members of the service battery is a letter received by Captain F. O Armington from the members of the Nutmeg, a publication devoted to national guard interest in the state, announcing that Corporal Gordon J. Gales of the service battery has been awarded the prize of $10 offered by the paper for the best article on the subject recruiting. The competition was open to all members of the national guard in Connecticut. The letter offers the congratulations of the judges and the publication to Captain Armington, as commander, to Corporal Gale, the battery and the 192d Field artillery, of which it is a part.

As the administrator of the estate of his father, Julian Benac, Jr., has through counsel, filed a suit in the superior court for Windham county for $10,000 against Charles B. Deighan of Providence.

This suit grows out of an accident in which Julian Benac was killed, October 29, while acting as a flagman for the state highway department at the junction of Reynold and Stearns streets, where the highway department was engaged in an extensive rebuilding operation.

Mr. Deignan was the owner of a big and heavily laden motor truck that ran down Mr. Benac and almost instantly caused his death. Ralph Desoyelle of Providence was driving the truck. He was arrested at the time, and, after a hearing in the town court and in default of bail of $1,000, was committed to the county jail at Brooklyn.

Desoyelle was held at the county jail until the January term of the superior court, when he pleaded guilty of reckless driving and was fined $100 and costs, the court taking notice of the fact that he had remained in jail for more than two months and was in such financial circumstances that he was unable to pay a larger cash penalty.

The office force and heads of departments at the plant of the Assawaga Woolen company in Dayville held a banquet Wednesday evening at the Putnam inn.

Communications from Danielson people who are at various points in Florida for the winter tell of unusual cold weather and light frosts in some sections of the state.

In view of the fact that State Highway Commissioner John MacDonald has announced the intention of his department to build a concrete highway from Putnam to New Haven via Danielson, Plainfield and Norwich, it has been suggested that Killingly might ask for one section to be built this year, northward from the borough line to Dayville Four Corners. A section was built southward out of Putnam toward Danielson last fall and is to be extended in the spring, as the original contract is not completed. For several years there has been urgent need of rebuilding the old state highway between Danielson and Elmville.

At a 20-table whist given in the hall of the American legion, Tuesday evening, by the Danielson Girls' club first honors for the ladies went to Mrs. Tyler Anderson, second to Mrs. Belle Andrews and the consolation award to Mrs. Elmer J. PUTNAM

When the members of the board of relief of the town of Putnam take up their duties the first of February, they will be dealing with a grand list showing a total as it leaves the hands of the assessors, of $6,804,830, an increase of $333,508 over the figures for last year. In addition to the taxable property of the town there is tax exempt property of a valuation fixed at $674,-860. Soldiers' exemptions amount on the newly prepared list to $62,877.

As has been the case from year to year for the past decade, the new list shows that the number of automobiles owned in Putnam increased during the year covered by the grand list and have reached the total of 1,027, as against 853 in 1923 and 737 the preceding year. The total assessed valuation of motor vehicles in the new list is $418,476.

A notable shrinkage in a property valuation in the new list is that in the Nightingale-Morse mills, assessed on the last list for $446,915, and on the new list for $128,450. Of this shrinkage, $3,438 is accounted for in the assessments against the Adams Manufacturing company, which purchased one of the Nightingale-Morse group of mills, improved it and built a new weave shed. Another part of the assessment of former years shows in non-resident assessments against B. Dexter Aldrich and Edward Radding, who are taxed for $153,015.

Others assessed above $100,000 are the Putnam Manufacturing company, $441,073; Putnam Woolen company, $201,250 H. K. H. Silk company, $110,-594.

Cole, extension service, Amherst, Mass.

Some Rotarians of the Putnam organization, and many of the citys residents who heard about the incident chuckled Wednesday, over a little affair staged among the Rotarians Tuesday evening. The whole affair was the outgrowth of an attendance contest conducted recently, in which a team headed by P. L. Kelley beat a team headed by Warren Averill. The losers were due to buy a dinner and give a theatre party for the winners. The losers are alleged to have been a bit slow in complying with their obligation, but were not allowed to forget it. By Tuesday they had everything all set, however, and the winners were given to understand there was to be a dinner and theatre party in Worcester. That was fine.

Cars began to assemble just before 7 o'clock at a designated place and winners and losers were carefully divided into the passenger lists for each machine. Eventually a start was made. Some machines went to North Grosvenordale—and waited. Other cars that did come along promptly went out on the Chepatchet road, Hurlbutt Est $16,780; Kaminsky & Wife $71,000; L. M. & C. A. Some machines went to North Grosvenordale—and waited. Other cars that did come along promptly went out on the Chepatchet road, headed for Providence. Finally a prime mover in the entertaining group recalled with amazement that he had been unable to get tickets for a show in Worcester, so had switched to a Providence theatre, but had forgotten to tell the men in the other cars about it. Here was a pretty fix! The whole evening program appeared ruined.

After sundry and various exasperating delays, an experience strangely common to the passengers—or some of the passengers—in all the cars each driver by a remarkable coincidence decided to return to Putnam. Eventually all the machines reassembled here. The hour having become so late by this time, an agreement was reached to attend the Bradley theatre, where the Rotarians were a bit puzzled to find a section of seats reserved for them. The wonder grew when their own home town Rotarian chef appeared and presented each one with a small paper bag containing a doughnut, a piece of cheese and a gum drop. Then and not until then did it dawn upon some of them that they had been hoaxed all the evening and there never was any intention of taking them to Worcester or Providence, but they had just been "given the air." The losers had a great laugh over all of this, but they had better beware. There are some inventive minds among the winners and other things may happen!

Members of the Taxi Drivers' bowling team are mighty chesty again. They have finally subdued the North End team and look upon themselves as about the most champion group of bowlers this city possesses. They were in a high state of glee Wednesday morning and just rarin' to go against any other five the city can produce. Especially pleasing to them would be a chance to meet Hazen's Pets, which chance they say, there is a prospect of realizing on in the very near future.

What being isolated from the world during a long and bitter winter period means, may be indicated by citing that a telegram has been received here this week from Cartwright, Labrador, announcing the birth of a child to Mr. and Mrs. B. Haviland of that place. Mrs. Justine S. Greene is a sister of Mrs. Haviland. The child was born November 8. A message announcing it was received here by wire on January 26. Cartwright is a grim settlement where the long and terrible Labrador winter seems at its worst. It is often cut off for weeks at a time from all communication with the outside world.

SPEEDING THE NEWSPAPERS.

What should do much to expedite the prompt handling and delivery of newspapers is the order which has been put into effect by Postmaster General New. It is the outcome of an investigation which has been underway for some time, the change in method of handling indicating that newspaper delivery through the mails is entitled to better service than has been provided in the past.

Not only will such an order be highly gratifying to those who want their paper as soon as they can get it, but it will be equally pleasing to the newspaper publishers who endeavor to obtain the earliest and most satisfactory delivery. Through the provisions of the order requiring notification to the newspapers of mails missed or papers wrongly sent or addressed, there should develop a cooperation between the publisher and the postal service that will speed up and improve the handling of newspapers.

When the newspaper is rated by the order of Postmaster General New as on a par with first class mail, there is no question but what he has reached a conclusion that will gain widespread approval. A newspaper is many times far more important than a letter, the news it contains is eagerly sought for a great variety of reasons, including business. Recognition of that fact has come through the postal investigation, if in fact it was not understood before. Knowing what was needed and acting in a manner that gives excellent promise of accomplishing the desired results stands out to the credit of the postmaster general. It shows the endeavor not only to serve but to better the service at weak points and to get the requirements of those who ask for it and who have a right to such satisfactory results.

What the day is gone when the newspapers can be sidetracked and conveyed under the view that they are not important to those addressed is indicated. It must be regarded as a sound and sensible decision.

SENATOR REED'S CANDIDACY.

The announcement to the effect that Senator James A. Reed has added his name to the list of those who are candidates for the democratic nomination for president isn't likely to arouse a great deal of enthusiasm within the party circles, and there isn't much reason to expect that it would outside. The senator from Missouri stands forth of course as an implacable opponent of the league of nations. He gained prominence in that attitude because of the manner in which he defied the position and orders of former President Wilson concerning the league.

Just what effect his candidacy will have upon the candidacy of William G. McAdoo, son-in-law of the former president, remains to develop, but, it is known that the former president made the most of his chance to prevent the reelection of Senator Reed and it can be expected that he would take a similar stand in connection with the effort which the Missourian might make to get the democratic convention to consider him seriously. The opposition of the former president could be figured on regardless of the fact that Mr. McAdoo is one of the candidates. It is not only a fact that he has no love for Senator Reed, but he has lost no chance to eliminate him from office and the democratic party. Thus because of his views on the league of nations the senator from Missouri can bank on the Wilson opposition, just as certainly as the advocates of the league know where to place Senator Reed relative to that organization.

Every candidate that enters the field makes it just that much more difficult for any candidate to obtain the two-thirds majority of delegates required for the nomination. Senator Reed thus may be regarded as placing additional obstacles in the path of Mr. McAdoo, who is regarded as having the pole among the democratic candidates. Seeking the honor as a favorite son might be open to the interpretation that it was a move to aid another, but it hasn't appeared that Senator Reed was placed any such restrictions on his candidacy. So far as known he considers it a case of the more the merrier.

SCALING MT. EVEREST.

Just as long as there is a goal that hasn't been reached it can be expected that there will be determined efforts made to get there. And even after the goal has been reached there will be others who will endeavor to equal the undertaking or to obtain further facts in connection with it. It was so with the discovery of the north pole, and it is working out in connection with the conquest of Mt. Everest.

The highest peak in the world has defied man thus far. On the last effort to get to the top good progress was made under great difficulties. The hardships experienced then and on previous attempts, while severe, are not such as to discourage further endeavors. While there is the desire for adventure, it must be conceded that those who undertake such expeditions do so with the expectation of being successful, and such determination must be credited to the party that is to make the ascent of the mountain this year. Its aim is to win, not simply make a good try.

The advantage of the previous efforts rests with this expedition. It is fully understood what the route must be, what the conditions that can be expected for the greater part of the upward climb, where bases can be the most advantageously located, what others have encountered and what preparations must be made for dealing with the thin air as it is encountered. The experiences and mistakes of others have long since been taken into consideration by the members of the new party. They are going with their eyes opened as those in a similar position have never gone before. They know more about the region and the peak than others setting out to reach the top possessed, and as they climb their hopes will be stressed upon favorable weather conditions. Much depends thereon. Fair weather may mean the success that a storm would prevent. It is a struggle for honors in which many conditions have to be taken into consideration, and from the experience of others it is no secret that those who reach the top, whether it is this time or some other, must expect to encounter severe conditions. It is a perilous undertaking in which more than one life may be sacrificed.

A TIMELY TEST.

Straw votes are by no means new. They have been resorted to for a long time in an effort to get some idea of the attitude of the people upon political candidates. They have been regarded as a means of showing how the political wind was blowing. As a development thereof the same idea has been employed in getting the expression of a large number of people upon certain important questions.

In that connection it must be regarded as a valuable service that is being rendered by the Literary Digest in sending out ballots to 15,000,000 people for the purpose of ascertaining their attitude on the Mellon tax reduction bill. There are no ifs and ands about the question. The person is asked to vote yes or no on the Mellon plan, and for the purpose of getting more to deal with the matter seriously, instead of casting it aside after a casual scrutiny, the proposition is set forth on a stamped card that requires only a mark in one of two squares and mailing.

There is no question but what the tax reduction idea is one that has made a strong appeal to the people of this country. It is a matter that affects everyone, directly or indirectly, and much enterprise is displayed in the taking of this vote. It is a referendum which will permit the participation of nearly as many people as voted in the last presidential election, and if there is proper attention given to it it should display the sentiment of the country upon a matter that is unquestionably important and upon which those who are given a chance to express themselves should be ready to vote. It is a timely test that should be followed with deep interest.

BRANCH BANKS.

By the decision of the United States supreme court it has been decided that it lies within the authority of a state to prohibit the establishment of national banks within its borders. There has been no question relative to a state's authority concerning those institutions that exist by its charter, the question arising over restraining action concerning institutions that are agencies of the federal government.

The case concerned a Missouri institution which took exceptions to the authority of that state to say that a national bank could not have branches. It was a situation that concerned nearly a score of states for the same reason. They had adopted laws against branch banks and were eager to learn whether their laws could be enforced under the circumstances. There was a division of the supreme court on the question, but the majority opinion carries and henceforth the states that have laws and those that desire them, prohibiting branch banks are entirely within their rights and can enforce them in their own way. Branch banks have not been approved by the comptroller of the currency although permission to establish tellers' windows at points other than the main institution has been given. Whether the court decision will serve to upset such an arrangement remains to be seen, but that might also come under state regulation.

According to the majority opinion the idea of branch banking is neither approved, nor regarded as necessary to a banking business.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Cheer up, February is coming.

Because of the preceding mild weather there's more coal in the bin to be shoveled than at this time last year.

While there may be plenty of time for it, not much is being devoted to late plowing according to the last reports.

After it finishes with the Bok peace plan, will the senate committee take up the Filene offer to European countries?

While a welfare report claims a family of five can live on $9.60 a week it fails to tell how many are doing so.

Some of those using the highways are loath to believe that there were only 4,000,000 new autos produced last year.

That is noble of Germany to insist that it can provide the gold for the new bank to help stabilize the country's currency.

The one great trouble with scofflaw thus far is that too many people seem to think it a word reflecting credit on the person to whom it is applied.

Those diplomatic representatives in Washington with cellars filled with liquor should have their front doors fittingly placarded to prevent annoying disclosures.

Woodrow Wilson can be expected to have something to say on the announcement that Senator Reed is to be a candidate for the democratic nomination for president.

MARRYING FATHER

"What we need in this house is a mother," announced 14-year-old Nell as she looked ruefully at the chops she had burned. "Mrs. Smith's no good as a housekeeper since her daughter's sick. She's always running over to her daughter's house and I can't cook and go to school and all. I'd rather have a mother, anyway, wouldn't you, rather have a mother, Tommy?"

"You bet," responded that young person. "Like Jimmy Tuttle's mother. She has cookies for us fellows after school."

"That's just like you, Tommy Grey, thinking of things to eat. Now I want a mother to keep the house nice and make me pretty dresses."

"Hm, maybe I do think about eats, but you always think about clothes Anyway," he added, conciliatingly, "it's mean of Mrs. Smith's daughter to get sick at lunch time. Who'd you like for a mother?"

"Well, there's Mrs. Beale, next door. She's nice. But she's married already And Miss Mears is nice."

"I guess not," Tommy protested. "A school teacher! She'd expect us to use grammar even at home and get our lessons right all the time. Cut her out. Who else?"

"Well, of course, I like Miss Nan best. She's worked with father so long she seems most like one of the family."

"I love Miss Nan," piped up the baby, who had just come in from kindergarten. "She telled me fairy stories when I was sick."

"She's more like it," Tommy approved. She's pretty and she can sure cook. Oh, boy! Remember the cake she made for my birthday? Suppose we ask father to marry her?"

"She can't," Nell mourned. "Yesterday when I went to Mrs. North's with that picture father asked me to take I had to wait and I heard some ladies talking in the next room. And all of a sudden one of them said, 'Well so that independent Anne Weston is engaged at last! She has courage to assume such a burden! Then I coughed so they'd know I was there and they stopped talking. But isn't it a pity we didn't ask her to marry father first?"

"Sure is! If we'd asked her, she'd probably just as lief married father. Of course, he's terrible old, but he's so nice maybe she'd not mind he's 36."

"I want somebody to tell fairy tales," the baby insisted.

"Maybe Miss Nan might change her mind if father told her that we all want her to—"

"If we told who, and what, youngsters?" boomed father's voice. "Hello! Is Mrs. Smith gone again? We'll have to make a quick change here, I can see. What was it all about?" noting Nell's frantic silence signals to Tommy.

"Nothing, father," Tommy blurted, "only it was queer your saying we'd have to have a change. Nell and I was just saying we'd rather have a mother than just a housekeeper and we guessed you'd better get married."

"So!" gasped Mr. Grey. "Isn't this rather sudden? Picked the lady, may I inquire?"

"We thought of several good mothers, but 'cause you're doing the marrying we sort of thought we ought to consult you. Mrs. Tuttle is married already, and so's Mrs. Beale and we thought Miss Nan'd be fine, but Nell heard some ladies saying she's engaged."

"Wait," interrupted father. "What's that? Tell me just what you heard, Nell."

Nell recounted the conversation of the day before, adding: "I didn't hear what the burden is, but maybe she'd be glad to change if she knew we wanted her, because there won't be any burden here with us all to help Couldn't she just explain to the gentleman that she didn't know about us when she accepted him?"

"She won't have to bother about that," Mr. Grey replied slowly. "I had not meant to speak of it for a while yet, but if people are talking I'd rather you heard it from me. There isn't any other gentleman. I am the one Miss Nan is going to marry, after Thanksgiving."

"Oh, father!" And three pairs of joyful arms were around him at once. There was no question whatever how Nan would be received as mistress in that house.

"But I don't see," mused Nell, "what that lady meant 'bout 'assuming a burden,' do you, father?"—Exchange.

SHIA MOHAMMEDANS

Recent riots of the Shia Mohammedans on the streets of Kirmanshah, Kum, and other Persian towns because they believed their priests had been exiled from the sacred shrines in Mesopotamia calls attention to the fact that among this sect of the followers of the Prophet some of the most peculiar religious customs exist, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Instead of making the pilgrimage to Mecca, which is the lifelong ambition of every Sunni Mohammedan the Shiites pour from Persia, their greatest stronghold, through Bagdad to Kerbela and mystic Nedjef in Mesopotamia. Just beyond the walls of the last-named city, perhaps more human bodies lie buried than in any other spot on the earth. "The bodies of thousands of the faithful who have been so unfortunate as to die away from the sacred city are cured—salted and dried—and brought by caravan about the city.

"The way is long and difficult and sometimes it takes almost a whole year to make the round trip. The desert is weary, hot and monotonous, and the salt-encrusted earth crackles under the feet of the camels as they walk along. It takes two days to make the sixty miles between Kerbela and Nedjef, and sometimes the odor of badly cured bodies renders the atmosphere nauseating. The dry desert air, however, is the only salvation of Nedjef against diseases which this practice would inevitably cause.

"A burial site within view of the great mosque of Nedjef is always at a premium, and thousands of tombs of varying sizes and shapes nestle within its shadow. When one of the faithful was asked by a traveler how many were sleeping in the earth about the city, he answered simply, 'Allah knows all their names.'

"All modern conviences of Near Eastern life are provided for the pilgrims. The ubiquitous merchants of the world, the Jews mostly from Bagdad, have established a stage line, and in the city itself near the mosque there lives a colony of women who become the temporary wives of the visitors, so that they can set up their establishments along the 'happily-married-and-settled-down' lines to which they have been accustomed. A priest performs the ceremony according to an authorized provision, and the accommodating ladies in question get new husbands each year with the annual religious tourist rush. "The girl he left behind him' may indeed suffer some qualms about recognising her lord when he returns home, for he always dyes his beard red in the sacred city and is henceforth called by his friends by the title of Hadji—one who has made the Hadj or pilgrimage.

"Shroud designers and brick-makers do the most flourishing business of any of the merchants of Nedjef. The bricks are made from clay from the cemetery and are inscribed with a verse from the Koran. When a Shia prays he faces Nedjef and prostrates himself until his forehead touches the sacred brick which he has placed on the ground.

"Persia is the home of many religions, beginning with the Zoroastrian now represented by the Parsees, and several sects of Christians down to Mohammedanism in its many divisions, Shiite Mohammedanism being the state religion of the country. The Shiites have their own traditions, the most marked being an inordinate respect for Ali, nephew and son-in-law of the Prophet and probably his first male convert. They believe that the angel visited Mohammed on his last pilgrimage to Mecca and instructed him to proclaim Ali his successor.

"So thoroughly are they convinced that the caliphate belongs to the house of Mohammed alone, that to the confession, 'There is no god but God and Mohammed is His ambassador,' they add 'and Ali is the viceregent of God.' But Ali, while on earth had some powerful enemies, chief among whom was Ayesha, the favorite wife of Mohammed and the only one of his harem who had never been married before, and they succeeded in putting him aside and choosing three caliphs before him. He finally succeeded in obtaining the caliphate, but was murdered in the mosque of Kufa after he had served only four years.

"Fabulous are the stories which have grown up about his name. In fact, he is said to have out-Joshuaed Joshua in the following manner: one day while in Kufa he was so busy that he did not have time to say his prayers. Just as he finished his chores the sun disappeared behind the horizon, so he raised his hands toward the sky, made a sign, and the sun retraced its steps to the position it should occupy at the moment of prayer and waited while the great man offered up his petition.

"Persian processions impress the stranger as fanatical. During the Month of Mourning—that in which the son of Ali was assassinated—they put on deep black, throw their shirts open at the chest, whether this lunar month is very hot or very cold, lacerate their bodies, and go unshaven and with bare feet through the streets. Using their swords they beat the tops of their heads until the blood streams over their faces and on to their garments. Large sums are paid by principal personages in the celebrations for the blood-drenched robes.

"During that month the only theatrical performances of Persia take place. They are manifestations of Persian patriotism in which the Shiites show their hatred for other Mohammedan sects, particularly for the Sunnites, and are somewhat like the early English miracle and morality plays. They are performed in the audience where the scene is laid, a suspended lion skin represents the desert, a silver bowl of water the Tigris, and the parts of the women are taken by boys or young men.

"The crudity of the performances is amazing to the average American who is familiar with the elaborate settings of the modern moving-pictures. When the actors are supposed to be off the stage they merely sit down, and a 'corpse' sits quietly on the stage dressed in a shirt, stuck through with arrows and smeared with blood, or in some similar outfit indicate the manner of his death."

A 60,000-bale of long and short staple cotton will be harvested this year in the Salt River valley, Arizona, the largest cotton crop in the history of that section.

POETRY

Tall Women

I love to watch tall women when they go
Slenderly, as they should, and somewhat slow—
Unhurried, gracious; altogether sure
That they are comely. Yet a shade demure.
Loved women, who know life and are complete
In every circumstance of joy—
Who have quaffed deep the cup and know the taste
Of those last bitter lees. . . I see them go
Rapidly, with steadiness and undismayed
By any small inconsequence of days.
High hearted and insouciant, I think
Tall women are, and wholly undeterred
By trite opinions. I have watched them go
Their straight unhindered ways with swinging stride,
And lithe and lovely, with a careless pride.
In their so stately bearing. So I say,
Tall women, thoroughbred, intrigue my eyes
With their long lines of beauty, when they go
Slenderly, as they should, and somewhat slow.
—Barbara Young in New York Herald.

Winter Roses

I see winter roses
Everywhere I go
In the glowing faces
Of the folks I know.

The world becomes a garden,
Where the roses bloom,
Blossoms sweetly smiling
In the face of doom.

When the winds are blowing,
Faces wan as death
Change to fragrant roses
In a magic breath.

Though the winds go wailing,
Where the blooms are dead,
I see witching roses
Softly pink and red.

All the world is rapture,
Lifting through the gloom,
In the rosy faces
Of the folks I know.
—Edgar Daniel Kramer in Farm Life.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Piety is indifferent whether one enters at the eye or at the ear. There is none of the senses at which she does not knock one day or other. The Puritans forgot this, and thrust beauty out of the meeting house and slammed the door in her face.—James Russell Lowell.

A British scientist experimenting with a stream-line filter along which liquids passed under pressure through thousands of tightly packed, perforated paper sheets, took the color out of red wine and tea and milk, leaving instead of the last named a tasteless fluid, like water.

In Switzerland if a child does not attend school on a particular day the parent gets notice from the public authority that he is fined so many francs; the second day the fine is increased, and by the third day the amount becomes a serious one. In case of sickness the pupil is excused, but if there is any suspicion of shamming a doctor is sent to the house.

What is believed to be the first rubber pavement in the United States has been laid on a railroad crossing in Racine, Wis. The section of rubber paying will have a severe trial as this crossing is used by thousands of automobiles and heavy motor trucks each day. A similar pavement in Princes street, Edinburgh, has been used for more than twenty years, yet it has lost only a fraction of an inch in thickness during this period.

Ancient Yucatan Relics.

At Chichen-itza, in Yucatan, where there is a sacred sinking well, all sorts of beautiful sacrifices have been found embedded in the mud. Jade necklaces, gold plates and small jars heavily studded with jade, sometimes containing human hearts, have been found in this well, says the Detroit News. The Maya Indians made these sacrifices when they wanted rain or a blessing for their crops. Beautiful gold knives that were undoubtedly used to carve up the victims of sacrifice, usually young women, have also been found. The Maya Indians of northern Yucatan probably use the same language as the builders of the ruins among which they live, says Prof. A. M. Tozzer, of Harvard university.

DENIES HE ABANDONED SOUTH COVENTRY GIRL IN AUTO WRECK

Roderick H. King, a tobacco farmer of South Windsor, defendant in a suit for $10,000 for the death of Florence C. Boyea of South Coventry was on the witness stand in the superior court at Hartford Wednesday, when he gave testimony regarding the death of Miss Boyea in an automobile collision at South Glastonbury on August 1, 1923. The suit is brought by Arthur E. Boyea of South Coventry, administrator of his sister's estate.

King's testimony Wednesday was a contradiction of the story widely circulated at the time of the accident that he left the girl dying in the road while he hustled cases of liquor, which had been in his car, out of sight.

King's testimony was that after the collision with the Toret car his car turned over and he and Miss Boyea were under it. He crawled out when the car was lifted and assisted in carrying Miss Boyea into the gas filling station and remained there with her some twenty minutes until the arrival of the doctor. The girl died later in the hospital.

FUEL OIL IN DISFAVOR AMONG STATE EXECUTIVES

All but seven of the 47 state institutions and departments affiliated with the Connecticut Society of Executives were represented at the meeting of the society at the Connecticut hospital in Middletown this week.

There was a free exchange of views on matters relating to the institutions and departments with the view of assisting each in making advantageous purchases. Among those who took part in the discussions were John M. Wadhams of Goshen, the chairman of the state board of finance, Dr. Franklin S. Wilcox, superintendent of the Norwich state hospital, Superintendent George C. Erskine of the state reformatory at Middletown, Dr. La Moure of the institution for the feeble minded at Mansfield, Miss Caroline De F. Penniman of Long Lane farm at Middletown, Edward B. Boyd, the superintendent of the boys' school at Meriden, Deputy Comptroller Edward H. Wilkins, W. J. Tucker of the Mystic Oral school, Warden H. K. W. Scott of the Connecticut state prison, Dr. H. B. Campbell of the tuberculosis sanatorium at Norwich, Highway Commissioner John A. MacDonald and Superintendent Robert T. Hurley of the state police.

The purchase of automobile tires and inner tubes was discussed at considerable length. The question whether it was cheaper for institutions to purchase electricity or to generate it themselves was considered. Perhaps the most interesting subject discussed was that relating to the use of oil or coal for heating purposes. It was the general opinion that the use of oil as a fuel was, perhaps, not general enough to justify its adoption at the present time unless the local conditions were favorable to it.

The next meeting of the society will be held about the middle of April. Dairy and Pure Food Commissioner Thomas Holt has been assigned the duty of reading a paper on dairying in Connecticut at that meeting.

BROKE PELVIS BONE IN FALL WITH POLE

John J. Hafner of 12 Hedge avenue suffered a broken pelvis bone and other injuries Wednesday morning about 11 o'clock when a pole broke, throwing him to the ground. Mr. Hafner is employed by the Eastern Connecticut Power company and was working on a pole located at the end of the roadway leading to Fort Point on the edge of the Norwich State Hospital grounds, when the pole suddenly broke.

Word was sent to the state hospital and Dr. Franklin S. Wilcox, superintendent, responded, carrying the injured man to the hospital where first aid was given by Dr. Wilcox. The ambulance of the Backus hospital was called and Mr. Hafner was taken there and an X-ray was taken, showing the broken pelvis bone.

Dr. W. K. Tingley, attending physician, treated Mr. Hafner, who will be laid up for some time, as the injury is a serious one.

Dog Fails to Return

Friends of C. V. Pendleton are sympathising with him in the disappearance of his black and white bird dog Pete, which was such a constant attendant upon his master that he was almost as well known as Mr. Pendleton is in this county. Eight hours later the hound came back, but Pete has not been seen since and Mr. Pendleton fears that he may have been caught in a trap or possibly gone on the ice and been drowned. Mr. Pendleton would be glad to get word of his dog from any one who may have seen the animal.

Nora Fitzgerald, beloved wife of Frank Willey, died in Dover, N. J., Wednesday, Jan. 30th. Mrs. Willey was born in Ireland, but the greater part of her life had been spent in Greeneville, where she has many friends, who will no doubt mourn her loss. She had a loving disposition, her friendship was loyal and her loss is deeply felt by friends and relatives who survive her.

She was married to Mr. Willey in Norwich June 30th, 1909 by Rev. J. J. Smith.

Besides her husband she is survived by three sisters, Mrs. F. C. Bundy, Mrs. James Kearns of Norwich and Mrs. Frank Clish of Boston and three brothers, Andrew, Jeremiah and William Fitzgerald of Norwich.

Frank H. Potter

After an illness of long duration, which became serious about four months ago, the life of Frank H. Potter, formerly a resident of Norwich came to a close Tuesday at his home in Providence, R. I.

Mr. Potter was born in Norwich in 1856, the son of William P. and Sarah Potter, and received his early education in local schools, graduating from the Free Academy.

Later he entered the old Norwich bleachery where his father, William P. Potter, was superintendent, and and after remaining there for a number of years retired from work.

In Norwich in 1881 he was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Otis, the couple making their home on Central avenue, Greeneville, where they were attendants at th Greenevill Congregational church. About 15 years ago Mr. and Mrs. Potter moved to Providence, where they made their home until the present. He is survived by his wife and is the last of his immediate family. He leaves two nephews, Charles P. Potter of Boston, Mass., and Louis O. Potter of 224 Central avenue, Norwich. Mr. Potter will be remembered by the older residents of the city who will learn of his death with sorrow. The body is to be brought to the city for burial.

Miss Louise Wohlfarth

Many of the older Norwich residents learned with regret of the death on Sunday, December 30th, of Miss Louise Wohlfarth in Los Angeles, California.

Miss Wohlfarth was formerly a resident of Norwich but went to Los Angeles fourteen years ago, making her home at 1328 Curson avenue. With her sisters, she attended church and Sunday school on December 30th, and visited the home of a relative for dinner. Shortly after dinner she was seized with an attack, similar to ones she had suffered several times previous, but as this was of a more serious nature a physician and nurse was summoned. Later in the afternoon her condition was greatly improved and an automobile was used to take her home. She suffered another attack when on the way home and died before arriving there.

Miss Wohlfarth was born in Norwich, the daughter of Charles and Johanna Wohlfarth and was educated in local schools. While here she was a member of the Broadway Congregational church and was a regular attendant of the Buckingham Chapel. She was also a member of Charitable Circle, King's Daughter, of which at one time she was president.

Since going west Miss Wohfarth had often returned to Norwich to visit with friends. She spent last winter in New Jersey and the past summer in New London, making many trips to Norwich, where she met and was welcomed by her many friends.

She was a woman of sweet disposition and was loved by many friends in Norwich. The older residents will remember her as one who was ever willing to assist in every worthy cause.

Miss Wohlfarth is survived by two sisters, Miss Annie L. Wohlfarth and Miss Julia Wohlfarth, the latter a well known author of text books used in public schools throughout the country. Both reside at 1328 Curson avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

Mrs. Charles P. Gay

Following an illness of some duration the death of Mary Elizabeth Brennan, beloved wife of Charles P. Gay, occurred at her home at 428 Boswell avenue Wednesday evening at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Gay was born in Norwich 44 years ago, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Brennan, and the greater part of her life had been spent in Norwich where she was united in marriage with Charles P. Gay in the old St. Mary's church in 1900. Besides her husband she is survived by three brothers, Michael, James and Humphrey Brennan, all of this city.

SPEAKS ON AMERICA, THE LAND OF GREATNESS

America, the Land of Greatness, was the theme of Director Joseph W. Carlevale before a large gathering of new Americans Wednesday evening at the Norwich Americanization Institute.

In part he said:

You are soon to take the final steps to become citizens of the United States of America. I congratulate you most heartily. Practically every one of you has definitely decided to make this land your home for good. The Norwich Americanization Institute has aided you to the best of its ability to attain most of the education you have and I know that all of you are now able to read our American newspapers and books, thus familiarizing yourselves with the future welfare of this great nation.

America does not want you to forget the countries where you were born, nor your native language, customs and folklore, nor the brave deeds of your great men. But she does want you to have here a right start—a happy start, an intelligent start, a start worthy of the country where you were born and worthy of America. You cannot love our country if you do not know much about it. We want you to know the facts, the truth about the United States.

There are enemies in America who would tear down what has been built up. Those whose teachings would ruin your splendid prospects and make America an undesirable place for you and your children. America's enemies are your enemies; American friends are your friends. Listen to the man who builds up and avoid the man who tears down America. We want you to be satisfied, contented and industrious with us. We want to be satisfied, contented and industrious with you. Remember, this is the welcome real Americans give to you!

In becoming a citizen of this republic—you do not become a citizen of a dead old fashioned country—but a citizen of the greatest republic on earth—and although the youngest among nations, yet we seem the strongest—having not yet been defeated in any war, because it has always fought for justice and not for conquest.

The richest country in the world is the United States of America. Its total wealth is estimated to be $290,000,000,000. It has only 6 per cent of the world's population and 7 per cent of the world's area, yet it produces 20 per cent of the world's supply of gold, 25 of wheat, 40 of iron and steel, 40 of lead, 40 of silver, 50 of zinc, 52 of coal, 60 of copper, 60 of cotton, 62 of aluminum, 66 of oil, 75 of corn, 85 of automobiles. The United States has more miles of railroad than all Europe and Asia combined. Its total railroad mileage is 258,903 miles.

In this land of countless opportunities you are at liberty to continue to develop your God-given power in helping to make America a still greater nation than what it is. Be honest with yourselves, always encouraging; never discouraging. Be true, for liars lose out at the end and, remember, that hot air fills no pay envelopes. Remember that the man who does his level best, and who is conscious that he has done his best, is a success, even though the world may write him down a failure.

Let me name a few of the great Americans of foreign birth: Stephen Girard, Frenchman, became a millionaire; Louis Agassiz, Swiss, became a Harvard professor; Carl Schurz, German, became a soldier, political leader and journalist; Andrew Carnegie, Scotchman, a millionaire steel manufacturer; Auguste Sainte-Gaudens, Frenchman, a noted sculptor; Joseph Pulitzer, Hungarian, a publisher and owner of the New York World; Edward A. Steiner, Austrian, a minister, author, sociologist; Nikola Tesla, Croatian, a scientist; Alexis Carrel, Frenchman, a noted surgeon; Alma Gluck, Roumanian, a singer of world fame; Mary Antin, Russian, a noted author; Adolph J. Sabath, Bohemian, a congressman; Edward W. Bok, Dutchman, an influential publisher; Angelo Patri, Italian, a professor.

Of the 477 fellow-Americans of foreign birth as published in the 1920 Who's Who in America, meaning that they have won success, the following countries contributed most of them: Russia 74, Sweden 72, Austria Hungary 63, France 48, Norway 33, Holland 26, Italy 26, Denmark 25.

These became American citizens and were successful through hard work and the ambition to serve their fellowman. Real Americans appreciate how much of value these men and women brought from their own countries and contributed to the United States of America. Without them we could not have become as great as we are; without us they could not have become what they have.

Still Belligerent.

AMERICA NOW STANDS IN THIRD PLACE IN OLYMPIC GAMES; NORWAY IS LEADER

Chamonix, Jan. 30.—(By The A. P.)—Hockey, skiing, fancy skating and curling occupied the attention of contestants in the Olympic winter sports today. The Canadian hockey team defeated Switzerland, 22 to 0; England defeated Belgium, 20 to 3; the United States won from France, 22 to 0.

Thus Canada, by defeating the three nations opposed to her in the upper half of the draw has already earned the right to play against the winner in the lower half, in which the United States and England are tied for first place with three victories each. The tie will be broken tomorrow when these two teams meet for a decision.

A feature of today's games was the ski marathon race, in which thirty-four contested, representing eleven countries. The American skiers decided not to start because of lack of practice. The marathon was won by the Norwegian star, Thorleif Haug, who covered the fifty kilometers in three hours forty-four minutes and thirty-two seconds, remarkable time in the great snowdrifts in the mountains.

In this event, four Norwegians finished in the first four places, while Sweden captured the fifth and sixth place.

In the fancy skating competition for men, the final choice lay between Grafstrom of Sweden, and Boeckl of Austria, who were in the lead yesterday. When the set figures were contested today the competition comprised free figure skating, with the advantage on the side of the Swedish representative. Nathaniel W. Niles of Boston was awarded sixth place.

Great Britain defeated France in the curling competition and won the Olympic championship. Sweden was second and France third.

The standing of the nations at the end of the fifth day: Norway 71 1-2 points, Finland 67 1-2 points, United States 30, Sweden 19, England 16, Austria 15, Switzerland 14, France 11, Czechoslovakia 6, Canada 1—total 241.

Nine points have been cancelled by withdrawal of fifth and sixth places in the military competition and fourth, fifth and sixth in the curling competition.

Canada has given an impression of irresistible strength in all the hockey matches. The United States has done well, but in one period today against France faltered badly.

Manager Haddock read the riot act to the boys because he seemed to think they were content to fight for second place, which he told them was thoroughly un-American. They promised to show a brand of hockey against England tomorrow that would keep the spectators wide awake.

Niles' success in getting inside the first six in the fancy skating kept the United States in undisputed possession of third place, avoiding a tie with Sweden.

The teams in the hockey games tomorrow are paired as follows:

United States vs. England, 10 a. m.
Belgium vs. France, 11:30 a. m.
Sweden vs. Czechoslovakia, 2:30 p. m.

The only other event on Thursday's programme is the fancy skating for couples, in which Niles and Mrs. Blanchard represent the United States.

This year marks the eighteenth season that Springfield college has been represented by a gymnastic team and their favorable work has earned for them the reputation of being the leading gymnastic team of North America.

The team gives a program of wide variety, including all phases of physical education work, and their Norwich exhibition will be the same as the team is giving in many large cities this season, and includes drills, folk dances, gymnastic work, including the horizontal and parallel bars, flying rings and tumbling.

The team consists of fourteen men and is being coached by L. J. Judd, champion club swinger of Australia, who is a graduate of Springfield college and has been the coach of the team for the past four years. Coach Judd will participate in the program and give a demonstration of club swinging.

The entire program is such as will appeal to men, women and children, and indications point to a large attendance at the Springfield demonstration.

FAVORITES WIN PLACES IN HEIGHTS SEMI-FINALS

New York, Jan. 30. — Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, Wilmington, Del., Miss Martha Bayard, Short Hills, N. J., Miss Lillian Scharman, Brooklyn; and Miss Leslie Bancroft, Boston, ranking tennis stars, won their places in the semi-final round of the invitation indoor singles at Heights Casino today. All won in straight sets.

Miss Bancroft experienced stubborn opposition from Mrs. J. H. Taylor, formerly of Norfolk, Va., and Wilmington. The latter's vigorous style, her sizzling drives and skill at placing, extended Miss Bancroft before she won 7-5, 6-4. So shy did Mrs. Taylor employ her passing shots that she led 5-4 on games in the first set.

Miss Scharman defeated Mrs. H. Stuart Green, Ardsley, N. Y., 6-3, 6-3, in the fastest match she has been called upon to play so far in the tournament. Mrs. Green's cross courts and her quick change of pace and range kept her opponent galloping after recoveries.

Mrs. Jessup easily defeated Mrs. Bernard F. Tens, New York, 6-1, 6-2; while Miss Bayard overwhelmed Miss Rosamond Newton, Boston, 6-0, 6-0.

The best match in the doubles as the field narrowed to the semi-finals was that in which Mrs. Jessup and Miss Bancroft defeated Mrs. Edward W. Raymond and Mrs. Benjamin F. Briggs, of Pelham, N. Y., 6-3, 5-7, 6-2. It was the only contest of the day to go an extra set.

AMERICAN GIRLS' FIELD HOCKEY POOR IN ENGLAND

Cheltenham, England, Jan. 30.—(By The A. P.)—The All-American girls' Field hockey team which is touring England fared no better in its second match against English players, losing to the West of England Ladies' hockey team here today by a score of 20 to 4.

The English women proved to be a strong team, and Miss Lidderdale of Gloucester, who led the forwards, made 8 of the goals.

The early play was poor but improved as the game proceeded, and for a time things were even. Then the superior speed, stick work and combination of the English players proved too much for the American defense which crumpled hopelessly.

The half-time score was 5 to 1, after which occasional breakaways by the visitors allowed of their adding 3 more points while the English girls were making 12. The Misses Taylor, Cheston, Cadbury and Goodman each made a point for the American side.

M'TIGUE MUST GO THROUGH WITH BOUTS

New York, Jan. 30.—Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, who believed he was free of all contract obligations after purchasing his release recently from Joe Jacobs, his former manager, now finds that he is still obligated to fulfill conditions imposed under that agreement, including matches with Gene Tunney, Tom Gibbons and Ad Stone.

McTigue, according to information revealed today, automatically bound himself to fulfill the old contract when he removed it from Jacobs' hands, despite belief that it made him a free agent.

Jacobs had signed with Tex Rickard for fights with Gibbons and Tunney and for a match with Stone, the "fighting marine," at Philadelphia.

McTigue, it was said, would carry his latest fistic dilemma to the state athletic commission for an interpretation.

COOMBS TO BE GROOMED FOR SCOTT'S BERTH

New York, Jan. 30.—Earle Coombs, recently obtained by the New York Yankees from the Louisville Colonels for $50,000, will be used by Miller Huggins as an understudy for Everett Scott, according to a communication received from Huggins by Secretary Ed. Barrow today.

Huggins, who now is wintering at St. Petersburg, Fla., believes that he has a real find in Coombs and intends to give him every chance to break into major league company this year. Coombs, like George Sisler, is one of the few players to break into fast company straight from the college diamond.

Coombs starred in the outfield for Louisville last year but was said to be equally at home in the infield, where he played while in college.

DETROIT YACHT NAMED FOR NEW LONDON-BERMUDA RACE

Detroit, Jan. 30.—Skippered by a New Yorker, and manned by a crew of Detroiters, the yacht Lloyd W. Berry, flying the colors of the Bayview Yacht club of Detroit, will participate in the annual 700 mile ocean yacht race from New London, Conn., to Hamilton, Bermuda. Announcement that the yacht will represent Detroit in the longest ocean yacht race was made by W. H. Sheehan, commodore of the club.

Herbert M. Stone of New York, commodore of the Cruising Club of America, will navigate the boat in the race, which will start on June 1. The crew of the boat has not been selected. The yacht was entered in last year's race and finished tenth of the 21 entries.

SPRINGFIELD GYM TEAM

SEVERAL SURPRISES AT INDOOR TRACK MEET

New York, Jan. 30.—(By The A. P.)—Two smashing sprint victories by Loren Murchison, national sprint champion, and failure of Jois Ray, veteran Chicago distance runner, to score a double triumph tonight featured the closing program of the two night track and field carnival of the Millrose A. A. at Madison Square Garden.

Ray, who apparently has not yet hit the record breaking stride he reached a year ago, scored a decisive victory in the mile and a half run, but was badly beaten in his second race at two-thirds of a mile, finishing last and 100 yards behind Lloyd Hahn, Boston A. A.

Hahn's victory was almost an upset as was Ray's defeat, particularly as he conquered such middle distance cracks as Ray Watson, Illinois A. C., and Jimmy Connolly, Newark A. C., who holds the world's record for the distance. Ray was seven seconds behind his own world's mark in winning the mile and a half, but Hahn, who incidentally, hung up his second victory of the season over Alfred Dougherty Canadian, was clocked in but two-fifths of a second slower than Connolly's world's record of 2:43 3-5 for the two-thirds mile.

Murchison was but a fifth of a second short of equalling his own record in flashing across first in the 60-yard dash while his time in landing the 300-yard dash was only two-fifths of a second behind the mark held jointly by himself and Alan Woodring. Alan Helffrich, Penn State flash, also was less than a second from record time in capturing another feature event, the Millrose "600" for the second straight year.

Leroy Brown, former Dartmouth track captain, and H. M. Osborne of Chicago, all around champion and record holder, failed in attempts to better the high jump record of six feet five and three-quarter inches, set several days ago. They tied at 6 feet 5 inches.

"Y" SENIORS WIN FAST GAME FROM WANDERERS

The "Y" Seniors defeated the last Baltic Wanderers Wednesday evening at the local Y by the score of 24 to 18. The game was fast and exciting from start to finish, until the last few minutes the teams being separated by only a few points. However, as the game drew to a close the local Y spurted and piled up a comfortable margin. The work of Finlayson was of high order for the locals, and Simineau starred for Baltic. Williams contributed the thrill of the evening by dropping in a twin counter from the middle of the floor from a difficult angle. This shot brought the crowd to its feet. The summary:

SWEDISH SWIMMER HANGS UP NEW WORLD'S RECORD

Sydney, N. S. W., Jan. 30.—Ephraime Borg of Sweden broke the world's record for one mile today, swimming the distance in 23 minutes 34 seconds.

The previous world's records for the one mile swim have been, for open water, 23 minutes 39 4-5 seconds, held by Frank Beaurepaire of Australia, and for the tank, 22 minutes 30 1-5 seconds, held by Norman Ross of Chicago.

MULDOON IS RE-APPOINTED MEMBER OF N. Y. COMMISSION BY GOV. SMITH

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Governor Smith late today announced the appointment of former Assemblyman James A. Farley of Stony Point, Rockland county, and the re-appointment of William Muldoon of New York, as commissioners of the state boxing commission. At the same time he announced the resignation of William J. McCormack as chairman of the licensing commission with no appointment as yet to fill the vacancy.

Farley will succeed Frank Dwyer of Geneva, former member of the commission, whose term, with that of Muldoon, expired January 1.

George E. Brower of Brooklyn, will retain his membership on the commission for another year. Selection of a chairman for the commission, under its rules, lies in the hands of its members. The appointment of Farley now makes the commission democratic, with Muldoon the only republican member. Since he was last year's chairman, there is talk about the capitol that a change will be made in the chairmanship, but no indications as to the probable choice.

The governor declined to comment further on reports that with these appointments, there might be another attempt to repeal the Walker boxing law, which created the athletic commission, and against which there has been some agitation. Repeal or measures which have been introduced Wednesday will be made the subject of a hearing before the assembly ways and means committee.

The resignation of McCormack, the governor explained, was due to the press of business affairs which made it impossible for the licensing commission chairman to continue in that post.

"Now I suppose I will have to start a hunt all over again for a license committee chairman," the governor commented after announcing the resignation. This was taken to mean that he would retain both other members of the committee, in their present places, and name an entirely new chairman.

The reappointment today by Governor Smith of Wm. Muldoon as a member of the New York State Athletic commission was interpreted in ring circles tonight as a move designed to forestall increasing agitation to curb or abolish the Walker boxing law, under which the game is operated in this state.

Developments since the first of the year, when Muldoon's term expired and his withdrawal from the commission taken for granted are believed to have led the governor and boxing adherents among his advisers to reinstall the veteran commissioner as an evidence of executive effort to keep the game above possible suspicion.

This view was strengthened by the recent statement of Senator James J. Walker, father of the boxing law and democratic majority leader in the upper house of the legislature, that boxing "was shaking at its foundations and needs a Landis to save it". Senator Walker, as governor Smith's ostensible advisor on ring affairs, was believed to favor Muldoon's selection to meet the emergency he believes now exists.

JACKSON TESTIFIES IN OWN BEHALF IN SALARY SUIT

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 30.—Joe Jackson, who is suing the Chicago club of the American league for $16,500 alleged to be due him because of breach of contract by that organization, occupied the stand during the session of the trial here today.

Jackson detailed the signing of the contract which was for three years, and which he signed because he was advised by Harry Grabiner, secretary of the Chicago American league club, that he would be run out of organized baseball if he did not. Jackson also testified that he was told by the secretary that there would be no ten day clause in the contract.

Jackson related that being barred from organized baseball had cut his earning powers. In 1920 he testified he received $6,000 while in 1921 his earning power in baseball amounted to about $200. In 1922, he said, he had played "one or two games of baseball under an assumed name."

MISS COLLETT WINS WAY TO FINALS AT BELLEAIR

Belleair Heights, Fla., Jan. 30.—Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, defeated Mrs. G. H. Stetson of Huntington Valley today, six and five, in the semi-finals of the women's annual January golf tournament here.

Miss Collett's opponent in the final round tomorrow will be Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Merion cricket, who defeated Mrs. George R. Morse of Rutland, Vt., four and three.

Both finalists are former national champions and are expected to furnish an interesting contest. Mrs. Hurd played the best golf of the day. Getting around the course in 79 Miss Collett did not finish the bye holes in her match with Mrs. Stetson. She was out in 42 and not as steady as usual.

HOPES TO COMPLETE DETAILS FOR FIRPO-WILLS BOUT

Buenos Aires, Jan. 30.—(By The A. P.)—Hugh Gartland, representative of Luis Firpo, Argentine fighter, said today he hoped to complete all the details for the fight between Firpo and Harry Wills, the American negro heavyweight, prior to Firpo's sailing for New York. These details include the choosing of a referee and the arranging of the motion picture rights. Gartland is in daily cable communication with William McCarney, who is conducting the New York end of the negotiations for the proposed fight with the Raymond syndicate.

ADMIRER OF OUIMET WANTS WEARING APPAREL

Boston, Jan. 29.—From the gold coast of Africa an offer of barter has come to Francis Ouimet, former national open and amateur golf champion. Ouimet will send a felt hat, a sweater and a "hand watch" he is promised in return a ring, and some beads and the further opportunity to choose what he wants.

The letter, addressed to "F. Ouimet, Boston," and postmarked from Akrokerri, Gold Coast, went first to Boston, England, where a postal clerk scribbled on the envelope "try U. S. A." The writer signed himself "Kwame Amuah, cadet of head chief Atta Geyfie, Aburan," and began his letter.

"Dear Unknown Friend:

"I have the honor," he wrote, "most respectfully to inform you that I saw your name and address in a certain newspaper called the Manchester Guadian Weekly. So it pleases me when I saw your name and also I wish to write you to keep lively correspondence with you. Will you be pleased to send me a felt hat, sweater and a hand watch. I am eighteen years old and I will send you a ring and beads and after this try to choose what you want and write it to me by return mail, together with my request, as you knew I hope that you will not refuse my request. I have no more to say than my best compliments to you and household."

Ouimet intimated that he would comply with the request but would not commit himself as to whether he would wear the beads.

FAUVER RESIGNS AS HEAD OF WESLEYAN ATHLETICS

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 29—Dr. Edgar Fauver, head of the department of physical education at Wesleyan university, has resigned and his action will come before the board of trustees of the university at a meeting to be held in New York this afternoon. The resignation will be referred, it is expected to the executive committee of the board.

It is said that the under-graduate body for several years has favored separate coaching in the several branches of athletics and they were supported by the younger alumni. Dr. Fauver, however, according to alumni has advocated centralized control and even faculty control of athletics. The merits of the two systems—separate coaching in the major sports or the present departmental control—have been long discussed and the action of Dr. Fauver is expected to bring the controversy before the trustees for official review.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

The seventh annual women's national bowling championships will be held at the Central alleys, Indianapolis, beginning April 19.

Ted Lewis, the former British middleweight pugilistic champion, is about to come to this country. A number of English fighters are gathering in lots of American dollars.

One of the newest recruits of the New York Giants is Paul Florence, all-around athlete at Georgetown university. He is a catcher.

Miss Elizabeth Stine of Leonia, N. J., holds the new record's high jump record for women—4 feet 10 1-2 inches.

Laxity as to discipline is said to be the real reason for the break between Kid Gleason, former manager of the White Sox, and Owner Comiskey.

A boxing fan points out American referees have a hard job separating opponents in bouts. In England the referee does not enter the ring at all and controls the fighters from a raised seat outside the ropes. But they enforce the rules in England.

Alf Goullet, one of the leading six-day bicycle racers, has won 13 six-day tests during his extensive career. Eight times he has won in the United States and three times in Australia as well as once in Paris.

Another "impossibility" has dropped to the level of the commonplace—swimming the English Channel. Three turned the trick last year, and it is predicted more will do it next summer. The 1923 trio were Henry Sullivan and Charley Toth, Americans, and Enrique Tiraboccni, a South American.

United States Military academy will tackle three middle western football teams in succession opening next fall's season, namely Oct. 4, St. Louis university; Oct. 11, University of Detroit, and Oct. 18, Notre Dame university.

Joie Ray is undecided whether to specialize in the 1,500-metre or 5,000-meter race in preparation for the Olympic games which he is making his sole objective in this season's indoor campaign.

Manager Lee Fohl of the Boston Red Sox is pinning much hope on Outfielder Boone to come through for him. Boone, a great hitter in the minors, once received a short trial with the New York Giants. He is one of the biggest men to ever break into the majors, being over six feet and weighing well over 200 pounds.

A year ago Pancho Villa was the most popular midget in the game, due to his extreme willingness to battle in the ring. Now he is very unpopular, due to his unwillingness to battle. The Filipino hasn't met a worthwhile opponent in months and he persistently refuses to meet Frankie Genaro, who has beaten him twice.

With the exception of losing the title for only a single year, Willie Hoppe has held the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship for the last 18 years.

Despite his great work in the world series, Manager McGraw of the Giants says he doesn't expect much help from Artie Nehf the coming season. Nehf had trouble with his arm all last season, and did his greatest work of the year in the series, only to have his arm fail him in the crisis.

More indoor golf schools have been opened this winter than ever before in the history of the sport. Many noted professionals who formerly went south for the winter are remaining behind to act as instructors in these schools. One of the biggest of its kind in America is in Chicago, supervised by Bob MacDonald, siege gunner of the links.

The most celebrated golf team in America, Hagen and Kirkwood, have come to a parting of the ways—a temporary parting at least. Kirkwood has teamed up with MacDonald Smith, the California pro., while Hagen has gone elsewhere to find new golfing glories. Kirkwood is popular on the coast, due to his impressive showing in the California open last winter.

Coach Meanwell has been tutoring Wisconsin basketball teams since 1912. During the 12 seasons he has guided the court destinies of the Badgers his proteges have romped off with three championships, besides disputing as many others. In 1912 Wisconsin also tied for second place, while in 1915 and 1917 it finished in a tie for third.

All Coast League clubs have picked their training camps, Seattle being the last one to make a decision. Seattle will train at San Bernardino, Portland will be at Stockton, Salt Lake at Fresno, San Francisco at Boyes Springs, Oakland at Myrtledale Springs. Sacramento and Vernon will train at home and Los Angeles players will divide their time between hime and Catalina Island.

The annual effort to obtain passage of a bill in the Massachusetts legislature permitting cities and towns to decide for themselves whether or not they shall allow baseball games on Sundays is being made. All that is asked is that the city or town be allowed to vote yes or no, but the fanatics and crooks who rule in the legislature don't seem disposed to grant even that measure of government.

President Ban Johnson has expressed the opinion that the American League will join in no movement to have the ten per cent amusement tax on baseball admissions abolished. The idea of the league is, according to Johnson, that the fans don't object to the tax so long as the government needs the money; that at any rate they'd rather ante up than see the soldiers lose their promised bonus.

Jack Dunn of Baltimore temporarily has forgotten baseball and all other woes. He entered one of his, pointer dogs, Dan Woolton's Dauntless, in the all-American derby held in North Carolina and won the grand qiam with his hound. Dauntless had won about everything he ever has been entered in and is now recognized as about the premier bird dog of the country. Naturally Jack is a bit proud.

William E. Friel, business manager of the St. Louis Browns, was called to Providence, R. I. last week by the death of his brother, Patrick Friel. The dead man was one of a family of ball players and quite famous in his day. He was the oldest of the Friel brothers and retired from baseball some 30 years ago. He played in the old International, which later become the Eastern League and now is again known as the International.

One thing decided at the meeting of the Pacific Coast League moguls on January 14 at Oakland was to open the season a week, or near a week, later, the date fixed being April 8. The season will run a week longer than the fall, closing in mid-October. It was announced at this meeting that William Veeck, president of the Chicago Clubs, had sold his holdings in the Los Angeles Club to Joe Patrick, and that Patrick now holds controlling interest in the club.

As a result of the mix-up in the Pacific Coast League when it briefly boasted of two presidents and Secretary Farrell had to temporarily take charge of affairs, at least one case of a player has gone to Judge Landis. It is that of Carl Sawyer, Vernon asked waivers on him, thought it had them, and sold him to Wichita. Now Sawyer claims two clubs did not waive in the general confusion and he protests to Landis about the demotion, alleging that he can obtain employment in the Coast League.

Petitions to place the name of Gov. Al Smith, of New York, in the Illinois presidential primaries were circulated in Chicago.

He stated that he was ignorant of the strength of the cider and that when he purchased it he was assured that its alcoholic strength would not increase with age.

That land known as Caulkins park near Riverview avenue has been flooded that a place may be provided for skaters, but the grass was not mown on the land before the water was turned so that there are clumps of brush showing for skaters to be wary of.

There are more vacant tenements in New London now than have been reported here in several years.

All hope for an ice crop just at present vanished today when a warm temperature prevailed and there was every indication of rain. The dealers have five to six inches of ice on the ponds, but that is not sufficient as the ice depreciates two inches or more from the time it is cut until it gets to the consumer, and six-inch ice would be too thin to cut now. The dealers are quite discouraged because there are few years when February cutting is possible.

Kelsey, 16 year old Waterford girl, taken into custody together with Harold Brand, also of Waterford when the couple were found living together in Groton, several weeks ago, at which time Brand was held for trial at the next term of the superior court on a technical statutory charge, will be taken into custody again tomorrow morning charged with being incorrigible and in danger of falling into ways of vice. This evening the girl was observed in conversation with Brand, who is at liberty on a $10,000 bond and believing that Brand might be tampering with a witness of the state, it was decided to arrest the girl and cause her to be placed where she cannot be interfered with, nor discuss the case in which Brand is involved. The information has been lodged with Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton, the state police, Public Defender C. L. Stewart of Norwich and County Detective William Lewis. Joseph Vodwarka, 93, died today at a private hospital on Vauxhall street where he had been a patient for a couple of years. Mr. Vodwarka was a Bohemian and came to this country in 1849 before the outbreak of the republican. He was an upholsterer and cabinet maker and in his early years here was employed by Henry Speyer, than the leading undertaker, and later by Comstock and Smith who were the leading furniture dealers in the city. Afterwards Mr. Vodwarka entered the employ of the late Joseph Hammond, an undertaker, and remained with him many years. His last work was with F. H. Parmelee, a picture framer, whose place of business now is on Chester Street building.

Mr. Vodwarka was something of a genius, had many friends and was a most companionable man. It was his practice to go to Europe every five years, up to the breaking out of the war with Germany, when he abandoned that custom. He was a member of Brainard lodge and of Palestine commandery, K. T. His funeral is to be from the Masonic Temple. Mr. Vodwarka served with a Missouri regiment throughout the Civil war.

The Masonic club gave a ladies' night at the club house on Huntington street this evening when a musical program of excellence was rendered by local entertainments. The club is showing greater activity than ever and is growing in membership.

At times cars are left near the corners of streets where they are a danger to persons who attempt to cross and find that they are stepping in front of an oncoming machine. A Bogrant case was called to the attention of the authorities this evening at Bank and Howard streets, and that case will probably bring a decision as to whether the automobiles are to be allowed to park.

RAYMOND LA FONTAINE WRITES OF CATHOLICITY IN NORWICH

Raymond G. La Fontaine, of Norwich, a student in philosophy at the Catholic University, Washington, D. C., in the course of his studies there recently prepared the following sketch of the development of Catholicity in Norwich.

The founding of Norwich, picturesque spot in eastern Connecticut at the junction of the Shetucket and Yantic rivers, which form the Thames dates from its purchase from the Mohegan Indians in 1659. Its pioneer settlers were Early Puritans. As far as can be ascertained with any degree of probability, the first resident Catholic were numbered among the native Indians, about 1680.

This supposition arises from the finding of an old Indian cemetery, during the removal of a sand hill in this vicinity. With the digging up of the graves stone brass rings were discovered with turf hearts engraved on each and glass bottles partly filled with water. The two hearts are thought to represent those of Jesus and Mary, and it is presumed that the water in the bottles was holy water. These Indians had acquired their faith in southern Europe, whither a group of them had gone on a sailing vessel which later had made its way up the Thames river to the port of Norwich. Seventeen of their number are supposed to have returned from Europe as Catholics and to have settled in Norwich.

We next hear of Catholics at Norwich, in January 1756. Prior to this date the peaceful Acadians were ruthlessly torn from their homes in Nova Scotia by an edict of the English government and deported in groups to ports all along the Atlantic shore. About 400 Acadians were landed at New London, nineteen of them being assigned to Norwich, 12 miles upstream and here this pitiful band of oppressed religious people found strength to endure their enforced exile from Him Who allows His chosen to be afflicted with heavy crosses. They remained until 1767, when they were taken to Quebec by Captain Richard Lottingwell, along with their priest.

With the passing of years we find, in 1778, an encampment of a part of Rochambeau's gallant Hussars in the vicinity of Norwich. Illness forced the soldiers to remain, and as they had a chaplain, Abbe Robin, it is quite probable that the holy sacrifice of the mass was offered.

November 14, 1788, found Rev. John Thayer, a former Congregationalist minister, now a Catholic missionary, addressing an audience in a Congregational meeting house on the subject of the Catholic church being the only true church of Christ. A few days later he delivered another discourse in this same meeting house This incident shews the growing broad-mindedness of the people, and the lessening of the hostility hitherto displayed toward Catholicity.

In 1809 another band of refugees, this time from San Domingo, was brought to New London as prisoners of war. Some of these were sent to Norwich, among them, Jean Pierre Boyer, later the president of the republic of Haiti. The prisoners were treated with compassionate kindness in Norwich, and the Catholics among them were allowed the practice of their religion. The following year the government condemned their capture and they were transported back to their native homes.

No knowledge of any Catholic in Norwich is on record from this time until 1831, when tradition holds that Father Fitton, the great pioneer priest of New England, paid a visit to the few Catholics then in Norwich. He came again in 1832. Later, at the dedication of St. Patrick's church, Father Fitton spoke of the early days, saying in substance: "A pastor (himself) once had for his parish the district lying between Boston and New York, and was occasionally called to visit the sick in New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island, and while thus traveling abroad in 1837, he discovered two or three Catholics in Norwich. But he noticed that where you found one Catholic, you would soon find another, and so here they went on increasing until there were twelve, when a priest first came here and offered mass in a house."

In 1839 when Fr. Fitton was transferred to Worcester, he would come now and then, saying mass and ministering to his people. But an important event happened about this time which greatly increased the Catholic population and made the need of a church and pastor more and more urgent. This was the building of the Norwich & Worcester railroad, from 1838-1840, which project attracted many Irish laborers. During the building of the road, Fr. Fitton came often and held religious services on the Norwich road, "in shanties or in groves, and but few permanent stations were established."

By 1844 Fr. Fitton had decided that it was time to erect a suitable house of worship to care for the growing needs of his people. His first move in the city had been said in the third story of an old house, so weak that the congregation feared they would fall through into the cellar. This fear alone hurried the people to the purchase of a lot in the central part of the city at a place called "Toomey Town." This lot was bought in 1844 for $900, and the foundations of the new church were laid in September of the same year. The church was sufficiently completed by Dec. 25, 1844, to allow the offering of the holy sacrifice of the mass, in the presence of a congregation of 250. The building was finished four months later and dedicated in honor of the blessed mother, as St. Mary's. The approximate cost of the church was $1,900.

In May 1848, Fr. Fitton left St. Mary's and the church was then attended successively by Rev. John Brady and Bishop Tyler, a cousin of Rev. Virgil Barber, a convert. Bishop Tyler in 1848 gave the care of St. Mary's to the priests of Holy Cross college, Worcester, until 1851, when due to the rapidly increasing number of converts, Fr. Daniel Kelly became the first resident pastor of St. Mary's with a congregation of 3,000. In 1854 he enlarged the church, and up to the time of his departure in 1866 made his life one with that of his flock. The highest words of praise for the work done and expressions of sympathy at his leaving, were heard from Catholics and Protestants alike.

He was succeeded by Rev. Peter Kelly, who served only one short year, but that full of activity. He saw his church was becoming inadequate for the needs of his fast growing congregation, and looking about for a suitable site, decided that Church street, a bluff overlooking the harbor, offered as good a spot as any. Accordingly, he purchased two lots there for $10,000, and on March 17, 1867, he broke ground for what he intended should be St. Patrick's church. However, his plans were interrupted by the ecclesiastical authorities who failed to see the suitability of Church street as a site. The undertaking was abandoned, and work on the property was given up.

Rev. Bernard Tully was the next pastor, but he remained only a few months and was followed by Rev Michael Tierney, chancellor of the diocese, who later became bishop of Hartford. He relinquished the pastorate January 20, 1868, to the Rev. Daniel Mullin, formerly chaplain of the 9th regiment, Connecticut Volunteers.

To Fr. Mullin accrues the credit of finally commencing the building of St. Patrick's church. The need of a new church was imperative and Fr. Mullin realized this. Evidently the parishioners were aware of the fact, too, for it was the one topic of conversation among them. Many were the speculations as to where the edifice would be erected, and it was common talk that the new church would be the grandest building yet reared in the state. A few years passed and people began to lose interest in their cherished project. But Fr. Mullin was only biding his time until a favorable opportunity should present itself. When, at length, he announced that he had purchased some property at a cost of $17,000, all saw that he had acted in their best interests, for the property concerned was in the most beautiful section of Norwich on Broadway, and an ideal center for his parish scattered throughout the city, and the suburbs of Thamesville and Yantic. The property is said to have been bought indirectly by Fr. Mullin through one of his parishioners, as the owners would not sell did they think a Catholic church would be erected on the spot.

The ground for the new church was broken March 17, 1876, Very Rev. James Hughes, V. G., taking out the first shovelful of earth. It was a momentous occasion, the pastor, city officials, and a great concourse of people witnessing the event. Fr. Mullin deemed it necessary to start a building fund at once to insure the success of the undertaking. Up to Good Friday, April 7, 1871, the fund had had an auspicious beginning and on that date the church was finally started. A parade was held, the procession marching to the new grounds. Behind the bands of music came some wagons filled with picks, shovels, etc., and then came men of the congregation to commence the digging of the foundations, with church societies winding up the procession. The cellar was excavated in three days, and work was immediately started upon the foundations.

On the thirteenth of July 1873, under the patronage of St. Patrick, the corner stone was laid, before thousands of onlookers. A collection was taken which netted $10,000, an immense sum in those days. This liberality must have been most gratifying to the pastor showing him that the people were supporting his venture. Work on the church was pushed forward rapidly, but Fr. Mullin's eyes were destined never to gaze upon the completed structure. That happiness and joy of opening a new church he was not to experience. In the midst of his labors God suddenly called him, on the thirty-first of March, 1874. Fr. Mullin's trials in this life were ended. His sorrowing congregation wished to have their pastor buried in Norwich, but in accordance with Fr. Mullin's wishes, he was buried with his relatives in Mt. St. Benedict's Cemetery, Hartford. At the time of his death, the church was roofed in, the walls erected, and the towers finished to the height of the ridge pole.

Rev. P. F. Shalloo was the next pastor at Norwich, taking up his duties on March 17, 1874. He entered wholeheartedly into the building of the edifice and was privileged to usher up the first mass in the new church, just one year following his arrival in Norwich. Sunday March 21, 1875, the Catholics of Norwich, their hearts filled with pride and thanksgiving at the sight of their new church, crossed its threshhold and witnessed the first Holy Sacrifice of the Mass in St. Patrick's Church. All felt fittingly rewarded for their many sacrifices.

September 28, 1879 the solemn ceremony of dedication was performed. Rt. Rev. Bishop McMahon was in charge of the dedicatory services assisted by Very Rev. T. Walsh, V. G., and Very Rev. P. V. Kavanaugh, C. M. The affair had assumed the proportions of a gala day for all Norwich, and a procession of 5,000 marched from St. Mary's to St. Patrick's, preceding the ceremony at the church. Inside this edifice, where 3,500 worshippers thronged every nook and corner of the beautiful, cathedral like structure, Bishop McMahon blessed the church and then celebrated Solemn Pontifical Mass. His Eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, delivered the sermon, his text being taken from the 4th Chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians. He spoke of the magnificent structure, so vast in proportion, so harmonious in detail, which was to be consecrated to the service of God as a symbol of the unity and harmony of the Catholic Church. He spoke of the perfect harmony, unity and concord which pervade the celestial system, as a type of the spiritual harmony that should prevail in the church. It is counseling to reflect that in the Catholic Church was found that concord—all walking together in patience, supporting one another in charity, as one body with one spirit, one law, one faith, one baptism, one God.

In the evening Solemn Pontifical Vespers were celebrated by Bishop McMahon, the big edifice being illuminated by 1,400 gas jets, which brought out hidden beauties in the architecture that daylight failed to reveal. The church that evening presented the most beautiful spectacle seen in Connecticut up to that date. Bishop Shanahan, of Harrisburg, delivered the sermon of the evening and he was followed by Rev. James Fitton, the missionary pioneer, through whose efforts the first church in Norwich had been erected. Fr. Fitton, then a priest of 52 years' service in Christ's vineyard, recounted many interesting events in the early days of Catholicity in Norwich. He closed by paying a handsome tribute to the state, and to the zeal and energy that had characterized the Catholics of this town.

After the evening services, Judge William H. Shields delivered an address of welcome to the visiting pre-

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

Now She Can Walk

"I'm Happy," Says Peterson

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big-hearted rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment.

"Read this letter by Mrs. Albert Boutchard. It seems like a miracle but it is true, every word of it.

"Is it any wonder I am happy?"

Dear Sirs:

"I was a sufferer from an old running sore and ulcer. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars worth I am cured. The ulcer was 4 inches by 6 1-2 inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's Ointment.

"You may use this to recommend your Ointment if you wish. It cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Boutchard, Lambertville, N. J. Price $1.25.

Railroad locomotive engineers have made complaints recently to headquarters of the New Haven railroad that serious accidents have been avoided by scant margins, due to trespassers on railroad tracks between the West Broad street, and the Pawcatuck railroad bridges. Following up these complaints railroad authorities Tuesday afternoon sent three railroad policemen here. Between 5 and 6 o'clock p. m., Frederick V. Burdick and Arthur York, of Pawcatuck, and Norman Niblins and Pietro Parmolee, of Westerly, were turned over to Patrolman Francis McMahon who served them with a summons to appear in Stonington town court Wednesday to answer to a charge of trespassing. Wednesday morning, before Judge William A. Wilcox and A. A. Martin, clerk, the men were presented by Prosecuting Attorney George R. McKenna on the trespassing charge. The men pleaded guilty and were fined $1 and costs, amounting in all to $11.68, which each paid. The railroad detectives were Capt. Charles Kelly, Martin, Kane and Greene. The fifth trespasser who was served with a summons failed to make his appearance and a warrant has been issued for his arrest. It is hoped by railroad authorities that trespassers who have been using the railroad and river bridge for highway purposes will take the longer and safer route, by way of Broad street or Stillmanville bridges and thus save themselves and the railroad engineers trouble.

The second in the series of lectures on the Bible, given by Rev. John J. Keane, under the auspices of St. Michael's church, Connecticut Council of Catholic Women, was held Tuesday evening in the parish hall. About 75 women attended the opening lecture one week ago but a greater number was present Tuesday. Last week the Bible as a whole was considered, the subject of Tuesday night's lecture was based on the Book of Genesis, Did God Create Man or Monkey? and the fallacy of the theory of evolution was exposed.

U.S. STEEL FEATURED MARKET

New York, Jan. 30.—Heavy profit-taking and bear selling checked the sharp upward movement which set in at the opening of today's stock market on the unexpected declaration last night of an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock of the United States Steel corporation and the publication of the best quarterly earnings statement since 1918. With a few notable exceptions, the best prices of the day were recorded in the first half hour when the net gains in active issues ranged from 1 to 6 points. So great was the subsequent selling that the averages showed but little change on the day.

Trading in U. S. Steel common, which comprised about one-tenth of the day's business of approximately one and one-quarter million shares, was the outstanding feature. The first recorded sale was a block of 7,000 shares at 106, up 2 3-4. The next was 1500 at 105 3-4. A further recession took place later but renewed buying sent the price up again around noon to 107, the highest since last April. In the late afternoon it slipped back to 105 1-2 up to 2 1-2, the lowest price of the day being 105 1-4. Bethlehem and Republic Steel moved up about a point.

Professional bear traders, who have been offering stocks freely on the theory that a technical reaction was due, were in a state bordering on a panic when the market opened. In their rush to "cover" they bid stocks up on themselves 1 to 3 points. However, they were quick to take advantage of the temporary lull, when the top prices were reached at the end of the first thirty minutes and therefore delivered repeated attacks particularly against such issues as American Woolen and National Lead which had failed to participate in the opening bluge.

Davison Chemical, which jumped nearly six points to 58 the first sale, subsequently broke to 50 1-2, and then rallied to 53 3-8 up 1 1-4. American Woolen was depressed to 69 1-3 on reports of poor trade conditions. Weakness of National Lead, which closed 5 1-4 points lower at 148, was attributed to the announcement of President Cornish that no change in the dividend and no stock dividend had been considered, setting at rest rumors to that effect. Rubbers were freely sold on the announcement of cuts in tire prices.

Oils were relatively strong, following another 25 cent advance in Pennsylvania crude prices. American Can was again active and strong, touching a new top for all time at 126 7-8. Other strong spots included U. S. Alcohol, Mackay companies, Willys Overland preferred, Phillips Petroleum, Atlantic Refining and Associated Dry Goods, up 2 to 5 points.

Southern Railway also established a record price at 44 7-8. Good buying was noted in Atchison, New York Central and Union Pacific, but early gains were not maintained. Other stock in that group were inclined to be sluggish.

Trading in the foreign exchanges was quiet with fluctuations narrow and irregular. Demand sterling was off a cent @ 4.25 1-2, but French francs held fair steady around 4.59 cents.

Call money opened at 4 1-4 and then advanced to 41-2 in reflection of increased month end requirements for funds. Time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with no change in rates.

CURB MARKET

New York, Jan. 30.—Reactionary price movements continued to characterize trading in today's curb market although there were a few individual strong spots in the oil group. Particularly Magnolia Petroleum which advanced 3 1-2 points on reports that the Standard Oil Co., of New York, which owns about half the common stock, was preparing to assume full control.

Oil shares in general failed to respond to higher Pennsylvania crude and gasoline prices. Buckeye Pipe broke 9 points on a further reduction to $1 in the quarterly dividend, the last payment having been $1.50 and the three prior to that, $1.75 each. Standard Oil of Nebraska, Solar Refining, Crescent Pipe, South Pacific Oil and New Yorw Transit moved up 1 to 3 1-2 points. The heavy spots included Imperial of Canada, Ohio Oil, Prairie Oil & Gas and Galena Signal, all off a point or more.

A drop of 2 1-2 points in Glen Alden coal on a turnover of 300 shares and a slump of 1 1-8 in Dubilier Radio were the only features of hte industrial list, which fluctuated within a narro wand irregular range.

A drop of 2 1-2 points in Glen Alden coal on a turnover of 300 shares and a slump of 1 1-8 in Dubilier Radio were the only features of the industrial list, which fluctuated within a narrow and irregular range.

BOND MARKET

New York, Jan. 30.—Bond prices generally held firm today, with U. S. government nad treasury issues maintaining their recent strength, and Serbian, Jugoslav and City of Greater Prague bonds rallying sharply on the negotiation of favorable treaties with Italy.

Renewed activity in the Liberty second and fourth 4 1-4's was attributed to a resumption of British buying, which always is centered on these issues. Prices were unchanged at the close but there was a heavy turnover both in these and in the treasury notes which advanced a new high level for the year.

In other sections of the market convertible issues were in greatest demand, influenced by the gains in stock prices. Baltimore & Ohio convertibles moved up, but dropped back from the high point of the day at the close, along with other railroad issues as stock receded from their high levels.

Reactionary tendencies were checkmated in the Virginia Carolina Chemical issues on trade that opening of the fertilizer season was bringing good buying orders, but unfavorable earnings reports sent some of the traction liens lower.

Award of $5,000,000 Philadelphia school bonds to a local banking syndicate, it was said, would be followed by an early offering. Bankers also were reported almost ready to sell $10,000,000 Union Electric Light & Power company of St. Louis bonds.

Offering of the Buenos Aires $8,490,000 loan was oversubscribed and the books closed on the issue early in the afternoon. Announcement was made that the bureau of insular affairs would open bids on February 5 for a $3,000,000 issues of 5 per cent. Porto Rico public improvement bonds.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Wheat displaced corn today in the matter of leadership toward higher prices. There was a marked change of sentiment regarding wheat, and with offerings readily absorbed wheat prices advanced to the best figures in several weeks. Wheat closed unsettled at 3-8c to 1 1-8 a 1 1-4 net advance. May $1.10 3-8 to 1.10 1-2 and July $1.08 7-8 to $1.09. Corn finished weak, 1-2c to 7-8c net lower, oats unchanged to 3-8c up, and provisions unchanged to 7c down.

Influenced to some degree by prospects of financial relief for wheat producers in the northwest, wheat showed an upward tendency from the outset, and the market at no time went under the previous day's close. One of the largest traders on the bull side said wheat had been showing wonderful resistance to selling pressure, and had scored a substantial advance since January 10, the traditional date for calendar speculators to take to the bear side. He asserted that there was no burdensome supply in this country, and that should anything adverse happen to the new crop, which was starting out with a considerable decrease in acreage, the result would be a sharp upheaval in price.

The fact that wheat was on the upgrade and that oats today reached a new high price record for the season helped give temporary strength to corn. Scantiness of oats arrivals formed the principal bullish factor as to that cereal. On the other hand, country offerings of corn were said to show an increase. Commission house buying of future deliveries of corn here showed lessened force, and it was said mild weather was curtailing demand from feeders.

Provisions were governed largely by the course of hog values.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking, according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. —(Adv.)

At the Congregational church in Canterbury Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, Miss Hilda Grab, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Grab of Canterbury, and William Veit of Plainfield were united in marriage by Rev. Ralph Knight, pastor of the church. The maid of honor was Miss Zena Veit, sister of the groom and the best man was Charles Grab, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony which was attended by many friends and relatives, a wedding reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Grab, parents of the bride. Many useful and beautiful presents were received by the bride. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Veit will reside in Plainfield, living in the same house with Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Burdick, occupying the first floor. Mathewson, in charge.

Plainfield High school court experts defeated the Woodstock Academy quintet, at the Plainfield Community House Tuesday evening in a rather one-sided game, 38-17. The Plainfield boys played their usual stellar game, and although the Woodstock boys fought gamely until the final whistle, they could not hope to triumph over the brilliant floorwork, the fast passing, and the superior shooting of the Plainfield aggregation.

Plainfield is now getting in trim for her battle with Killingly High team, Friday night. This promises to be an interesting game, since there is no love lost between the two teams. Plainfield is in the best trim possible, and indications point to a win.

What's Best for a Bad Stomach?

Nine-tenths of all stomach trouble—indigestion, sourness, gas, pain, heartburn, etc., are caused by an excess of acid in the stomach.

Artificial digestants such as pepsin, are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids, and instead neutralize the acid that has upset your stomach with a spoonful or two tablets of pure Bisurated Magnesia, taken with a little water. This instantly sweetens the stomach and stops the pain and discomfort and your food digests as nature intended. For quick positive relief from Acid Stomach on the church, and changed the old rectory at St. Mary's church into a primary school, to accommodate 150 children.

Nov. 26, 1907, the care of St. Patrick's was entrusted to Rev. Hugh Treanor. Simultaneously with his arrival, St. Mary's lost its character of a mission and became a parish with Fr. James J. Smith as pastor. It may be added that the Sacred Heart Chapel at Norwich Town which was begun by Fr. Kennedy and served by priests from St. Patrick's parish, was dedicated during Fr. Treanor's pastorate. From the outset, Fr. Treanor turned all his efforts towards reducing the debt of over $40,000 on the church. Not only was he successful in this undertaking but he built a new convent as well, enlarged the cemetery by the purchase of Sachem Park and had rebuilt the organ in the choir gallery. Around 1910 he replaced the three wooden altars with imported marble altars, and redecorated the interior of the church, at a cost of $12,000.

In 1911 Fr. Treanor began preparations for the consecration of his church. To this date no church in eastern Connecticut had achieved the signal honor of being consecrated wholly to the service of God, unencumbered by so much as one cent of debt. Fr. Treanor's work was to be amply recompensed.

The 26th of September 1911, witnessed this solemn and joyful event. The consecration ceremonies were performed by Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan Bishop of Hartford, who began at seven a. m. Shortly after ten o'clock the doors were thrown open and 3,500 parishioners out of a congregation of 5,000 crowded the edifice. Representatives from all the city churches together with city officials were in attendance. At half past ten o'clock the procession of altar boys, priests and three bishops moved from the sacristy, to the accompaniment of joyful Hosannas swelling forth from a choir of fifty voices, under rthe direction of the organist, Prof. Frank L. Farrell.

Rt. Rev. Thomas D. Beaven, D. D., nephew of Rev. Daniel Kelly, the first resident pastor of Norwich, was the celebrant of the Pontifical High Mass. Rt. Rev. Louis J. Walsh, D. D., bishop of Portland, Maine, delivered the sermon. He touched on the glorious heritage of the Catholic people in their faith, the obligations of holiness, the knowing of the Church by her fruits, the testimony of history as to the part Catholics played in the development of the country, and concluded with a touching passage on the faith of the early pioneers.

In the evening solemn vespers was celebrated by Rev. John T. Ryan, of Hartford, Rev. Terrence J. Sheahy of New York preached before an immense audience.

Now that his active work in Norwich was at an end, Fr. Treanor began to look about for new fields to conquer. In 1913 leaving his beautiful church property valued at $500,000, he was transferred back to the Sacred Heart Parish of Waterbury and was succeeded at Norwich by Rev. John H. Broderick. Fr. Broderick was continually improving the church and its property. Particularly noticeable among his additions to the church are two marble statues of angels bearing candelabra aloft. These statues are mounted on highly ornamental marble bases and are placed within the sanctuary. Fr. Broderick also had the church wired for electric lights. He had the convent chapel beautifully redecorated and adorned with memorial windows.

In the fall of 1920 his health started to fail and April 20, 1921, the beloved pastor breathed his last. He is buried with his kin in St. Joseph's cemetery, Willimantic.

At the time of Rev. M. H. May's appointment to St. Patrick's Church, St. Mary's Parish under the direction of Rev. W. A. Keefe was launching a campaign to erect a new memorial church. To finance the building of the new church, St. Patrick's Parish was divided, and 750 of its members were transferred to St. Mary's. In order to offset the decrease in revenue caused by the division of the parish, Fr. May inaugurated an annual lawn party at St. Patrick's. A sum of about $3,000 is now derived yearly from this lawn fete.

Fr. May continued to improve the church property. He completely renovated the interior of the parish school, also equipped it with new fire escapes. He is much interested in the church organizations and under his direction the societies have progressed rapidly.

At the present time, Fr. May is assisted in the work of the parish by Rev. Myles P. Galvin, and Rev. Rocco J. Guerriero.

The church property consists of an entire square and is one of the show points of interest to strangers, thousands annually visiting the church. The grounds all about the church, school, rectory, and convent are beautified by shrubbery and flowers. Norwich parishioners feel justly proud in showing their church and grounds and they give thanks to God for the sturdy pioneers in the parish, who, at great sacrifices, made possible St. Patrick's Church.

lates, and the Norwich City Band gave a concert. These exercises brought to a close a day memorable to these parishioners whose unstinting sacrifice and labor had brought about the erection of this beautiful house of worship one of the greatest in New England.

The style followed in the building of the church is Gothic; the outer structure is made of Monson granite which turns softer and whiter with the passing years. From front to rear the church measures 210 feet, and 100 between the side walls. Three large towers adorn the front, the highest is 216 feet, exclusive of the cross and its pedestal. The interior is simple and spacious, the pews alone seating 2,000. Within the sanctuary were originally three wooden altars which have recently been replaced by marble altars. James Murphy, of Providence, was the architect.

St. Patrick's Parish became the resident parish and St. Mary's was known as a mission, priests from St. Patrick's saying mass there. Fr. Shahan's pastorate, besides the completion of the church, saw other improvements. The energetic pastor purchased the present parochial residence next to the church and turned the old rectory into a school. He later erected St. Patrick's parochial school at a cost of $43,000, built a convent, graded the church grounds and put in walks, thereby greatly increasing the beauty and value of the church property.

After fourteen years of vigorous service, Fr. Shahan was transferred to another field of labor.

Rev. Peter M. Kennedy assumed charge of the parish, February 1, 1893. Although he remained but five years, he greatly reduced the indebtedness

NORWICH ROTARY FUND FOR BOYS' WORK HAS GROWN TO NEARLY $1,500

The last meeting of the month being devoted to business matters the Norwich Rotary Club on Wednesday noon held an enthusiastic meeting at which a large amount of business was transacted and plans for the coming year briefly outlined. President Charles A. Saxton presided at the meeting and Dr. Hugh B. Campbell was the song leader.

Among the several guests was E. Howard Baker Jr., of New York, a charter member of the Norwich club. "Howie" was warmly greeted and the members of the club, recalling his excellent tenor voice, promptly demanded a solo, Howard responding with one of his old time favorites. During the meeting President Saxton called Mr. Baker to the head table where he presented him with a fountain pen saying that the club hoped Howard would make use of the pen in keeping in touch with the local club. Howard briefly responded, speaking of his pleasant connections with the club, of which he was the first secretary.

One new member, Edward W. Jewett, was welcomed into the club and extended the right hand of fellowship by President Saxton.

Henry J. LaFontaine rendered two very pleasing solos in his usual fine voice.

At the business session there were reports by chairmen of the various club committees. Among the reports was one given by Charles R. Butts relative to the Dr. John S. Blackmar Boys' Work fund, which Mr. Butts said was close to the $1,500 mark at the present time and steadily growing. Considering the steady growth of the fund the club voted to have a committee appointed to draw up rules governing the use of the fund and Judge Nelson J. Ayling, Arthur M. Brown, Charles A. Saxton, William G. Park and Charles R. Butts were named as the committee. L. M. Carpenter reported for the local committee for the spring conclave at New Britain.

Secretary J. Nelson Weymouth gave a very encouraging report on the club attendance and urged that with the attendance contest with Meriden starting soon that the club members make special effort to be present during the next three months.

Russell A. Clapp, chairman of the programme committee, reported that there would be some deviation from the set rule of having one song leader at each meeting and hereafter there would be two song leaders. The leaders for next month are as follows: first meeting, Dr. Fred Richards and Dr. Clarence Spear; second meeting, James J. Madden and Fred S. Crowell; third meeting, Chalie Butts and Charlie Wells; fourth meeting John A. Ferguson and Nathan A. Gibbs. At the meeting on Feb. 13th Chairman Clapp announced that there would be a debate, the subject of which will be announced at the next meeting. The affirmative of the question will be presented by Judge Ayling, Charles R. Butts and Arthur M. Brown; the negative being by Grosvenor Ely, William G. Park and Lucius Briggs. Chairman Clapp also spoke of tentative plans for Ladies Night which will be held in March. The judges for the debate will be William H. Oat, Charles A. Saxton and Mayor Milo R. Waters.

A very pleasing announcement and one that met with the hearty approval of the club was the one made by Arthur M. Brown on behalf of five members of the club, who either claim Jewett City as their home or place of business, that they were going to entertain the club at the Ashland club some night in February. Mr. Brown in issuing his invitation made it so alluring that it was not necessary to take a vote on the matter, everyone accepting the invitation immediately. The hosts on that evening will be Arthur M. Brown, Lewis M. Carpenter, Grosvenor Ely, Alex McNicol and Joseph C. Worth.

President Saxton urged all the members of the Rotary club to make a special effort to attend the Grace Sage play recital, given under the auspices of the Lions club, at Slater hall this evening. The recital is for the benefit of the crippled children at the Newington Home. Attention was also called to the organ recital of Prof. Baldwin on Feb. 4th at the Central Baptist church and support was urged for the coming recital by Miss Pearson on February 14th under the auspices of the Norwich Music Association.

A letter of greeting was read from Harry M. Clark, a former member of the Norwich Rotary club, who is now located in Albany, N. Y.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

BERT LUCAS ENJOYING FISHING AT MIAMI

Herbert W. Lucas and Fred Allen of this city are still enjoying the fishing at Miami and in a recent trip to the Causeway with rod and line caught over 100 sailor's delight, a very fine butter fish. They have also taken a trip to the Bahamas and Mr. Lucas recently had the pleasure of shaking hands with Jack Dempsey, the champion pugilist, whom he met at the Elks club in Miami. Dempsey was the guest of honor at a big initiation at the club, with about 500 at the meeting.

The largest fish they have seen brought in was a hammer head shark 1,400 pounds, 15 feet 7 inches long. The captain of the boat that caught it told them it put up a fight for two hours after be had harpooned it and when first struck it was strong enough to drag the boat at half-speed ahead although the engines were at full speed astern. In the course of the encounter the boat captain fired six shots from a 38 calibre revolver into the shark and when it was finally exhausted killed it with several thrusts of a sharp knife.

Recently 45 hydroplanes flew into the harbor from Key West, remaining for a few days before they made the return trip.

An interesting visit was made by Mr. Lucas and Mr. Allen to the farm run by Mr. Hartman, known as the strawberry king. He has 9 4-10 acres and cleared $20,000 last year. He has been in Florida twelve years trying to get a start and is now making good, having picked over 53,000 baskets last year.

The thermometer reaches 82 at the present time and Mr. Lucas was in bathing for 6 hours one day last week.

Later refreshments were served by Mrs. Jay Shaver and Mrs. Way. About 40 attended. The next meeting will be held at the school.

Given Complete Surprise.

A birthday party in the form of a surprise was given at Mrs. Heibel's of Elijah street, Greeneville, for John J. Dennis last Saturday, when a party of sixteen friends gave him the biggest surprise he ever had. He was called to Mrs. Heibel's on business and as he entered the dining room the parlor lights were switched on and the party sang Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here, John J., was equal to the occasion. A violin solo was given by James Gordon, and dancing was enjoyed by all. A delicious supper was served by Mrs. Dave Fetterman, assisted by Mrs. Heibel and Mrs. Cocker.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

GOT 10-INCH ICE FROM AMOS LAKE

Charles M. Geisthardt has filled his ice houses at Preston City with 10-inch ice from Amos lake. Weather and wind conditions helped him materially to get ice of that thickness as the thin ice out on the lake was broken up by a thaw and then driven into a cove by the wind where it packed up and was frozen into ten inch cakes by the recent zero snap.

SENATE PASSED OIL LEASE ANNULMENT RESOLUTION

To Direct the President to Proceed With Suits—Senate Debated for Three Hours the Resolution Requesting the Resignation of Secretray Denby — Democrats are Supported by Insurgent Republicans in Attack on the Secretary of the Navy—House is Prepared to Act Upon the Walsh Resolution as Soon as it Comes From the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Adopting the Walsh oil lease annulment resolution by the unanimous vote of the 89 senators present, the senate plunged today into what promises to be a historic and extremely bitter fight over the Robinson resolution requesting the president to call immediately for the resignation of Secretary Denby.

As the verbal battle got under way, it was conceded that a sufficient number of republican insurgent votes might be joined with those of the democrats to insure adoption of the resolution. Such a coalition repulsed all efforts to administration senators to modify the language of the Walsh measure which, as finally adopted, declares the leases, signed by Mr. Denby, to have been made without authority and contrary to law.

Meantime, Mr. Denby continued to stand pat on his declaration that he would not resign.

"No one has advised me to resign," he declared in response to suggestions that he had been urged to give up his cabinet post to avoid embarrassment to the administration.

It came to light today that after the Robinson resolution was introduced, Mr. Denby called on Chairman Lenroot, of the senate oil committee, and Chairman Hale of the senate naval committee and other administration leaders in the senate and they left it to him to decide whether he should resign.

Supporters of the Denby resignation resolution are giving close attention to the proceedings before the houses naval committee which was told today by Rear Admiral J. K. Latimer, judge advocate general of the navy, that Mr. Denby had told him that he had initiated the transfer of the naval reserves to the interior department after investigating the question and consulting the various experts.

President Coolidge again devoted much of his time to the oil lease muddle, giving attention both to the various phases of the evidence adduced by the senate committee and the question of the qualification of the special counsel he has selected to prosecute the cases.

The executive had an early morning meeting with Chairman Lenroot and Senators Lodge of Massachusetts and Curtis, of Kansas, the republican leaders, and later called in democratic senators for the first time, talking over the whole subject with Senators Robinson, of Arkansas, the minority leader, and Walsh, of Montana, who has the dominant part in the oil inquiry.

Late in the day the president took a long walk with Assistant Secretary Roosevelt during which the oil matter was discussed in a general way. Mr. Roosevelt said the executive had asked him a number of questions about the phases of the inquiry.

A new development in the situation today was the issuing of subpoena for the appearance tomorrow of E. L. Doheny before the senate committee. The subpoena was sent out by Chairman Lehroot after Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, had demanded in the senate that the oil magnats be subjected to be subjected to a "searching examination," as to whether he had advanced money to any other public official aside from former Interior Secretary Fall.

Under a resolution introduced in the house by Representative Fish, republican, New York, Harry F. Sinclair, now in France, would be requested through official channels to return here and "explain to congress and the American public the $25,000 loan to Ex-Secretary Fall."

The medical commission appointed by the senate committee examined Mr. Fall during the day in his sick room at the home of J. W. Zevely, personal counsel to Mr. Sinclair, and is expected to report to the committee tomorrow as to whether the former secretary can appear for questioning.

ADD ETC—

James Long, aged 79 years, died a few minutes after being struck by a Boston bound train as it was pulling out of the railroad station in New Britain.

The senate vote on the Walsh resolution was the result of a unanimous consent agreement today after two more hours of ferid debate. The measure will be transmitted to the house tomorrow and Representative ongworth of Ohio, the republican leader, said tonight he was prepared to ask for an unanimous consent agreement for limited debate and a final vote during the day.

Mr. Longworth declared that in the main the resolution was acceptable, although he thought some of the language might be modified particularly that relating to the want of authority and law for the making of the leases. In view of the senate vote against such modification, however, it was not regarded as likely that amendments would be pressed.

With adoption of the measure by the house, President Coolidge will have formal authority from congress to take the action he has already adopted: Appointment of special counsel to prosecute such suits, civil and criminal, as the facts might warrant.

There was a last minute effort in the senate to amend the Walsh resolution so as to direct the president to seize the leased reserves in Wyoming and California, but the proposal by Senator Howell, republican, Nebraska, was rejected without a roll call. Two votes then followed on the Walsh resolution, the first, 90 to 0 to accept it as a substitute for the original Caraway resolution, and the second to adopt the resolution on its own merits.

TEXT OF WALSH OIL LEASE ANNULMENT RESOLUTION

Washington, Jan. 31—The Walsh oil lease annulment resolution, as adopted by the senate follows:

"Where as, it appears from evidence taken by the committee on public lands and surveys of the United States senate, that certain leases of naval reserve number 1 in the state of Wyoming, bearing date April 7, 1922, made in form by the government of the United States, through Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior, and Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy, as lessor, to which the Mammoth Oil company as lessee, and that certain contracts between the government of the United States and the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, dated April 25, 1922, signed by Edward C. Finney, acting secretary of the interior, and Edwin Denby, secretary, relating among other things, to the construction of oil tanks at Pearl Harbor, T. H., and that certain lease of naval reserve number 1, in the state of California, bearing date December 11, 1922, made in form by the government of the United States through Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior, and Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy, as lessor to the Pan-American Petroleum company as lessee, were executed under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption; and,

"Whereas, the said leases and contract were entered into without authority on the part of officers purporting to act in the execution of the same for the United States; and in violation of the laws of congress; and,

"Whereas, such leases and contracts were made in defiance of the settled policy of the government adhered to through three successive administrations, to maintain in the ground a great reserve supply of oil adequate to the needs of the navy in any emergency threatening the national security:

"Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled, that the said leases and contract are against the public interest and that the lands embraced therein should be recovered and held for the purpose to which they were dedicated; and,

"Resolved, further that the President of the U. S., be and he hereby is, authorized and directed immediately to cause suit to be instituted, and prosecuted to final judgment and cancellation of said leases and contract, and all contracts incidental or supplemental thereto, to enjoin the further extraction of oil from the said reserves under said leases or from the territory covered by the same, to secure any further appropriate incidental relief, and to prosecute such other actions or proceedings, civil and criminal, as may be warranted by the facts in relation to the making of the said leases and contract.

"And the president is further authorized and directed to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, special counsel who shall have charge and control of the prosecuting of such litigation, any thing in the statutes touching the powers of the attorney general or the department of justice to the contrary notwithstanding."

SUBPOENA TO BE ISSUED FOR DOHENY IN OIL PROBE

Washington, Jan. 31.—A subpoena will be issued immediately requiring E. L. Doheny to appear before the senate oil investigating committee tomorrow, Chairman Lenroot announced today when Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, demanded in the senate that the California oil magnate be subjected to a searching examination as to whether he has paid directly or indirectly any money to any official in office. Senator Reed said he understood Mr. Doheny, who has been here awaiting to appear before the committee was about to leave Washington.

MINERS ARE PLEDGED TO FIGHT WAGE REDUCTION

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 31—(By the A. P.)—Forces of the United Mine Workers of America were pledged by their delegates in convention here late today to fight against any wage reduction, but elected at the same time to defer the demand for a shorter work day. The vote was overwhelming. Tomorrow the convention will vote on the proposal of the scale committee that they attempt to secure a wage contract for a term of four years.

Opposition to the proposal for a renewal of the contract was started by insurgents who demanded a six hour day and five day week, but they weakneed before the united front of all district presidents of the union, and the three international officers who pleaded for unanimity that the "integrity of the union may be preserved."

Oratory of President Frank Farrington of the Illinois district chairman of the scale committee, Vice-president Philip Murray and Secretary William Green, beat down every argument of the insurgents. They represented that the union is not in condition to wage a fight for a shorter work day, that the public will not support such a demand, and that the operators would welcome it.

WORKING TO EFFECT ARAB-JEWISH ENTENTE CORDIALE

Jerusalem, Jan. 31—The first attempt at establishing what may amount to an Arab Jewish entente cordiale was made this week when representatives of the Arab peoples and a Jewish delegation from Jerusalem met in Amman. The entente, it is said, would be based on a moderate interpretation of the Balfour declaration and the cooperation of the world Jewry in the solution of the general Arab problems.

Announcement was made today by the Jewish delegation that an understanding had been reached on a moderate interpretation of the Balfour declaration. The announcement said further that the king of the Hejaz and his son, Emir Abdullah, ruler of Transjordania, insist on the recognition of the political rights of the Arabs.

Eastern Bankers to Attend Conference

To Help Adjust Interests Affected by the Banking Crisis in the Northwest.

New ork, Jan. 31.—(By the A. P.)—Bankers will taken an active part in the conference next Monday between President Coolidge and interests affected by the banking crisis in the northwest, it was reported in financial circles tonight.

Fred I Kent, vice president of the Bankers Trust Company probably will go to Washington tomorrow or Saturday in company with an official of J. P. Morgan & Co., for a preliminary conference with Secretary Mellon. Although Thomas W. Lamont, of the Morgan firm, refused to say whether a member of the company would participate in the meeting it would send a representative, was understood generally that it

Other New York banking houses to participate in the discussion will include the Chase National bank, the National City bank, The Guaranty Trust Company, the First National bank and others.

The situation in the northwest has been given thorough study by New York bankers, an official of one of the lagdre institutions, which will be represented at Washington, said tonight, it was probable, he added, that New York banking interests, before going to Washington, would agree on plans by which they could extend and aid that they would submit their proposals to Secretary Mellon.

While it was unknown what form relief measures for northwestern banks would take, bankers here suggested they might follow the plans adopted in raising a $40,000,000 pool to aid the livestock industry of the west during the degression of several weeks ago.

PARENTS CHARGED WITH MURDER OF THEIR CHILD

Salem, N. J., Jan. 31.—Finding of the body of 6-year-old Miriam Atkinson in a well under the kitchen floor of her home at Woodstown, N. J., today, resulted in the holding of her parents, Robert and Bessie Atkinson, on a formal charge of murder in the county jail here.

Authorities were led to the spot by the child's mother following several hours of questioning during which she twice led them to other places where she claimed the child was buried.

Lack of funds, she asserted, prevented obtaining attendance of a physician during the child's illness and from having a proper burial after the death which Mrs. Atkinson maintained was a natural one.

The father of the child declared he did not know until last night that she was dead, and that he knew nothing of the disposal of the body. As he was being questioned he suddenly darted from the room and dashed across the fields. A constable gave chase and brought Atkinson back. Asked why he had run out he said he was going to a neighbor's house.

Attention of county officials was first drawn to the child's disappearance by Mrs. Arthur Samler, of Atlantic City, a sister of Mrs. Atkinson.

A letter from Mrs. Atkinson, she said, had informed her of the child's death and burial a week ago, and when she came on a visit of sympathy, she was refused admittance to the Atkinson home.

The body, tied in a burlap bag, was discovered at the bottom of the well by county officials, and was covered with water. Superficial examination failed to show traces of violence, but an autopsy was ordered, together with the arrest of the parents.

It was discovered that the Atkinsons had all their furniture packed for removal today to Atlantic City, according to police.

Questioning of neighbors, the authorities said, revealed that Mrs. Atkinson had an aversion to Miriam, believing that there had been an accidental exchange of babies at the hospital in Atlantic City where her child was born.

REVENUE FOR STATE LESS THAN REQUIREMENTS

Hartford, Jan. 31—The estimated revenue and the cash balance of the state of Connecticut for the present biennial fiscal period is approximately $13,000,000 less than requirements, according to the annual report of Comptroller Frederick M. Salmon for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, which has just been published.

The estimated revenue to be collected during the present two year period is $22,814,000 and the available cash balance is $2,242,443.71, leaving a deficit of $19,119,414.36 to meet the total requirements of $43,775,857.97.

In commenting on the report Comptroller Salmon points out that the estimated revenue for the biennal period closed last June was approximately $11,890,000 less than the total requirements for the period. Notwithstanding this fact, the period closed with an increase of about $2,000,000 in cash on hand, and an increase in excess of sinking fund over requirements of approximately $400,000.

The apparent deficit in the estimates for the present fiscal period is due to three causes Mr. Salmon says: (1) probable conservatism in the estimates of revenue receipts, (2) the fact that much which is appropriated will not be used, and (3) the carry-over of highway and other construction appropriations into future fiscal periods.

"The annual expenditures of the state are increasing," the report says, "but probably not at a rate more rapid than the fall value of the dollar would require; certainly not faster than the insistent demand for wider and more intensive state activities makes necessary."

Approve 25 Per cent As Surtax Maximum

Republicans of House Ways and Means Committee Vote for Mellon Proposal

Washington, Jan. 31. — Republican members of the house ways and means committee today approved the 25 per cent. surtax maximum proposed in the Mellon bill.

Approval also was given by the republicans to the terasury recommendation for a reduction in the normal income tax rates from eight to four per cent. to six and three per cent.

The majority members took action on the rate schedules after discussing the situation with the republican steering committee. Several members among them Chairman Green, are understood to have voted against accepting the Mellon surtax recommendation but under the agreement they are bound to stand by it in committee in the face of any opposition from the democrats.

The proposal to reduce taxes payable this year, which was approved yesterday by republicans of the committee upon a motion of Chairman Green, was supported today by Secretary Mellon, who said the estimated loss to the government of about $200,000,000 from a flat reduction of 25 per cent on all income taxes of 1923 could be met. The plan he said, was feasible and practicable.

The democrats also moved in this direction today when Representative Garner introduced a joint resolution proposing to make a reduction in the 1923 taxes on the basis of rates in the democratic plan, which would reduce the normal income taxes to two per cent. on incomes below $5,000, to four per cent. of those between $5,000 and $8,000 and six per cent. above that amount. It also would increase the exemptions for unmarried persons from $1,000 to $2,000 and of married persons from $2,500 to $3,000.

Mr. Garner argued that joint resolution could be acted upon before March 15, when the first installments on income taxes are due, and thus would save about $2,000 persons making returns this year. Under hte Green plan the reduction is made a part of the revenue bill with the provision that if approved after March 15, refunds could be made on overpayments.

Mr. Green objected on the floor today to Mr. Garner's request for immediate consideration of the joint resolution. Later he issued a statement in which he declared the proposal was "simply a desperate move for political purposes." Mr. Green further stated that the plan was unworkable from an administrative standpoint, as the tax returns had already gone out and many had been paid and that if the scheme were adopted it would entil an entire new set of tax return forms. Moreover, he said, the treasury could not stand the estimated loss of $200,000,000 in revenues which the plan would entail.

NO MATERIAL CHANGE IN THE MELLON TAX BILL

Washington, Jan. 31.—The Mellon tax bill will be reported to the house without material change.

This was assured today when republicans on the house ways and means committee approved the surtax and income tax schedules recommended by the treasury. Despite division on surtaxes, they have agreed to stand together in support of the bill's essential provisions in the face of democratic opposition in committee.

The surtax rates, the bone of contention between democrats and republicans, and among the republicans themselves, came to a vote after majority members of the committee had discussed the whole situation with the republican steering committee.

Meeting alone later, they first rejected by a 11 to 3 vote a proposal to make the maximum surtax rate 32 per cent. instead of 25 per cent on incomes in excess of $100,000, as suggestde by Mr. Mellon.

By the same vote, the Mellon schedule was approved. Chairman Green of Iowa, and Representatives Timberlake, of Colorado, and McLaughlin, of Michigan, are understood to have cast the three negative votes. The eleven who voted in the affirmative are said to have been Representatives Hawley, Oregon; Treadway, Massachusetts; Young, North Dakota; Tilson, Conn.; Bacharach, New Jersey; Hadley, Washington; Watson, Pennsylvania; Mills, New York; Kearns, Ohio; Chindblom, Illinois; Crowther, New York; Frear, of Wisconsin.

An insurgent out of sympathy with the treasury's surtx recommendations, was not present.

GAIN IN NUMBER OF DAIRY COWS IN UNITED STATES

Wakefield, Mass., Jan. 31—A gain of 228,000 in the number of dairy cows in the United States since January 1, 1923, was reported by the statistician's office of the United States department of agriculture here today. In New England there was no change with the exception of Maine, which reported a decrease of 2,000. The total number of dairy cows for the nation is 24,675,000 against 24,437,000 a year ago.

In New England, in general, the livestock industry is holding its own, the report indicated. The general trend in farm values has been upward. A considerable increase in the number of hogs is shown. Slight decreases are reported in the number of farm horses. Sheep, however, have declined in New England so much that it is now difficult to obtain adequate information about them. No changes were reported in Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Vermont showed an increase of 1,000 and Massachusetts a decrease of 2,000.

Half a hundred correspondents gathered around and there were cries of "throw him out", before the senator was escorted from the gallery by the superintendent.

GERMANS ARE CLAMORING FOR PROPOSED GOLD BANK

At Meeting of General Dawes' Expert Committee in Berlin Dr. Schacht, President of the Reichsbank, Favored New Gold Bank Being Organized at Once—The League of German Industrialists Considers the Gold Bank as Indispensable for the Restoration of German Economics—Today Expert Committee No. 2 Will Discuss With Berlin Bankers the Flight of Capital from Germany.

Berlin, Jan. 31.—(By The A. P.)—Discussion of the projected bank of emission was resumed by Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes' expert committee No. 1 today, the president of the reichsbank, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, being the first of the German officials to be heard.

The reichsbank head, who is also the federal commissioner of currency, is reported to be in favor of having the new gold bank organized at once, believing that neither its security nor functioning is in any way tied up with the ultimate solution of the reparation problem.

While emphasizing the desirability of having the bank in operation at the earliest possible date, he differs with the experts in respect to the proposition of making the new institution a rigidly independent one, as he recommends constituting it as an independent annex to the reichsbank with the idea of eventually merging it with the reichsbank when the new gold issue is firmly secured.

Dr. Schacht also advocates that the reserves be in bullion or foreign securities, immune from fluctuation. For the purpose of speedily facilitating credit transactions the reichsbank head declares that the new bank of emission should assume tangible shape immediately as the present credits extended to private industry, commerce and trade by the provisional rentenmark bank will soon be exhausted.

He also argues that the question of stabilizing the German currency, which is now being successfully carried on through the medium of the rentenmark, will be greatly simplified once a duly ordained gold currency is floated. He views the entire problem of the new bank of issue as one wholly removed from political issues and therefore asserts that its establishment may be safely undertaken even if the reparation solution is still in abeyance.

The league of German industrialists is also clamoring for the gold bank, which it views as indispensable for the restoration of German economics. The issue was up for discussion at yesterday's meeting of the league's executive committee, at which several leaders frankly confessed that big business would have to assume the nation's tax burdens, and assume them cheerfully. Officials of the league also declared that the impending discussions with both the expert committees were highly desirable, and expressed the hope that their assay would be thorough and frank.

"Only an unvarnished picture of the situation can save us," Dr. Buecher, the league's chairman, declared. He welcomed the forthcoming ratification of the commercial treaty between the United States and Germany and said that the most favored nation clause incorporated in the accord was of cardinal importance.

Expert committee No. 2, under the chairmanship of Reginald McKenna, will discuss the flight of capital from Germany with Berlin bankers tomorrow. German sentiment with respect to this aspect of the experts' survey appears to be reflected in an article by Prof. Michael Bonn, well-known economist, who believes that the gold balances concealed abroad can be lured back to the fatherland once the owners are assured that such capital is secure from confiscation, that it will be subjected to a bearable taxation, and that the nation's currency can be definitely stabilized.

As the initial prerequisite, Prof. Bonn demands the establishment of a central government capable of asserting its financial sovereignty that is one in a position to assert its authority at home and incidentally be proof against recurring rebuffs from abroad.

The present acute shortage of capital in Germany and the consequent high rates of interest are cited as further reasons why the German hoardings abroad could be coaxed back, once a safe and attractive financial atmosphere was created within Germany. The chief reasons why this capital made its hasty exit, says Prof. Bonn, are to be found in the fear of a revolution, fear of excessive taxation or of seizure by the allies, and the seemingly endless plunge of the mark.

AKRON IS THREATENED WITH STREET CAR STRIKE

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 31.—Akron tonight stood on the verge of the worst street car situation in its history, following orders from the city to the Northern Ohio Traction and Light company to withdraw its city transportation service on the expiration of its 25-year franchise at midnight. All street car service ends at 2.30 tomorrow morning, when city cars reach the barns after their last trips. The situation was brought about by failure of traction and city officials to agree on a rate of fare for the new franchise. City officials wanted a continuation of the 5-cent fare. Company officials demanded 7 cents but finally agreed to a temporary franchise at six cents while a permanent grant was being negotiated. This the city rejected.

Just how far the city would go in its determination to bar interurban and suburban cars was a matter of conjecture tonight. No word was forthcoming from Mayor D. C. Rybolt's office as to whether these cars would be allowed to use the tracks within the city limits.

Meanwhile the traction company was making plans to run both interurban and suburban cars. The suburban lines include Cuyahoga Falls, Kenmore and Barberton. Crews of these lines were ordered to stop within Akron city limits tomorrow to discharge and pick up suburban passengers only.

With more than 200 sedans brought here by H. S. Firestone, rubber manufacturer, a close friend of Henry Ford, and a fleet of busses secured by city officials, Mayor Rybolt declared he will provide Akron with the finest transportation system in the country. A complete list of new bus routes, replacing street cars, has been mapped out and busses will begin operation at midnight. The fare will be five cents with no transfers. City officials plan a three-minute bus schedule, with express routes in operation during rush hours.

CABARET MANAGER AND WIFE OVERCOME BY SMOKE

New York, Jan. 31—Theodore Bauer, manager of a fashionable cabaret in East 59th Street and his wife, Louise, died tonight, overcome by smoke fumes, as they were attempting to escape from a fire in their apartment above the cabaret.

The cabaret, the Club Petroushka, known as a rendesvous of exiled Russian nobility, occupied the first two stories of a five-story building in which the Bauers maintained an apartment on the top floor.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Bauer were found by firemen on the roof of the building where they had fled. Death was due to asphyxiation. No guests were in the cabaret when the fire broke out.

Bauer was prominent in hotel circles and formerly was publicity agent for the Boston Metropolitan Opera company and for the Columbia Phonograph company. He was described as a member of a prominent Budapest family.

ADDITIONAL REPAIRS ARE NECESSARY FOR LEVIATHAN

New York, Jan. 31.—The United States shipping board announced today at Hoboken, where the Leviathan is tied up, that additional repairs to the big liner have been found necessary which will delay her next sailing date from March 22 to April 3.

Having been damaged when she ran aground on Robbins reef in December, the Leviathan is now having turbines gone over, preparatory to clearing Bostof drydock to have several hull plates renewed.

KILLED WIFE, HER TWO SISTERS AND HER BROTHER

Kloten, N. Da., Jan. 31—Theodore Larson, farmer near Edinburg, N. Da., this afternoo shot and killed his estranged wife, her two sisters and his brother-in-law, on the E. S. Quanbeck farm, near here, escaping on horseback with his 4-year-old daughter, over whom the quarrel took place. Later he was arrested at his father's farm near Edinburg, where he was disarmed by members of the family.

Larson went to th Quanbeck farm, seven miles southwest of the home of his wife's family where she had taken refuge after leaving him two weeks ago, to demand possession of their daughter, Thelma, aged 4. His wife's sister Helen, 36, was shot and killed when she attempted to prevent him from taking the child. Mrs. Nellie Larson, 32, his wife, was also instantly killed in attempting to keep possession of the child. The second sister, Emma, 27, was killed while telephoning for help.

Olaf Arneson, her brother-in-law, responded and was met at the door by Larson, who shot him, killing him instantly. Larson then dragged Arneson's body in the house, poured kerosene over all four bodies and set fire to them and to the house. He then seized the little girl and escaped on Arneson's horse.

An old man, Thor Knutson was asleep upstairs in the house at the time of the shooting.

The first shot woke him up and he went downstairs just in time to see Larson shoot his wife and her second sister. A hired man, and a neighbor extinguished the flames after the bodies had been partly burned.

Larson went to the home of his father, Singer Larson, three miles from the Quanbeck farm where he was disarmed by members of his family. He offered no resistance.

WILLIMANTIC

The work of compiling the grand list for 1923 has been completed by the assessors of the town of Windham, John E. Pickett, Joseph F. Gaudreau and Lawrence S. Casey. The total of $17,428,894 shows an increase of $270,023 over the figures for 1922, which were $17,057,872. In comparison with this increase, the one two years ago was decidedly smaller, being only $112,336. In the total number of the lists this year a total of 252 additional names appeared over the number in 1922. Lists were filed by 4,071 residents and 186 non-residents.

The west division of the city of Willimantic increased in valuation by $230,525 and the east division, the Windham, by $39,436. With the exception of the Rossie Velvet company and the Holland Silk company, the assessors placed no increased valuations on property of manufacturing concerns. The list of the Rossie Velvet company was increased a little over $22,600 and that of the Holland Silk company by $7,000. Local manufacturing concerns which are exempt from the tax at present include the S. C. S. Box company and the H. K. & W. A. Washburn Silk company. Aside from the properties mentioned, the increases were distributed on other lines of property. About 1,400 automobiles are on the list, close to two hundred more than the previous year. Owing to the lowering of prices and depreciation, there will be little or no increase from that source over the last year.

In 1922 the value of the town property was estimated at between twelve and thirteen millions. Since that time the gain has been 45 per cent., and the tax rate increased 160 per cent., or a raise in taxes from five to thirteen mills.

The increase in the grand list in the past four years has been an even million dollars. The gain in 1920 was $194,000; in 1921, $111,324; in 1922, $434,852, and in 1923, $270,022.

The leading manufacturing plants in the city and town have been assessed as follows: American Thread company, $5,413,040; Quidnick-Windham Manufacturing company, $359,360; Holland Silk company, $264,788; Windham Silk company, $227,503; Chaffee Manufacturing company, $11,478; Mail & Bill Printing company $34,906; Hillhouse & Taylor company, $64,706; Rossie Velvet company, $159,360; Vanderman Manufacturing company, $19,906; Smith-Winchester Manufacturing company, $22,100; L. M. Hartson company, $29,850; Harris company, $17,250; The Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company, $312,375. The total share of the manufacturers in the grand list is $7,000,000.

Fire Chief James J. Tighe has issued a public statement in which he highly commends the excellent work of the teachers who directed the 150 pupils from the old Windham Street Model Training school out of the building, while fire raged in the lower floor. The teachers are Misses Annie Buchanan, Margaret Rebaher, Alice Dibble and Elizabeth Clark. Misses Catherine Cahill and Mary Quinn did fine work. Miss Cahill says: In the fire alarm and Miss Quinn rendered valuable assistance. Miss Buchanan discovered the fire and rang the school fire alarm.

The name of Dr. Samuel J. Turcotte of Willimantic appeared Thursday in the list of 132 eclectic license holders whose licenses were ordered revoked and who were barred Thursday from the right to practice. Dr. Turcotte was a graduate of the Middlesex College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Abe Davidson of Norwich has resigned as president of the Capitol Theatre corporation, giving pressure of other business as the reason for his resignation. The board of directors has elected ex-Mayor Charles A. Gates his successor. Ex-Mayor Gates has been mayor of Willimantic for six years and is now serving his third term as sheriff of Windham county. He has held several other offices of trust with distinction and possesses sound business judgment.

Accommodations for the 150 pupils of the Windham Street school, which was gutted by fire Wednesday, have been provided in the State Normal school building, where four grades have been arranged on the first floor of the school.

Who owns the old Windham Street school building? was the question being asked after the structure had been ruined by fire Wednesday. The records of the town of Windham show that at a special town meeting held October 12, 1907, it was voted to deed over the land on which the present brick school house and the building destroyed by fire Wednesday are located, to the state of Connecticut. Provision was made whereby the property would revert to the town of Windham if the state discontinued to use the property for school purposes. The deeds were made out to the state June 13, 1908, by the then board of selectment, comprising James M. Smith, William F. Maine and Isaac Sanderson. The town was privileged to remove two wooden buildings on the property which had been used as school buildings. These were sold and transformed into tenements. The present brick school house now stands where these buildings formerly stood. June 30, 1908, the deeds were recorded at the office of the town clerk. The land measures 150.74 feet on Valley street, 398 feet frontage on Windham street, 153.81 feet on the south side and 396 feet on the east.

Leo Beaulieu was given a surprise party at his home Wednesday night by the Ne Plus Ultra club. Those present were Misses Susie Albre, Myrtle Ellis, Hazel Jones, Amy Haddad, Evelyn Yorke and Eva Beaulieu, Mrs. Blanche Fetter, Mrs. Ella Donohue, Mrs. Gladys Potter, Mrs. Gertrude Butler, Mrs. Emile Bernet, Mrs. Samuel Beaulieu, also Leo Beaulieu, George Lewis, Emile Bernet, Raymond Ladd, Theodore Ladd, Lloyd Williams, Jean Pare, Ulric Beaulieu and Samuel Beaulieu.

WARREN MEMORIAL HALL
DEDICATED AT STAFFORD

(Special to The Bulletin)

Stafford Springs, Jan. 31. All Stafford turned out Thursday evening, for the dedication of the Warren Memorial hall. The exercises opened with the singing of America, by the assemblage, after which there was an address by William Park. Mr. Park spoke feelingly of the philanthropy and generosity of Colonel Warren who left the money for the building of the hall.

The Lotus Male quartette of Boston, assisted by Miss Amy Hanson, reader, then gave an interesting concert.

The Warren Memorial hall, which with land and building, cost a little over $100,000, was built under the supervision of a building committee, consisting of Christopher Allen, C. E. Pinney and William R. Preble. The building is a two story tapestry brick structure with artificial stone decorations. On the ground floor are located the town clerk's office, selectment's room, probate court, a room for the warden and burgesses of the borough, the American Legion and a large room which will some day be used as a court room.

The auditorium is located on the second floor and is Colonial in type, having large arched windows with small panes. It has a seating capacity of about 700, including the balcony. There is an exceptionally large stage with an orchestra pit, four dressing rooms adjoin the stage. The stage has recently been fitted up with modern stage scenery, including a street scene, Grace church, New York, a garden scene, landscape scene and three interiors that can be used to represent any room from a kitchen to a banker's office.

The main lobby and vestibule of the hall are finished in white marble and the floors in the corridors are of tile. The entire building is finished in Canadian brown ash, with the exception of the auditorium which is finished in cypress, painted white. The entrance has marble staircases on either side. There are two bronze tablets at the landing of each staircase; one of these is an honor roll of Stafford young men who served in the World war and is the gift of A. I. Mitchell. The other was erected by the town to commemorate the gift of Colonel Warren.

Colonel Charles Warren, whose generosity made this beautiful building possible, was born in Stafford, Sept. 25, 1835, and died October 31, 1920. He attended the local public schools and at the age of 19 entered the finishing department of the Converseville woolen mills. After five years in the woolen mill he went to Boston and formed a partnership with Henry Thrall, wholesale leather dealer. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted in Company B, 11th Conn. Volunteers, and was mustered into service Oct. 24, 1861.

He left the state with his regiment in Dec. 1861, and was promoted from private to sergeant, then to second and first lieutenant and finally to Captain. He served as provost marshal in Richmond from April 5th to Sept. 5th, 1865, when he was appointed to the command of the sub district of New River, embracing eighteen counties in South Virginia, and was commissioned colonel Dec. 14, 1865.

He returned to Stafford in 1866 and became part owner in a general store. In 1884 he built the Warren block in which the saving bank is located.

He was a very modest living man and accumulated a fortune approaching half a million dollars. In addition to leaving the money for the hall he gave the town $25,000 for a soldiers' monument which was recently erected in Hyde park.

Mrs. James McLaughlin, 80, died at her home on Highland Terrace Wednesday, after a brief illness with bronchial pneumonia. She was born in Belchertown, Mass. March 21, 1843, a daughter of Albert and Martha Rhodes Atwood. She came to Stafford with her husband, James McLaughlin, in 1866. She became a member of the Congregational church in 1872 and has always taken an active interest in its affairs, and was a member emeritus of the church committee at the time of her death. She was an honorary member of the Current Events club. She is survived by a son, Lewis McLaughlin of Stafford Springs, a sister, Mrs. M. J. Leach of New Haven, and a brother, Lewis Atwood of California.

SOPRANO AND CELLIST
IN SLATER HALL CONCERT

Another one of the distinctive concerts that is offered by the Slater hall course will be given next Wednesday evening, Feb. 6 when Olive Marshall, soprano, and Jean Bedetti, cellist, are on the programme.

Of Miss Marshall, who has been soloist with the Oratorio Society of New York and sang at the Danville, Va., music festival, a New York critic has said. She brought to oratorio rich gifts of native beauty, such as once were brought to it by a young New England girl whose name was Lillian Norton, the later Lillian Nordica.

Mr. Bedetti has appeared in recital and as soloist with the Boston Symphony orchestra and in the opinion of Aaron Richmond is one of the few really great cellists of our day, who has since coming to this country completely won the admiration of the press and public alike by his consummate artistry, dazzling technic and superb musicianship.

Tickets for the concert are now on sale at Cranston's.

Charles Chaplin's New Picture Coming to the Breed

Predictions are being made that the screen of Charles Chaplin's own story in "A Woman of Paris," starring Edna Purviance, will stand forth in motion picture history as an epochal event that will exert a strong influence on the present day photodrama.

The entire story and production, conceived and produced by this master cinema genius promises to reveal a treatment of a vital problem, presented with extreme simplicity yet with an unbounded psychological force that will blaze a new trail along the highway of motion picture progress.

The theme is a startling one and made the more so because of the utter simplicity and warmth of feeling that permeates it. In presence of a problem with the basics and fundamentals of life, commenting upon it in interesting fashion rather than attempting to solve it.

While the story is of life as studied by Charles Chaplin, it in no wise deals with the life of Chaplin but with the lives of others—as seen by him. And as in actual life, there is comedy, tragedy, passion, absurdity, melodrama, farce, emotionalism, cynicism—all these Chaplin has combined as ingredients of life in "A Woman of Paris." At the same time he has woven an exquisite tapestry portraying the sincerity of a woman's soul in all its nakedness though clothed in its individuality.

Dealing with lives and types that he knows, Chaplin brings to the screen his first contribution to the serious drama a story as old as that of Adam and Eve yet presented with such convincing understanding and treatment that it will be a revelation in the art of photo dramatics.

"A Woman of Paris," will be presented at the Breed theatre five days starting Sunday

At the Breed Theatre

A moving picture built about a situation so unique and unusual as to make the picture noteworthy is to be shown at the Breed theatre today and Saturday. It is a Fox production called "The Madness of Youth," and stars the one screen actor capable of portraying a character requiring such skilled artistry—John Gilbert, who has played leading roles in some of the most popular Fox productions.

The screen story is one of a young man, wholly bad, who for a year has planned the robbery of a millionaire's collection of jewels. He poses as a religious fanatic. After successfully emerging from many difficult situations that at any moment threaten to bring about his immediate arrest, he finally secures the famous jewels from the safe. But in the meanwhile he has fallen in love with his intended victim's lovely but wayward daughter. His career as a thief ends in a manner not only dramatic but quite startling.

The supporting cast includes the lovely Billie Dove, as the millionaire's daughter, and a number of other well known screen actors. In this picture Jerome Storm has done one of the greatest pieces of work in his noteworthy career in film land.

Other pictures on the bill include Edna Murphy in Her Dangerous Path, the Pathe news and an Educational comedy.

AT PALACE THEATRE

The bill for the last half of the week at the Palace theatre far surpasses that of the first half and is as nice a bill as has yet been seen at the theatre. The acts are old good and two are of the old time variety, the musical glasses act and the static electricity act. The other acts are of the more modern type including singing and dancing numbers, a comedy duo and a sensational flying ring act.

The bill opens with Tre Willeys who present a very entertaining Mane and musical glasses act. The settings in this act are very pretty and the playing of both musicians is exceptional.

The Two Steppers, a dancing and singing pair from the Shuffle Along company, have a clever act. The man of the pair is an exceptionally clever soft shoe man and the young woman is not far removed.

Fred LaRiene and Company have a very entertaining and laughable electricity act. It is the old time static electrical act and allows the introduction of a clever comedian who furnished a number of good laughs.

Bigalow and Fitz, in Mr. Long and Mr. Short, are an eccentric pair that present a grotesque appearance on the stage. Mr. Bigelow really stands nearly seven feet tall while Mr. Fitz is a little over four feet all of which adds to the comedy of their act.

The closing act is Howard, Winifred and Bruce in a sensational flying ring act. The feats performed on the rings are clever and well timed as well as being of a sensational nature.

Make It Yourself In Two Minutes

Home Made Cough Mixture Best of all for the Cough that Sticks.

The coughing season is on and every home should have a supply of the best cough remedy to be had, and as you can make this supremely excellent cough mixture yourself why pay high prices for the common kind.

And the children love to take it.

With speed almost beyond belief this home made cough mixture stops the roughest hang-on cough, and all because in it there is a substance (too costly for ordinary cough syrups) that immediately covers the membrane like a soothing, healing poultice, and blessed relief comes at once.

And you should also bear in mind that any remedy that overcomes catarrh, partially or wholly, is bound to be of benefit to those who are troubled with head noises and catarrhal deafness.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

When the men who like to fish through the ice took out their tilts at sunset Thursday evening the act marked the end of the fishing season for the next three months. Today is the first day of the closed season. Excepting such fishing as may be done on private ponds, angling is now banned until the first of May. The ice fishing season just closed has been one of the most unsatisfactory in years from the standpoint of the fishermen. They really did not get a chance to indulge themselves in a favorite winter pastime. This was due to the mildness of the season and the consequent lack of safe ice upon which they might operate. Some small ponds in this part of the county have yielded a few good catches of pickerel during the past two weeks but the season's catch, compared to the average year, has been very poor.

Thursday morning at 9 o'clock at St. James church there was a solemn high mass of requiem for Mrs. Exelina Tetreault, who died early this week at Burlington, Vt. Mrs. Tetreault formerly was a resident here and was the mother of Mrs. Howard M. Withey, of Furnace street. Rev. Joseph Deschaud, M. S., was the celebrant and Rev. Charles Kirby, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., deacon and sub-deacon, respectively, of the mass. Rev. Fr. Deschaud conducted the committal service at Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were J. N. Lavallee, Peter Larose, F. X. Maillhot, Peter Lavallee and Isaac Tetreault. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

There was widespread interest on Thursday in The Bulletin's news relative to the definite fixing of control of the affairs of the Connecticut Mills company through the acquiring of a large block of Class A common stock by a group which Vice President Obadiah Butler of the concern is identified. This control and the developments in the company's affairs that it will permit of is expected to stabilize the corporation's operations and be a large factor in the future successful conduct of the mill company's business, which is all important to Danielson and other parts of the towns of Killingly. This concern has been a main stay of the town's industrial prosperity for the past decade.

Announcement was made Thurs. day that the next meeting of the Killingly Woman's club is fixed for February 6, and that Miss Eleanor Cook, in costume, will present a Slavic program, the accompaniments to be by Ruth Haun.

The program has been arranged as follows:

Rev. and Mrs. Leonard Richards are now occupying St. Alban's rectory in Broad street. Rev. Mr. Richards will take up the duties as rector at St. Alban's church next Sunday.

A petition that already bears the names of 65 clerks in Danielson stores will be presented to the Chamber of Commerce in time for consideration at next Tuesday night's meeting, requesting that a half-holiday be allowed on Thursdays practically throughout the year.

James N. Tucker, William J. Young and Edwin P. Lawrence, members of the board of relief, will begin their sittings this morning. Meetings of the board will continue throughout the month.

After all, it can't be that the fishing season really has closed. New Yorkers at least must be exempt, for they continue to flood the mails arriving here with enticing stock speculations forwarded to all whose names they have on their "sucker" lists, which does not necessarily imply that those who get the mail are suckers—not by a long shot.

The body of Miss Emily R. Miller who died Wednesday afternoon at the Rhode Island hospital, Providence was brought to the home of her brother, Frederick Miller of Brooklyn, where she had been a resident for many years. Miss Miller was visiting in Providence when she became ill with pneumonia. She was born in Danielson and was a daughter of Jesse and Betsey Cole Miller.

TWO UNKNOWN MEN PERISH WHEN SHEEDY'S SHACK BURNS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Danielson, Jan. 31.—The charred bodies of two unidentified men were found among the glowing embers of the ruins of Owen Sheedy's shack, on the south shore of Alexander's lake, near Goodyear, Thursday night, after it had practically consumed the structure. It was decided at a late hour that it would be impossible to recover the bodies until the ruins have cooled from burning. Sheedy, owner of the shack, which has been a rendezvous for tramp mill workers and other such characters, has not been seen up to late Thursday night, though he had been about the place during the day and there is a possibility that his body may be one of the two in the ruins.

The attention of the police was first called to the Sheedy shack Thursday when Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Ayer received a telephone message, soon after the noon hour to go there and arrest a drunken man who was under the impression that some one was chasing him with an axe. The sheriff brought this man to Danielson and locked him up. Just before 9 o'clock Thursday night the sheriff received another telephone call, asking him to again visit the shack and take away another drunk. When the officer arrived there the shack was in flames and one man who was almost stupefied with drink was walking around outside the burning building. The sheriff at that time saw one body but the other was not discovered until after the fire had died down considerably. Neither of the men who were locked up in Danielson was sufficiently sober Thursday night to give any information whatsoever about who had been in the shack during the day or even to tell the officers his own name. Coroner Arthur A. Bill was in touch with the case Thursday night but it was found impossible to make any progress with it until the ruins cool and the bodies can be recovered. A watchman was stationed at the ruins during the night.

The Sheedy shack is in the rear of the Harris Arnold place. It was a structure about the size of a large room and was equipped with bunks, like a woodchopper' camp for sleeping purposes. For several years past from time to time the police have been called there to arrest drunks. It has been something of a social center of a sort for men who wanted to go on a drunk and be out of the way in a secluded place. Thursday night's disaster marks the end of its history.

PUTNAM

Wild excitement prevailed for a time Wednesday afternoon, when the fire apparatus made the run to the house at 190 Main street, to extinguish a lively chimney fire that threatened to cause considerable damage. The firemen, however, made quick work of smothering the flames, by use of chemicals. A large crowd which was out enjoying the beautiful afternoon's sunlight and moderate temperature, gathered to watch operations. The property is owned by the Alex Houghton estate.

Further information was available Thursday concerning the plans of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, in relaying the rails on the Worcester-New London division. It has been more than a decade since the present rails were laid. These are of the 78 pound to the yard kind, while the new rails will be of the 107 pound to the yard type. It is stated that the rails from Putnam to Central Village, a distance of 16 miles will be replaced with these new and heavier rails, the work to start early in April When this work is done there will be but one stretch between Groton and Worcester, that remains to be laid with the new rails. This gap will be between Central Village and Taftville.

As the new rails go into place, the reballasting of the roadbed will be carried out, thus putting the road into the pink of condition and capable of withstanding for years and years to come, the enormous traffic that this important and busy main line single-tracked road is called upon to bear.

There was much interest in Putnam in the Bulletin's announcement in the Danielson column Thursday, that control of the Connecticut Mills Co., has passed into new hands and that the group headed by Obediah Butler, is now incharge of the affairs of the company. Putnam is interested in the transition from Caldwell interests to those led by Mr. Butler, for associated with the latter is Roland H. Ballou, vice president and heaviest stockholder in the Manhasset Mfg. Co., of this city, which concern is soon to be sold at public auction. Mr. Ballou, the new sales manager of the Connecticut Mills, was the dominant figure in the Manhasset Mfg. Co., until 1921, when the concern went into the hands of a creditors' committee.

Of the many organizations formed for helping destitute Russians, none is more worthy of support than that of Prince and Princess Youssoupouff.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt has given them her home in Paris that they may carry on a sort of a trade school where the many Russian refugees are being taught useful trades so as to be able to support themselves.

To help in this work Mrs. Anastase Vonsiatsky has arranged what is called An Evening of Fun to be given in Thompson at the residence of her mother, Mrs. N. B. Ream.

There will be a little play never given before, Russian dances and singing, also movies, one film of Charlie Chaplin and another of local scenes and people. Dancing will follow.

Clark, Miss Ellen Whelock, Mrs. C. S. Andem, Mrs. A. W. Marcy, Mrs. Ray Hurlbut, Mrs. C. M. Elliott, Mrs. Graydon Sharpe, Mrs. Harry Prentice and Mrs. Everett Carver.

At the home of Mrs. George Wetherell in East Woodstock a meeting was held of the young matrons of the church to arrange for the church supper. The following were named to have charge of the affair: Mrs. Windsor White, chairman, Mrs. Stewart May, Mrs. Ralph Eddy, Mrs. Ethel Barrett, Mrs. Ewart, Healey, Mrs. Wallace Frink, Ms. Elton Witter, Mrs. Theodore Cox and Mrs. Wendell Bosworth.

Thursday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, the Parent Teacher association met in Miss Keith's room in the High school. Miss Mary C. Wells of Hartford, general secretary of the Consumers' league gave a talk on Women in Industry. The hostesses were Mrs. Annie Child, Mrs. Nikolen and Miss Peck.

T. H. M. S. lost its second game of the season to Putnam high school at North Grosvenordale Wednesday evening. At the end of the first half the score was 9-8 in favor of Tourtellotte. Both teams played well during the whole game but Putnam came out victorious with a score of 26-20. The summary:

Putnam—Thayer, rf; St. Onge, lf; Arnold, c; Calhoun, rg; King lg.

T. H. M. S.—Kenney-Smith, rg; Robbins-T. Johnson, lg; Coderre, c; Smith-Ravenelle, lf; Ryan, rf.

PROGRESS IN THE CANDLER BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 31.—Counsel for Asa G. Candler, defendant in a $500,000 breach of promise suit filed by Mrs. Onerima De Bouchel, today attacked the validity of the engagement of the Atlanta capitalist and the New Orleans society leader, the breaking of which resulted in the suit, now being tried in federal court here.

Immediately after counsel for Mrs. De Bouchel had completed presentation of its direct testimony, the defense charged that Mrs. De Bouchel was the wife of Adolph Rocquet at the time she became engaged to Mr. Candler and the engagement, therefore, was invalid.

The attorneys further said that they would contest the validity of the divorce on the ground that Mrs. De Bouchel was not a legal resident of Reno, Nevada, at the time the decree was issued.

After reading further letters that passed between Mr. Candler and Mrs. De Bouchel, attorneys for plaintiff introduced a number of depositions from citizens of New Orleans and Reno testifying to the good character and reputation of Mrs. De Bouchel. Some of the Reno depositions asserted that two young men, representing themselves as having been sent by Mr. Candler, questioned the deponents about Mrs. De Bouchel's life in Reno.

FATHER AND SON DROWNED IN ATTEMPT TO RESCUE GIRL

Bristol, Jan. 31.—George Bradley, 55, and his son, Harry, 30, of Plainville, were drowned this afternoon in a vain attempt to rescue seven-year-old Helen Deldega of Morrisville from the icy waters of the National Marine Lamp company pond. Steve Deldega, fateher of the girl, and Stanley Plopon, were rescued when they fell through the ice in an attempt to pull the girl to safety.

Helen, who was playing on the ice on her way home from school, broke through. Her screams attracted the attention of her father and Plopok who ran to her assistance. Venturing out on the ice to reach the girl, the two men fell in. Steve Balasco, a neighbor, who heard the shouts of the two men and the girl struggling to keep themselves from being drawn under the ice, rescued the men with the aid of a long rake.

While this rescue was being made, the Bradleys, passing nearby in an automobile endeavored to help the girl whose strength was almost exhausted. Their weight proved too heavy for the thin crust covering the pond and they fell in and were carried under.

The police and firemen dragged the pond for several hours before recovering the body of Harry Bradley. It was well after dark when the other two bodies were brought to the surface. It was necessary, in the meantime, to transport a boat several miles in order to scour the pond.

The medical examiner, who viewed the bodies, declared deaths due to accidental drowning and gave orders for their removal.

CRAMTON HAS CLAIMED CONGRESSIONAL IMMUNITY

Washington, Jan. 31.—Representative Louis C. Cramton of Michigan, today claimed congressional immunity in answer to a suit for $50,000 damages for alleged libel recently filed against him in the District of Columbia supreme court by Francis C. Hasley, president of the National Liberal Alliance and one-time candidate for governor of Oregon.

Statements by him which Mr. Hasley charged were derogatory as to his political affiliations and his loyalty during the war, were made during the course of a speech on the floor of the house. Representative Cramton said in his response, and under the constitution cannot be made the basis of a civil action. He asked the dismissal of the suit.

Ignorance of the law should excuse a lawyer from practicing it.

THE THING WORTH WHILE

Whatever may be the thing we do,
Or the end for which we strive,
If worthy the aim which we pursue,
As onward and on we drive,
We may be sure as the days go by,
If truly and earnestly we try,
That ever closer the goal draws nigh
Where someday we shall arrive.

For the thing worth while is to keep right on,
With a purpose fixed and true,
Resolved with the coming of each new dawn
To do what we have to do;
'Unmindful of steps we are forced to climb,
As we plod each weary mile,
Sustained by a magical faith sublime
In doing the thing worth while.

Whatever the scheme we have in mind,
Whatever the dreams we dream,
It is in the worth while tasks we find
Our hopes of the future gleam,—
Hopes of the future that glow as bright
As stars that blaze on a cold, clear night,
Or flowery fields of pure delight,
Where garlands of promise teem.

For the thing worth while is the compass true
That points the way to the goal,
As the magnet points unerringly to
The Far North's desolate pole;
And ever secure is the course we wend,
In spite of the bitter trial,
And a joy we find in the days we spend
Achieving the thing worth while.

THE COOLIDGE METHOD.

In his selection of counsel to take such action as is deemed advisable relative to the leases of oil land that have been under investigation, President Coolidge has created quite as favorable an impression as he did by his decision to take prompt action in the matter. The men chosen stand high as lawyers and they have been selected from each of the parties so that whatever is done there will be no partisan bias. It is a matter in which there is no place for politics.

With Thomas W. Gregory, who served as attorney general under President Wilson and Silas H. Strawn formerly president of the Chicago Bar Association, in charge of the inquiry as to what course should now be pursued and then to proceed, men of ability and integrity have been named. The former may be more widely known because of the fact that he was a former cabinet member, but the high standing and qualifications of the latter are by no means eclipsed.

Counsel are already at work to determine whether there is any criminal liability, and if such is found it will mean prosecution. They are also boring into the question of the legality of the leases for the purpose of finding out whether they were lawfully made with a view to cancelation.

In connection with this search there arises the question of conservation. The value to the government of a reserve of oil for the use of its navy has long been recognized. The situation has revealed that it had been pointed out that while plans had been made for keeping this reserve of oil in the ground that there was danger of losing it by the flow to neighboring oil lands. Whether that was a fact that called for leasing the lands that the reserve might be saved above ground instead of lost is a question that is sure to arise.

There is no question but what the president is determined that no stones shall be left unturned to bring any guilty ones to justice in connection with the entire affair, and in the course he has adopted he has the utmost confidence of the people.

TRANSPORTATION CHANGES.

Some idea of the effect of the automobile truck upon the transportation business that has hitherto been handled by the railroads is given by the adoption of auxiliary truck service by the railroads for the purpose of rendering the service that is demanded.

When such systems as the New York Central adopts the use on a branch line in Westchester county, N. Y., and the Pennsylvania puts it into effect in Philadelphia it is evident that the demand has reached the point where it must get attention. These railroads are not moving freight in this manner except where the quantity is less than carload lots but it should serve to speed up the movement of freight, to establish a close relationship between the trucks and the railroads and to bring about a better loading of freight cars. With such freight brought to a central point for loading there will be fewer cars with half and quarter loads.

The possibilities of such an arrangement for short haul freight are many. If the introduction of the plan works out well on the single division of the New York Centra, it will be extended to others, and such a plan will no doubt prove a valuable substitute for the trolley freight systems that were once busy serving the public along trolley routes.

It is, however, a demonstration of the tendency of the times: The auto trucks have been carrying a tremendous tonnage over the highways which was formerly handled by the railroads. Quicker service and less handling of the freight are pointed to as the reasons. But apparently the railroads have come to the conclusion that it behooves them to properly protect their own business, and the establishment of auto truck service is in keeping with what trolley roads have done in putting on busses where electric lines have not been successful, or of adopting busses where new service is established. The railroads have seen the necessity of employing autos as well as steam engines.

WORKING IN GERMANY.

With the committee of which General Dawes is the head actually on German soil in its hunt for the troubles and the remedies connected with reparations problem, there is a feeling that it is now in a position to judge much better the conditions than by trying to get hold of the inside facts while standing on the outside.

Much has been said about the inability of Germany to pay, that much wealth has been sent out of the country, that it is not in a position to finance its activities in order to better its financial situation, and it has likewise been claimed that Germany had much hidden wealth, that it could obtain much more by taxation if it did as other countries have done, that it has intentionally created greater expenses for itself which might have been avoided and that it is not so much its inability to pay as its determination not to that has brought about the present situation.

Some of these phases may not be gone into by the committee. But it will gain much by scrutinizing the government's books. Conditions that exist are what must be dealt with. There can be no disposition to overlook the facts. If it is found that Germany cannot pay now it is desirable to know when it can and what will hasten the date. The lack of an understanding in the past on such points, while stubbornly sticking to the view that Germany was dodging its obligations, has made the investigation upon with this committee is engaged highly desirable. The outcome should be beneficial in permitting a clearer view of the situation.

Perhaps it matters less just what Germany did, or the fact that it has created the present situation, than it does to ascertain what is the best way to deal with it. Some suggestions have received the approval of German leaders. Not a little help is being gained from some of them, but Germany is undergoing a scrutiny quite the same as a patient gets a thorough examination from his doctor and it is from the diagnosis of the case that a basis for action will be obtained. It means a study such as has not previously been made.

SAVING LIVES.

An awakening to the fact that the large death rate from automobiles needs increased attention and that greater efforts must be put forth to insure more safety in the highways is an excellent sign. When national organizations take up the problem commissioners of motor vehicle departments insist upon better protection and authorities point to certain laxity as one of the deplorable contributions to such a situation, it indicates an aroused sentiment ove a matter which has gotten too little serious attention.

When the national safety council declares that the prevention of automobile accidents will not be accomplished by mere condemnation of the motorist, or of the careless pedestrain, it means that while words may do something they do not meet the situation. If direction of attention to the many accidents where lives have been lost or serious injuries inflicted was sufficient to put a stop to recklessness or carelessness it would have been disclosed long ago. The fact is that accidents continue to increase in spite of the obvious cases where the motorist or the pedestrian are clearly to blame. They are in fact encouraged by the belief that safety is something which only a few take seriously.

The growing fatality and accident records are sufficient arguments for insisting upon a proper respect for highway laws and traffic regulations, and it is the failure to observe proper care that is hastening the day when people can cross the streets at only certain points. Loss of life is greatly deplored after some fatal accident, but there isn't enough interest in behalf of safety for self or others to serve as a prevention.

CONFIDENCE RESTORED.

Lack of confidence in the government that has prevailed in Greece since the death of Alexander has caused this government to withhold recognition. The resumption of diplomatic relations as the result of the election that was held at the close of 1923 not only indicates an improved condition but the extension of recognition cannot fail to have its good effect upon the present Greek government with Venizelos at its head. It means that the conditions which brought about the lack of confidence have been overcome.

While recognition by this and other countries may help Greece it does not mean that its troubles have all been overcome. It does not indicate that we have expressed a preference for the form of government for that country, and it is not open to the interpretation that we have sided with one party against another. An orderly election with a government resulting that displays the will of the people of that country has brought action by the United States. The time will come, after it has been decided by Greece whether it is to be a monarchy or a republic, when a minister to that country will be named.

Inasmuch as this government, following similar action by Great Britain, has decided to resume official relations it is to be expected that the Greek government will endeavor to make the most of it. That is certain to be the case whatever the circumstances, and Greece is probably well aware of the fact that it can make good use of any such benefit. Recognition is always a big incentive to good national conduct. It means confidence is restored.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The antics of autos during the cold spells cannot all be blamed to the alcohol in the radiators.

Every time winter attempts a come back it falls down seriously after making a great start.

HOW IT HAPPENED

(The girl with the impossible earrings, but a certain charm about her piquant face, speaks over the telephone.)

"Say, cutie, listen. What do you know?

"A whole bunch of stuff. I'll say I do! Say, darling, lookout! I got sumpin to tell you.

"Oh, just sumpin, I wonder if you would pass out if I was to tell you I was going to—you know—get married and everything?

"Sure. That's the right dope. And say, sweetie, listen! It's going to be a reel kind of awful soon, too. You see my—you know—friend he's crazy to not wait and all——

"Honest, didn't I? Ain't I the nut? Well, say sweetie, lookout! I guess you—you know—kinda remember me speaking about a guy that him and me's been acquainted with each other ever since we was to grammer school together, huh? Name George and everything?

"Well, it's him. I'll say it is! We didn't never—you know—go together or anything—anyway not what I'd call going together—just kinda takin' in a movie every coupla weeks or something o else hre was over to our place evenings and all. But, say deary, listen. I never had no thoughts no more'n nothin', just like I said.

"Well, say you'll get off the gas a minute I'll tell you how come. You see this, now, George, I always was reel crazy about him and everything, but seemed like I was maybe—you know—so kinda used to him being round and everything and not thinkin' anything about him and all t hat I kinda—you know—didn't have no special thoughts——

"Anyway, a coupla weeks back George he—you know — phoned me would I go to a movie with him the next evening and everything, and right after I says sure I would and all, another guy that I know him reel well and everyhing, he phones me, too, and says would I go to the Happy Harmony club dance that same evening that me and George was going to the movie.

"I says sure I would like a person does, and then I tells ma she was to phone George and tell him how I forgot I had this—you know—date with the other guy and so him and me we'd go to the movie a coupla nights after the night we was going. See?

"Well, say, dearie, lookout. When it was, the coupla nights after the night him and me didn't go to the movie, here was me all dolled up and all, and did that George come jawsin' up like I told ma to tell him to? He did not.

"And, say, kiddo, listen. I waited till it was too late for the—you know first show and then I phoned over to his place and, bless Pete, if his ma didn't have the nerve to say He'd went out a hour before. Absolootly!

"Then I phoned my girl friend and her and me beat it over to the neighborhood movie and who should me see sittin' there but George and another queen?

"And, say, dearie, listen. I never let on that night that I seen him or nothin', but was I goin' to let him get away with that rough stuff? Absolutely not!

"So I phoned him the next noon and I sure did bawl him out for fair, but, say, kiddo! The way he come back at me it pretty near faded out the pitcher. When I says he couldn't lasuit me sidesteppin' his date with me and then goin' joy ridin' to the movies with another jane he says where did I get that date stuff and, anyway, he guessed he was through and all when a dame handed him the raspberry like I done and he guessed even if he had kinda—you know—thought I was the only queen there was, when he come to give 'em the double O he found there was quite a few others.

"Well, say, cutie, listen. After he handed me a coupla hot ones like that I begun to kinda feel—you know—awful funny and everything, and then he started to hang up on me——"

"Say, sweetie, lookout! When he started to hang up on me, I—you know—commenced to cry right over the phone. Ain't I the nut? And George, he heard me and everything—and, say, dearie, listen at here. Then he says he knoo all the time he wasn't never goin' crasy over no other jane only he wasn't goin' to let no skirt think she could kid him along like that and get away with it and either we was goin' together or else we wasn't and everything.

"And, say, darling, listen. I bought me some swell longerie today and an awful cute dress. You come on over to our place reel soon and give 'em the once over and everything, see?"

people who are guiltless of clothes but extremely painstaking of their hair. It is most unwomanly for a Suk woman to have any hair on her head. The men, however, let their hair grow and upon a father's death his hair is divided among his sons. Each son weaves his into a sort of receptacle in which he places his snuff box, ornaments and other valuable trinkets.

"Sir Harry Johnston tells of another tribe, the Andorobo, who wander among dense forests and game-haunted wildernesses. He says: 'These Andorobo reproduce in a most striking manner the life which we may suppose to have been led by our far-away ancestors in the earliest Stone Ages. They lead, in fact, very much the life that the most primitive types of man led in Great Britain and France in the far-back days of big animals, possibly before the coming of the glacial periods.

"'They live entirely by the chase, often consuming the flesh of birds and beasts uncooked. Though they commit considerable devastation among the game of the province, they are a picturesque feature when encountered.'

"Joseph Thomson, founder of British East Africa which now is Kenya, is famous for never having fired at a native. He first penetrated Masai-land where the reality approaches Kipling's fantastic lines:

'This is the sorrowful story,
Told when the twilight falls,
And the monkeys walk together,
Holding each others' tails.'

"Sir Harry Johnston's Masai-land picture follows:

"'Their towns are surrounded by belts of tall trees, mainly acacias, some of which must be considerably over a hundred feet in height, with green boughs and trunks and ever-present flaky films of pinnated foliage. In the rainy time of the year these trees are loaded with tiny golden balls of flowers, like tassels of floss silk, which exhale a most delicious perfume of honey. In the plains between the villages Grevy's zebra and a few oryx antelopes scamper about, while golden and black jackals hunt for small prey in broad daylight, with a constant whimpering.

"'Enormous baboons sit in the branches of the huge trees ready to rifle the native crops at the least lack of vigilance on the part of the boy guardians. Large herds of cattle and troops of isabella colored donkeys, with broad black shoulder-stripes, go out in the morning to graze, and return through a faint cloud of dust, which is turned golden by the setting sun in the mellow evening, the cattle lowing and occasionally fighting, the asses kicking, plunging and biting one another.'"

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Railroads in Uganda.

"A remote but exceptionally important bit of railroad building is the proposed extension of the Kenya Colony line into Uganda, which will link Mombasa with the Nile," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Pushing the line 75 miles beyond its present terminus at Turbo will open to coastal travelers one of the most diverse regions of the world, from a geographic and scenic standpoint.

"The existing railroad gives ample promise of what lies beyond. When he entered Africa for his famous lion-hunt the late Theodore Roosevelt rode over this stretch on a locomotive cow-catcher and when he gave his first lecture before the National Geographic society after his return he said, 'I really doubt if there is a railroad trip in the world as well worth taking as that up to the little British East African capital of Nairobi.'

"From the terminus of the contemplated extension, at Jinja, the passenger some day will emerge to view two of the world's notable natural features—Victoria Nyanza, to the south, and in the northern background the giant Mount Elgon, with its crater ten miles across and its jagged rim rising to 14,000 feet.

"Jinja is located on the marvelously beautiful gulf through which the waters pour from the mighty lake over Ripon Falls and enter upon the cascaded and swirling course of the Victoria Nile.

"These are only two of Uganda's physical aspects which range from snow-capped mountains, some veiled in heavy mists, to arid areas where rain has not fallen for periods of two years.

CHILD TRAINING

When Your Child Confides in You

By Edith Lochridge Reid

"If I could just be sure that my children tell me everything!" an anxious, devoted mother exclaimed in an earnest tone when discussing child problems at a little informal gathering of mothers.

"Well, they never will tell you quite all they do or think or see or hear," added a second mother, somewhat more experienced, "but whether they confide in you more or less will depend entirely on how you receive their confessions."

We all wish to have the unqualified confidence of our boys and girls, and we must be very charitable in our attitude when they offer us the secrets of their hearts. One of the dearest mothers I ever knew had a wonderful way with her boys, and the power of her discipline lay in her own simple words, "I try never to act shocked at what they tell me."

The fact is that not many children do things that their parents did not do when they were children. We may not like to admit it, perhaps, but even so, why should we always imply in our discipline of a child who has done wrong that he is the only one who ever was at fault? This method may work very well when the child is tiny and inexperienced, but it will never hold his confidence when he is older.

A child in the wrong feels like any sinner: he usually wants to repent and make a good resolution. But how can he do so if we are sitting over him weeping and saying, "O, I am so surprised!" and "I never thought my little son would do such a thing"?

We may more truthfuly say, "I am just as sorry as you are that this has happened; let's talk a little more about it, and see if we can find a better way to act next time." The child now feels your sympathy as well as your regret, and he will be encouraged to make further confidences just because you have treated him in a man-to-man fashion rather than in a hurt, condescending manner.

The sooner a mother recognizes the fact that her child is heir to all ordinary human frailities, the less disappointment will she meet. This may sound like a paradox, but a wise, experienced mother will admit the truth of it.

Our child will disobey and do wrong things just as we did when we were children. He will tell untruths—not because we have not trained him in honesty and truthfulness from babyhood, but because he is seeking to defend himself from something that he imagines is worse than lying. And right there is the point I wish to stress about inspiring the child to confide in you. He must not feel that your reproach is going to be so severe that he would rather lie than face it. Rather he must go to you with the feeling that he is to receive a fair and respectful hearing from a judge who understands and sympathizes. He must not be consumed by your wrath nor frightened and humiliated by your scorn if he does get up the moral courage which it takes to make confession.

Kindly, sympathetic reproof is always helpful, and constructive suggestions of conduct will not destroy the child's confidence, but I doubt whether acting shocked at a child's misdeeds ever inspired him to act square and play fair. Let's choose a safer way to face his confessions.

Piles

Can't Be Cured From the Outside.

External treatments seldom cure Piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send a fresh current through the stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., set at work some years ago to find a real internal Pile remedy. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It's easy to take, and can always be found at Lee & Osgood's, who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

Yucatan's Influence.

Henequen means reasonably cheap and plentiful binder twine; while binder twine makes possible the use of harvesting machines; harvesters cheapen grain production cheap grain means cheap bread, and so henequen—and arid Yucatan—play important parts in feeding America and the world. Henequen, which is a sort of cactus not unlike the century plant or the "pulque cactus" in appearance, has been grown in Yucatan since prehistoric times and its fiber was used in local plantation and village industries. But there was no outside market of considerable magnitude for the fiber until the increasing use of harvesting machinery in the United States created a demand for large quantities of binder twine.

New Cough and Cold Remedy

In Lozenge Form—Acts Quickly—Folks Everywhere Using Them.

Old folks, middle aged people and children are now using a wonderful new form of Cough and Cold Remedy in pleasant lozenge form. The quick effects produced are said to be due, not only to the rare potency of the ingredients, but to the fact that the lozenges dissolve slowly in the mouth, thus carrying constantly soothing, healing medicament to the inflamed membranes of the throat and congested parts.

The very first lozenge loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon the phlegm will thin out. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold. This remarkable new form of cough and cold remedy is sold by most druggists under the name of Heneph's Honey and Tar Cough Lozenges. For sale at Lee & Osgood Co.

MEN SERVED SUPPER AT TRINITY METHODIST

The three-day mid-winter festival, conducted at the social room of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, under the auspices of all the church organizations came to a successful close Thursday evening with a supper served by the men of the church.

Fourteen tables set beneath "the rainbow", prettily worked out with various colored streamers, draped across the hall to all parts of the room, were filled to capacity and over 200 people enjoyed the following menu served by the men of the church:

Chicken Pie
Mashed Potatoes Creamed Onions
Green Peas Celery
Cranberry Sauce
Rolls Tea Coffee
Squash and Mince Pie

The hosts at the various tables were Rev. J. Harlow Graham, pastor of the church, Ernest O. Rodier, Guy B. Dolbeare, David Wilson, George Armstrong, Wilbur Baldwin, David B. Kinne, John Phillips, Dr. E. J. Jones, John B. Stanton, Ernest M. Newberry, Christopher Allen, and Albert Boardman.

The sale continued during the supper and later in the evening all remaining articles were auctioned off by James C. McPherson, Guy B. Dolbeare and Ernest M. Newbury.

The church derived a fine profit through the mid-winter festival sale to be used for church work. Much credit for the success of the affair is due to the work of Mrs. Ernest M. Newbury and her corps of able assistants who worked unstingly for the success of the festival.

STATE OFFICERS ATTEND TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF A. O. H. AUXILIARY

With state officers and other guests present, Division No. 14, Ladies Auxiliary, A. O. H., celebrated its tenth anniversary Thursday evening at the Wauregan house dining room with a banquet and entertainment that made the event one of the most notable in the history of the division.

Covers were laid for 80 and the tables presented an especially attractive appearance with decorations of roses presented by Miss Rose O'Neil of New York, American and Irish flags, the banner of the division, and three silver loving cups that the division has won at different times.

At the hour for the banquet those attending marched into the hall, headed by the chaplain, Rev. M. H. May, the state officers and the officers of the division, while the march was played by Crowley's Hyperion orchestra of eight pieces.

The following was the menu:

Rose of New England Cocktail
Celery Olives Salted Almonds
Cream of Southern Tomato Bisque
Roast Turkey, Chestnut Dressing, Giblet Gravy
Mashed Potatoes Mashed Turnips
Boiled Onions
Palm Beach Salad
French Bread
Neapolitan Ice Cream
Fancy Cakes
Cafe Noir.

The blessing was asked by the chaplain and there were interesting remarks by Father May and by Rev. W. A. Keefe.

A cordial welcome was expressed by the division president, Mrs. Julia Brock, who was toastmistress for the evening. After the singing of The Star Spangled Banner, remarks by Mrs. Mary Crean of New Britain, state treasurer, were followed by an address upon the good of the order by the state president, Mrs. Jennie C. Carroll of New Haven. Miss Charlotte Holloway of Hartford, a former state officer, was also heard in an interesting address.

A gift from the division to the president, Mrs. Brock, was made by Miss Anna Connor, who expressed warm praise of Mrs. Brock's energetic and effective work in the office and presented her a beautiful basket of flowers in which was an amethyst and diamond ring.

Special guests of the evening were five young ladies who unveiled the charter ten years ago, the Misses Cecelia Brock, Helen O'Neil, Madeline Grodowski, Mary Tracy and Loretta Thompson. A telegram was read from Miss Margaret McCaffrey of Hartford, a past treasurer of the division, and the two birthday cakes, which were presented by Mrs. Hannah Magill and Mrs. Mary Brewer, were cut so that each one present had a piece of cake.

After the tables had been cleared away, there was a programme that included solos by Mrs. Crean, Miss Margaret O'Connell, Mrs. Margaret Peterson and Mrs. Annie Brooks with an Irish jig by Miss Kitty McMullen and a jig and clog by Mrs. Nellie Moore that brought down the house.

The evening closed with dancing, for which Professor Crowley prompted for the old fashioned square dances, and an excellent programme was rendered by the orchestra, which was called on for many encores. After the last dance, the closing ode, God Save Ireland, brought the evening to a close.

The successful observance of the anniversary was planned and carried out by the committee which comprised Julia Brock, Elizabeth Fitzgerald, Hannah Magill, Alice Shea, Annie Connelly, Bridget Dwyer, Frances Williams, Margaret Coughlin and Nellie O'Neil.

AIR LINE ROAD WOULD RUN THROUGH PUTNAM

The construction of an air line road between New York via Putnam was proposed this week by Van Ness Bates of Brookline, Mass., at meeting of the highways and motor vehicle commission of Massachusetts, in Boston. Mr. Bates said this route would shorten the distance between New York and Boston by 40 miles.

In the opinion of Mr. Williams, the need is not so much for more highways as it is for relieving congestion in the cities and it would seem to be unwise to direct any more traffic into Worcester until a way has been found of routing traffic around that city. The Boston-Worcester road can carry more traffic than it is carrying now, but there is great congestion in Worcester. Eventually there will have to be another route all the way from Boston to Springfield.

K. OF P. WINS CUP AT BOZRAH COMMUNITY DANCE

One of the most novel dances ever held in Norwich was given at The Venice on West Main street Thursday evening under the auspices of the Bozrah Community club, over 100 couples enjoying an evening of pleasure and excitement.

A new stunt for dances at Norwich was tried in offering to the organization receiving the most votes a handsome silver loving cup gold lined, that stood nearly 10 inches in height. The voting was heavy and at times the Young Women's Hebrew Association led in the voting by 3 votes, leading the Knights of Pythias by that margin. Eight other organizations were also represented in the voting but it was easily seen that the fight was between the high two. Voting closed promptly at 11.30 o'clock, each ticket representing one vote. In the last half hour the lead changed three times and tickets were rapidly purchased, the Knights of Pythias playing safe until 11.29 1-2 when they turned in 26 tickets to the secretary, which won over the Y. M. T. A. by four votes, 67 to 63.

The cup was then presented to the Knights of Pythias by George Schiller, president of the Bozrah Community club, who thanked the patrons for the liberal contributions, enabling the club to make a fine profit on the dance which was given for charity. The voting stunt was novel and caused no little excitement as the scores were announced at 15 minute intervals.

The music for the dance was furnished by the Blue Ribbon Syncopators, under the direction of Michael D'Atri, the numbers being lengthy and the music of high class.

The dance was given by the Bozrah Community club, which was founded not long ago to provide service for Hebrew children of Bozrah, every child being carried home after school by automobile, the cost of which is taken care of by the club members, who number about twenty.

Bozrah is the only place in the country where this scheme is carried out. When public schools close for the day, automobiles are awaiting the Hebrew children, and they are taken to the Hebrew school of Bozrah, founded about three months ago, there to receive instructions in the language of their race. Previous to studying at the Hebrew school they are served light refreshments, and at the close of school are carried to their homes in the country surrounding by automobile.

The committee in charge of the dance Thursday evening comprised George Schiller, chairman, Nathan A. Gilman, Joseph Berkman and Louis Arlevitz.

The loving cup which was given away has been on display in the window of Ferguson, the jeweler on Franklin square and has attracted considerable attention.

Perkins; member of the church committee for three years, Mrs. D. L. Allen; member of executive council, Arthur M. Thompson; member of executive council, Mrs. Joseph French; superintendent of Sunday school for one year, Ernest L. Latimer.

Rev. Mr. Abbott presented a recommendation of the board of deacons to the effect that the church cooperate in the plan of visitation evangelism to be carried out in Norwich during the coming two weeks by several of the local churches. Rev. Mr. Abbott explained the proposed plan which met with the approval of the church membership.

General William A. Aiken spoke briefly in favor of the visitation evangelism plan and moved that the church approves the plan. His motion was unanimously carried.

Rev. Mr. Abbott announced that the flowers on the dining tables were the gift of Otto Ernst and family and a vote of thanks was extended them. Adjournment was taken about 9 o'clock.

The committee in charge of the supper comprised Mrs. Herbert M. Larou, chairman, Miss M. A. Porteous, Mrs. A. H. Lathrop, Mrs. John Kukla, Mrs. John Tefft, Mrs. R. H. Breckenridge, Mrs. E. V. Ross and Mrs. H. A. Clarke.

Climbing Fish.

In his "Natural History of Ceylon," Sir J. Emmerson Tennent states that on one occasion he saw hundreds of climbing fish crawling up the bank of a driedup pool, diverging in every direction on reaching the top to a distance of 50 yards and still traveling onward. The supposition is that they travel by night or before sunrise. One peculiarity is the large size of the vertebral column, quite out of proportion to the rest of the body. In migrating they keep their gills expanded and moistened by a curious vessel above the gills that holds water. When the fish leaves the water it carries with it enough water to moisten its gills as often as necessary to sustain life. The eggs float loosely at the surface of the water and hatch in two or three days. The color of this fish is a light brassy olive, with eyes of orange, its length is up to seven inches.

Franklin's Glass Harmonica.

One of the most curious musical instruments ever made was the glass harmonica that Benjamin Franklin invented. It was composed of glass disks of different sizes set on a spindle and made by a treadle to revolve in a trough of water. The player touched the wet edges of the disks as they revolved and thereby produced musical notes of unusual sweetness. The instrument was in great vogue for many years, but the music was said to have an injurious effect on the listener's nerves, and the friction of the glass disks made the player's fingers sore.—Youth's Companion.

Attract Ducks to Nests.

The eider duck of Iceland is exceptionally fond of bright colors and musical sounds, and at the approach of the breeding season the natives hang out gayly-colored rags and bells in order to attract the attention of the ducks to the nests which have been carefully prepared for them on shore.

DOMESTIC HEROINES IN OUR HOMES

Women who lead a domestic life seem to listen to every call of duty excepting the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. As long as they can drag themselves around women continue to work. Necessity to keep on their feet all day when over-tired, or sitting in cramped positions day in and day out often brings on ailments from which women suffer tortures. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been strengthening women and overcoming such ailments. Sickness and pain vanish under its influence and thousands of women have been benefited by it.

FINLAND TAKES LEAD OVER NORWAY FOR FIRST HONORS IN OLYMPIC GAMES

Chamonix, France, Jan. 31 (By the A. P.)—Finland today again assumed the lead in the nip-and-tuck battle with Norway for first place among the nations competing in the Olympic winter sports, by winning second place in the figure skating competition for couples. First honors are certain to be taken by one of the two northern countries, and will be decided by the remaining ski events, at which both countries are the greatest exponents, with prospects favoring Norway. No other country has a chance for first position.

In the hockey contests today, the United States team, playing well within itself, defeated England, 11 to 0, thereby reaching the semi-finals. The Canadians have already reached the semi-finals, and tomorrow the Americans will play Sweden, the second team in the second half, and the Canadians will meet the English players. On an estimate of the form displayed thus far, it would appear that Canada and the United States will fight it out for first honors.

The bob-sleigh chute has been voted the most difficult in the world to negotiate safely by a majority of the exponents of the sport gathered here for the competition, which will begin Saturday. Accidents on the high-banked turns and sharp corners have already accounted for four entries out of the original twelve. Belgium, France, Great Britain, Hungary, Italy and Switzerland will be represented in this event. One crew each of the Italians, British, Belgians and French has already been put out of commission, of which Count De La Fregolliere, of France, and Browning, of the British crew, regarded as probable winners, suffered broken bones.

The French captain had an arm broken yesterday, and the accident to the British crew, which happened during practice today, resulted in the fracture of both of Browning's legs. The bob-sleigh at the time was traveling fifty miles an hour, and it leaped sixty feet into a snowbank.

The American ski team decided to try the Olympic ski take-off this afternoon, in spite of the expressed determination to await the actual competition. The showing of the men was not particularly good. Carleton alone clearing over 30 metres. None of the men turned in 100 feet, while the Norwegians and Swedes were regularly jumping 130 to 140 feet.

PLAINFIELD VS "RECS" OF SOUTH MANCHESTER TONIGHT

In what promises to be the best basketball game ever seen on the Plainfield floor the fast Rec team of South Manchester will clash with the home outfit tonight.

The Recs have invaded this territory on the previous occasion having defeated Plainfield on their first appearance and the fast Army and Navy club of Taftville on their two latter appearances. This aggregation has an enviable record to be proud of having won every one of their last nine starts against some of the fastest teams in the state. Manager Ballsieper will use Angelli and Ballsieper in the forward positions, Gustafson at center, Benson, Bissell or Carvini as guards.

The above aggregation has all the qualities of a real basketball team, including size, every man being six feet or over, wonderful teamwork and fast, but not least, they are a bunch of clean players, rough work very seldom entering into their play.

The Plainfield team has been strengthened by the addition of Harry Mills at center, who needs no introduction to this part of the state. The team is all set for tonight's contest, a strenuous workout was held Monday night in preparation for tonight's tilt. It will be quite a feather in Plainfield's cap if they defeat this crack five from South Manchester.

In the preliminary game the Buddies will line up against North Grosvenordale.

NORWAY SENDS FORMAL INVITATIONS TO MRS. MALLORY

New York, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, seven times national Women's Tennis champion, who had been barred from competing for the United States in the Olympics, is eligible to represent Norway, her native land, if she desires to do so. This question, a subject of uncertainty for several weeks, was settled definitely today in an invitation extended to Mrs. Mallory to compete for Norway.

The invitation, sent by the president of the Norwegian Lawn Tennis Association, informed Mrs. Mallory that French Olympic authorities had given official assurance that she is fully qualified to represent her native country, though now an American citizen by marriage. The former titleholder, however, declined to say whether she would accept or not.

Mrs. Mallory was prevented from representing this country because she competed for Norway in the 1912 Olympics at Stockholm. The Olympic rules provide that no competitor who ever represented one nation can compete later for another land. American authorities sought to have an exception made in Mrs. Mallory's case, because of her long residence here, but this was denied.

Mrs. Mallory was advised she would have to defray her own expenses if she competes for Norway. The invitation to her, explaining that "our finances are in such bad shape that we cannot pay the expenses of the Tennis players, so they all pay their own."

Although unable to represent America in the Olympics, Mrs. Mallory is expected to be selected as a member of this country's team which will oppose a British women's team in a series of matches at London in June for the Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman trophy.

Miss Scharman, paired with Miss Ceres Baker, East Orange, N. J., met defeat by Miss Marie Wagne, Yonkers, N. Y., and Miss Martha Bayard, Short Hills, N. J., in the doubles. In the final game Miss Wagner scored the last three points by clean passes through the center of the opposite court.

Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, Wilmington, Del., and Miss Bancroft won the other semi-final in the doubles. With ease they defeated Mrs. Spencer F. Weaver and Mrs. Theodoref, Sohst, New York, 6-0, 6-2.

She had barely room to swing the club, but managed to put her approach shot on the green 25 feet from the cup. She sank the putt which gave her a half and sent the match to an extra hole which she won with at par 4.

Mrs. Hurd ruined her chances for getting a half when she put her second shot into a trap. Miss Collett covered the 18 holes in 76 strokes, while Mrs. Hurd required 77.

HENRY F. SULLIVAN, ENGLISH CHANNEL SWIMMER, IN NORWICH FOR FEW DAYS

On the afternoon of Aug. 4, 1923, cabled despatches from France carried the news that Henry F. Sullivan of Lowell, Mass., had completed the swimming of the English Channel in 26 hours and fifty minutes, being the first American to accomplish the feat. Today Mr. Sullivan, who is classed as the world's endurance swimming champion is in Norwich and will be until Sunday. He is giving Norwich people a chance to see his feat as it was recorded by the motion picture camera. He is appearing at the Broadway theatre and gives a very vivid description of the tremendous task which he accomplished.

Just past his 31st birthday, Mr. Sullivan is in perfect physical condition and his smiling Irish face radiates his good health. He called at the Bulletin office on Thursday evening just to let know he was in town. He talked willingly of his feat and of the other six times that he had tried to accomplish it.

Sullivan weighs over 200 pounds, is 5 feet 6 1-2 inches tall, and has a chest shaped like a barrel. He measures 46 inches around the chest. In the swim across the channel Sullivan lost over 20 pounds in weight. Before entering the water his body was rubbed in lard. This was done to keep the water from soaking through his pores and causing him to become water-logged.

Sullivan was trained by John Conlon whom he regards in the light of a big brother. Sullivan says that the one thing every athlete must have in order to be successful is the right kind of a trainer. Conlon is not only the right kind of trainer, but he thinks the world and all of Sullivan.

The water on the channel swim was at about the same temperature as the local waters are today. During the entire swim Sullivan used nothing but the breast stroke. This act alone set one of the world records of which Sullivan is the proud possessor.

Sullivan, as the result of his conquering the channel, was presented with a cash prize of $5,000 and a silver cup, valued at $2,500, by the London Sketch. This cup, which is displayed on the stage with an American flag for the background, is a handsome piece of work by a silversmith. The supporting pedestals are British admiralty figures, symbolic of the sea and crowning the cup is a miniature Winged Victory. The cup is over three feet in height. It is inscribed suitably to cover his achievements.

Sullivan is of a very genial nature. His ruddy face beams with broad smiles when he is talking to anyone. He has a grip like a vise as anyone who has shaken his hand will testify. He is the picture of health and good condition of an athletic athlete.

Besides the trophy Sullivan has two other valued personal possessions. He holds an honorary life membership in the Catholic Young Mens Lyceum of Lowell, Mass., an organization which has an age limit of 21. He is also the proud possessor of an honorary life membership of the Elks.

Mr. Sullivan is to give a talk this evening to the swimming team of the Y. M. C. A. He is interested in promoting the aquatic sport and is now planning an 86 mile swim from New York to Atlantic City.

HOW MANY CLOVER SEED FOR EACH ACRE

In the early eighteenth century, Edward Holey determined the probable death rate of people at different ages and upon this basis modern life insurance was started. When some one can foretell the probable death rate of clover seeds, the economical rate of seeding can be accurately given. There are 700,000 seeds in a pound of alsike clover seed, 250,000 in a pound of red clover and 220,000 in a pound of alfalfa seed. If a pound of each of each of these were distributed equally over an acre of ground, there would be sixteen alsike seeds, six red clover seeds, and five alfalfa seeds on each square foot. Are not sixteen plants of alsike clover, six of red clover or five of alfalfa, to a square foot all that any farmer asks? The writer has seen excellent stands of red clover from seedings as small as two pounds per acre.

Why seed more than two pounds? Not every clover seed germinates at once even when the best of seed is used. Clover seeds have hard coverings which are frequently impervious to water for months or even years—one explanation for clover sometimes appearing when not seeded recently. More important is the fact that not all seeds are covered to the proper depth. Contrary to the opinions of some, clover seeds do nedd a covering of soil to protect them from the sun and retain moisture. Too much covering prevents the very small plant from getting to the sunlight early in its life.

Clover seeds need only a slight covering; a fraction of an inch. Very loose, sandy soils may cover small seeds to the depth of an inch without harm. The practice of sowing on frozen ground is a good one for the crumbling of the soil when the frost comes out covers many of the seeds. A shower after seeding upon loose, freshly cultivated ground will cover all seeds sufficiently. Alfalfa seeding drills are ideal as they cover all seeds uniformly but they are an uncommon implement in this state. Brush-harrows, spike-tooth harrows with the teeth set back, weeders or a roller on very soft ground, are also satisfactory.

Clover seldom grows where it is not sown. Many fields are striking illustrations of this fact. In such fields there is an abundance of plants where the sower walked, but a few feet away the stand becomes thinner and thinner and then a streak with no clover but many weeds. How beautiful! A crop of weed seeds to seed the whole farm. Hand sowing is difficult; the writer knows that from attempts he has made. Knapsack seeders are cheap and do better work than skillful hand sowers. Wheelbarrow seeders are still better as the effect from wind is not so marked. Careful marking and even sowing twice, the second time transversing the first, will aid in getting the seed on uniformly distributed?

Young clover plants are very small. They are unable to compete with husky weeds, thick oats or corn. Weeds need to be removed by thorough preparation of the seed bed before planting. A light seeding of oats will give the clover a glimpse at the sun. A seeding of four to six pecks of oats per acre is sufficient.

The most important factor of all is the use of high quality seed. No seeding conditions are favorable enough to make foreign clover or alfalfa seed adapted to our winters. What if 10 per cent of 25 per cent of the seed is shrivelled and small, an equal portion old seed and still another quarter of it from a warmer climate? A seeding will have to be extremely heavy if only 25 per cent or 50 per cent of it is high quality, northern American grown. When seed of known origin and quality can be secured from reliable sources, all other seed is too expensive to buy.

The question of how many seeds should be sown per acre remains unanswered. A mixture of 6 lbs. of red clover and three pounds of alsike clover will suit most conditions. If the soil is poorly drained or needs lime badly, 3 pounds of red and five pounds of alsike or seven pounds of alsike and no red will be better. Red clover should not be omitted where it grows satisfactorily. Timothy, red top or both should be added to insure hay where clover may fail.

Twenty pounds of alfalfa is being found satisfactory by many farmers in this state. If conditions are favorable, including the depth of covering the seed, 15 pounds per acre are ample. Western farmers use 10 pounds.

The suggestions for amounts of seed for sowing are on the basis of high quality seed only. If the seed is 75 per cent foreign grown, then the amounts need so be multiplied by four to secure equal results. Be sure you know the quality of the seed before you decide the rate of sowing.

MEXICAN REBELS ARE RETREATING IN DISORDER

Mexico City, Jan. 31.—(By the A. P.)—General Urbalejo, leading the federal vanguard, occupied Orisaba at 12.30 o'clock p. m., today without resistance according to an official statement issued by the war department.

"The forces of the rebel general Sanches, the statemen adds, are retreating in disorder and it is believed the way is open to Vera Cruz, with, however, the possibility of resistance being offered at Soledad, 20 miles west of Vera Cruz, if a reorganization by the rebels can be effected, otherwise, it is stated, the revolutionary army will be dvided.

VENIZELOS INSISTS UPON RESIGNING AS PREMIER

Athens, Jan. 31—(By the A. P.)—Fear that a military dictatroship headed by General Condylis may follow the resignation of the Venizelos government is expressed in anti-Venizelist circles. Republican newspapers report that the Royalist Reservists are organizing.

Premier Venizelos insists upon resigning from his sick bed, but the members of the cabinet are counseling postponement owing to their inability to agree upon a successor who can prevent the stormclouds from breaking.

Because of the inability of Greek physicians to diagnose the premier's illness the famous French Professor Abramle has been summoned from Paris. Mme. Venizelos is expected to arrive from France on Monday.

It was announced late today that the premier had acceded to the request of the cabinet ministers, and in order to give more time for them in their effort to agree upon a successor he had promised to withhold his resignation until the famous French professor, Vasquez, the heart specialist, arrives from Paris on Sunday.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

DOING TO BUY MOTHER SOMETHING

I often wonder, dear little boys and girls, if you ever save some of your pennies to buy a present for mother, because you will never forget the look in her eyes when you give her something which you have bought all by yourself. This is what Little Jack Rabbit does. Yes, sir! Every day he saves a carrot cent, and some day he will be able to buy Lady Love, his pretty bunny mother, a handkerchief or a nice new ribbon for her hair.

'Tis'n a tiny iron bank.

Full of carrot cents.

Some day I'll get another one

To hold a million pence."

Sang bunny boy as he polished the bank dear knob. Then, putting back the cloth and the little polish box, he fed the canary bird.

"Thank you for the breakfast seeds

And the cup of water,

You're a thoughtful bunny boy,

Doing what you oughter."

Twitted the little yellow bird, her head on one side, as Little Jack Rabbit hurried out to the woodpile.

As he placed an armful of kindling wood in the box by the kitchen stove, Little Miss Cricket chirped:

"Helping mother! That's the way

To begin a happy day."

The next minute, the Three Little Grasshoppers tuned up their fiddles They always spent the cold months of the year with Little Miss Cricket in the woodbox. There it was always nice and warm for Lady Love's nest little slaves burned briskly to bake the carrot cake and stew the delicious lollypops.

Clyde at hand on the right see Professor Crow.

"There, the wood box is full," panted the little rabbit. "Now I can go out to play."

"Kiss me goodbye," said his pretty mother, wiping her hands, for she was kneading the dough for her bread. Then, away went her little bunny boy, hipperty hop, clipperty clop, down the path through the brambles.

Mr. Merry Sun was winking from the sky and Billy Breeze whistling a tune. The meadow grass was brown and dry and the crows were cawing from the wood. Close at hand on the rail fence sat Professor Crow. On seeing the little rabbit, he open his Wisdom Book, and cawed:

"Early in the morning,

While the dew is on the grass,

The Bubbling Brook's a mirror

To look in while you pass."

Dear me! That wise old crow must have seen that the bunny boy's hair was all mussed, for when the little rabbit looked at his face, he saw that he had forgotten to part his hair down the middle of his back. Dear, dear, he was dreadfully ashamed, and at once took a little chip out of his pocket and made his hair look neat and nice.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Professor Crow. Bunny boys sometimes forget to make themselves look neat," and away he flew, with a loud "caw, caw, caw!"

"Dear me," said Little Jack Rabbit, "I must be more careful," and away he hopped, into the next story.

DON LOUIS DE BOURBON IS NO BUSINESS MAN

New York, Jan. 31.—Don Louis De Bourbon, who claims to be a half brother to King Alfonso and a potential heir to the throne of Spain, is not a business man his attorneys admitted in supreme court today.

The attorneys appeared to answer Thomas S. Ormistons petition for an injunction suspending operations of the World Clearing Association of America and ordering its president, Don Louis De Bourbon, to submit an accounting of finances. Don Louis was not in court.

Ormiston claimed he was half partner with Don Louis when the clearing association was formed "to promote, stimulate and foster international trade," including the development of Turkish concessions, oil and otherwise, which the Don asserted rivalled the Chester franchises. Later, according to Ormiston, Don Louis quietly voted his directors, including the plaintiff, of office and substituted for them a group of Wall street men who had $50,000.

"Don Louis, in whose veins runs the blood of royalty, has a childlike faith in his fellowmen," his attorneys told Justice O'Malley. "He isn't a business man."

They were willing, they said, "to have the affair wound up, but didn't know how to go about it." They declared there were no assets and that Don Louis had borrowed money and incurred debts for which Ormiston, if he established his claim to partnership, might be held jointly liable.

Justice O'Malley took the case under advisement.

JUMP OF NEARLY 6 CENTS IN STERLING EXCHANGE

New York, Jan. 31.—Heavy buying of sterling exchange by European speculators, together with an increased domestic demand, resulted in an extra jump of nearly 6 cents in demand bills to $4.31 1-4, the highest quotation this year, in today's local foreign exchange market.

European speculators, apparently acting on the theory that the labor government in Great Britain would result in disturbed business and economic conditions, had been heavy sellers of sterling in the past six weeks. The seemingly conservative legislative program decided upon by the labor party, combined with its expressions of friendship for France, undoubtedly disappointed the speculators who had counted on an early introduction of a capital levy bill and a possible split with France on international questions. This led to extensive short covering operations, which gained extra momentum today when American merchants came into the market for sterling bills.

American purchases of British rubber were partly responsible for the increased domestic demand for sterling bills.

French and other European exchanges improved in sympathy with sterling, although the gains were not as large, proportionately.

Sixty-five per cent of the $19,000,000 acres of forests in private hands are entirely without fire prevention regulations.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

BALANCED RATION IS ESSENTIAL FOR HENS

Poultrymen are now thinking of getting their incubators, poultry houses and poultry ready for the breeding and hatching season this year. Before starting in it is a good plan to think over the reasons for good or poor hatches, so as to obtain the best results possible.

Often the causes of a poor hatch will be found prior to the actual incubation. To begin with, there is the all important matter of fertility, a consideration subject to a multitude of influences. Among the most important are the health of the parent stock, the number of hens mated with one male, feeding, housing and range.

There can be no question but what the poultry grower should expect a larger number of fertile eggs from healthful hens in comparison with diseased birds, as the vigor and vitality of healthful hens is inevitably greater than the stamina of poor physical specimens.

It is thought by many experts that liberal feeding in comparison with a scanty diet will give higher fertility, but care should be taken not to interpret "liberal feeding" as overfeeding. It is essential to feed a well-balanced ration with the proper proportion of proteins, carbohydrates, fats, minerals, etc. The best ration is the following, recommended by various state experiment stations, the quantity in each case being 100 pounds: bran, middlings, corn meal, gluten food, meat scraps and ground oats. In addition there should be scratch feed made of one part oats, three parts cracked corn and two parts of wheat. Succulent feeds should be given the hens during the breeding season. These are such as cabbages, steamed alfalfa, sprouted oats, etc. Many poultrymen have found that the feeding of mangels or beets at this season is injurious to the fertilization of eggs.

Housing is a great factor in influencing egg fertility than is at first apparent. When birds are kept in damp drafty places where the floor is wet their eggs will have a much lower fertility than when more ideal pens where little exercise is possible or under conditions which discourage exercise in many cases lay eggs of low fertility.

Eggs for hatching should not be kept longer than two weeks. Two days is ideal and if kept for two weeks they must be placed in a room where the temperature is continuously between 50 and 60 degrees fahrenheit.

Storrs college at one time set 1100 Rhode Island Red eggs. One-half the eggs were three, four and five days old, the other half 11 or 12 days old. From the first half 70 chicks hatched from each 100 fertile eggs from the second half 43 eggs hatched from 100 fertile eggs.

FARMERS URGED TO RAISE PEACHES

People rightly favor local grown peaches. They come fresh right from the trees fully ripened with all the full aroma of this queen of fruits. There is no waste. They are best for dessert, and they can better than peaches brought here from hundreds of miles away. But there are not enough local peaches grown to supply the demand for this popular fruit.

Farmers who have tillable hill land with elevations of 200 to 600 or 700 feet should give some thought and study to the possibilities of peach culture. The elevation is important to afford air drainage and prevent local frosts in late spring when trees are in bud or blossom. The direction of the slope is probably not of much consequence in this section.

While once in while a crop failure is expected on account of low winter temperature or late spring frosts, the facts are a crop of peaches can be grown here about three years in every four on the average, provided a proper location is selected at the start, the right varieties are planted and good culture given.

Peach trees are set in orchards from 16 by 16 feet to 20 by 20 feet apart, but a good average distance is 18 by 18 feet. Planted thus there are 134 trees to the acre. Four years old trees frequently bear three baskets to the tree and trees six to ten years old six to ten baskets to the tree, so that 700 to 1,000 baskets to the acre are frequently secured in well cared for orchards.

The start in peach culture is made in the spring preferably on land which has grown some cultivated crop as corn or potatoes the previous year. At least the land ought to have been fall plowed if previously in turf. Medium sized one year trees are used.

For the first two or three years sweet corn, tomatoes or cabbage can be grown between the trees; thereafter the trees will need all the room. After this, the seasonal program calls for clean cultivation with frequent harrowing up to about July 15, then the sowing of a green manure crop like crimson clover, harrowing this in the following spring and fertilizing. The trees are relatively small so spraying and pruning are simplified.

For many reasons the elberta is the most profitable variety for this section. The trees are hardy, they grow well, bear heavily, the fruit is uniform in size and quality with little of unsalable grade, and finally, they come when schools open and families are back from vacations and ready to start canning.

MIX OWN FERTILIZER IF SAVING IS LARGE

Shall I mix my own fertilizers this year or buy them already mixed is often asked the county agent as he meets farmers. This question is a very important one, says an agriculture expert, and the right answer may mean many dollars to the farmer.

To answer this question correctly, there are a number of other questions which should be answered first. Can the mixed fertilizers be bought as cheaply as the ingredients. It generally costs $2 a ton to mix the chemicals at home. What chemicals are contained in the mixed goods? Does the mixed fertilizer contain a high per cent. filler? Can the chemicals be mixed properly at home. What kind of crops will the fertilizer be used? In fact, there are many questions involved when one wishes to mix his own chemicals. There are many farmers, however, who would not buy mixed goods because they have had such good results in mixing their own fertilizer.

To begin with says one agent, I believe the first consideration is the matter of price. If one can save $5 or $6 per ton by mixing, he should do so. Next in importance is to know how to mix and what ingredients to buy. For instance, one should always buy reground nitrate of soda, etc., to prevent lumps. He should have a set of scales to weigh material accurately. If material is to stand any length of time after mixing, he should use some sort of drier to prevent caking.

"The following material may be used if not too costly either in labor or material: bone meal, fine tankage, cottonseed meal (these three contain fertilizer properties) sand, coal ashes, sawdust, and dry muck or even dry dirt. The materials must be mixed evenly so that no great amount of concentrated fertilizer will fall on any one spot of land and no fertilizer fall on another piece which would cause an uneven crop. Further, certain weeds coming into contact with concentrated fertilizer would injure the germinating power."

What To Do For Frail, Feeble, Old People

"When age begins to thin the blood all the vital functions slow down and impair the health. In such cases," says Dr Emil Sauer, "I know of nothing better than true organic iron."

"What old people need most, is something to put back the iron in their blood. Without iron nothing you eat does you any good. Your food merely passes through you. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food."

"For old people who feel their former strength slipping away, I always prescribe Nuxated Iron, which contains iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and like the iron in your blood. It is a true tonic, blood and body builder, and in my own practice, I have had aged people tell me that they felt years younger often in only a few weeks time."

Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr Emil Sauer, may be had at any good drug store. Try taking two tablets three times a day for two weeks, and if you do not feel years younger with new strength, energy and health, your own druggist will gladly refund your money.

KEEP SYSTEM IMMUNE FROM CONTAGION OF EXTRAVAGANCE AND WASTE.

(Written Specially for the Bulletin

It's astonishing, sometimes, how whiff of plain, old-fashioned common sense clears up the air.

From one end of the country to the other people are talking about taxes and bonuses and town or city or state bonds. And nine out of ten of us don't comprehend the first principles underlying these questions.' The air is full of discussion and concussion—so that it's a bit thick to see through.

One of the outstanding qualities of President Coolidge is his ability to see a fact plainly and state it clearly. I frankly confess that I can't follow or comprehend much of Secretary Mellon's—reasoning of Congressman Green's arguments or Senator Smoot's mystifications. But I can understand the whole situation, from A to Izzard, when President Coolidge calmly remarks, in that succint and perspicacious way of his:

"The government has no money to distribute to any class of citizens which it does not take from the pockets of the people."

There's the whole theory and practice of taxation and bond issuing and governmental financiering generally, stated in less than two dozen simple words. Anybody above the grade of the village idiot can understand it. It's clear as spring water,—and about as refreshing.

As a matter of fact, we have all of us known it, all the time. But we've got our ideas so tangled up with a lot of theories and hypotheses and loose conjectures that they haven't been able to follow a straight course. We've let self-appointed professors muddle us all up. We've come to fear that our common brains weren't capable of comprehending the mystery and that we must leave it to experts to unravel the snarl. Instead of trying to help us, these experts have made matters worse by using technical terms and professional words which few people really could understand. Instead of explaining, they've expatiated and explicated till no one could tell what they were talking about, not even themselves.

Now comes President Coolidge and blows the chaff out of the barn with one breath, so that we can see the grain.

Altogether too many voters seem to be possessed with the idea that, because the government prints bills and coins quarters and halves, it actually makes the money it emits. They act as if they thought government had somewhere a bottomless reservoir of money from which it could draw at will and to any amount. Others, if not quite so dumb as all this, still have the feeling that expert financiers, by some hocus-pocus and necromancy known only to them, can so manipulate things that the government can spend a lot of cash without anybody feeling it.

What with talk about bond issues and sinking-funds, and moratoriums and the like, we've all got out of the habit of looking upon government's spending as we do upon our own. We know and daily act on the knowledge, that we can't spend money till we've got it from somebody. But when it comes to government expenditures we're not so sure.

As a straight matter of fact, there isn't the least little difference, in principle, between Hank Higginbotham's financers and the government's. Hank can't spend money till he collects it. Neither can the government. Hank can't borrow money except on satisfctory pledges to repay it. Neither can government. Hank can't borrow money without paying interest. Neither can government. Neither ever finds or makes any money. Both have to get it from some outside source before either can spend it. Hank gets his by working for wages or by selling hay and potatoes and apples and cord-wood; government gets its by levying taxes. It can't pay its bills or redeem its notes or give a subsidy or pay a bonus or use money in any other way till it has first taken the money from the taxpayers.

The water barrel has got to have water put in it before any water can be drawn from it.

Or, as Mr. Coolidge tersely puts it, government has no money to distribute to any class of citizens which it does not take from the pockets of the people."

It would be worth several hundred millions a year to the people of this country if the voter in it had to paste that in his hat and read it every time he put that hat on or took it off.

It would be worth several millions more if every congressman-elect had to pass an examination on that sentence before he could take his seat.

It would be worth more yet, if every congressman and legislator alderman and selectman could be made to understand that, if he didn't act in complete accordance with that truth, he could never again be elected hog-reeve on the town poor-farm.

As a matter of fact, every dollar and penny which the government ever pays for anything whatever, it first takes from our pockets,—yours and mine and the others like us.

"We don't pay customs" say some "for we don't import anything." No, we don't actually import anything. But the fellow who does and who pays the customs dues promptly adds the last cent of those dues to the price of the goods and we pay the dues when we buy the goods.

"We don't pay the internal revenue," say others, "for we are farmers and the internal revenue taxes don't touch us." Don't they? Every man who pays those dues, like the importer, immediately adds their ful amount to the prices of his goods and we pay them when we buy the goods.

If we're flush enough we buy a government bond for a hundred dollars and collect from the government, every year, four dollars and a half interest. By and by, when the bond is due, we are paid back the principal. Most of us may be assured to know that the returned principal is only the same hunderd dollars we once paid in. "But haven't we had interest on it, every year, which we didn't pay but were paid?"

But we did pay it. That is, the taxpayers paid it and we paid our lawful share. Of course, the man to whom government is paying four and a half per cent. annual interest is better off than the one who hasn't such a bond and is getting no interest. But he's paying a part of his own interest, every year, just the same. And the other taxpayers are paying the rest.

How easy it seems to be to get a majority of voters and tax-payers to authorize almost any sort of government expenditure, to be covered by issuing bond! We act like a nation of Micawbers. "There," said Mr. Micawber, when he had written out and signed a thirty-days note for a bill over-due, "there, I'm glad that debt's paid!"

We don't appreciate, any more than he did that when we issue bonds, we're not only binding ourselves to pay the whole bill involved but also an added bill of inevitable interest, sometimes greater, in its final aggregate, than the whole original cost.

There are 261 cities in the United States having a population of 30 000 or more each. The cost of governing those cities, last year, was $3,222,566,519, or $57.83 cents per inhabitant. Yet their total incomes were only $2,007,608,796, or an average of $51.81 for each inhabitant. The difference of $5.86 per head was made up by issuing more bonds, thus increasing their debt to $3,618, 967,272 or $93.45 cents for every resident, man, woman or child.

To compile the revenue and expenditures of every village and town would be an almost endless task. It is not attempted. But from the records of these 261 cities the tendency of the times is shown and the extent of purely local taxation suggested.

We are inclined to think the national debt an almost intolerable burden. But, in addition to that, every state has its debt; every city has its debt; every town, almost, has its debt; even school-districts in many states have their debts. Moreover, all these divisions and sub-divisions of the body politic must have money for running expenses, as truly as the national government.

And all the money which must be secured to pay these running expenses and the recurring interest on these debts must come, to the last cent, from the pockets of the people.

"Our national disease of extravagance and waste." When we see some glaring example of it at Washington we are apt to grow hot under the collar, and to denounce it in unmeasured terms. But the disease isn't confined to Washington, to congressmen and administrative officials. It is rife in state capitals, in county seats, in city and town halls, even in school districts.

It is even more flagrant in private life. Nor do I mean by that only in men who mortgage their homes to pay for automobiles or use the last dollar of their earnings to buy silk shirts. We appear to be almost all of us infected with the disease. It is festering to a head in village and farm homes as morbidly as in the city places or halls of government.

Nor does there seem much likelihood of any immediate change for the better. The few prophets who dare to raise their voices in warning or protest, hardly win any honor thereby. They are rarely popular. They seldom win elections. They are apt to be sneered at as Pichpennys or Spoilsports. The mildest epithet applied to them is Cranks.

And yet, as surely as water runs down hill, so surely extravagance and waste, whether in private or public life, will result in decadence, privation and collapse.

You and I can't cure a national disease. You and I can't stay with our weak arms the course of a national movement.

What is more to the point, you and I aren't asked to. All that can be required of us is too keep our own systems immune from the contagion, and do what little lies in our power to restrict its spread.

And that's no sinecure, either!

Dr. Coue Here Again

©BY KEYSTONE VIEW CO., NEW YORK

Among the many notables recently arriving in New York was Dr. Emile Coue, famous mental healer, whose "Every day in every way" was America's formula not so long ago. Dr. Coue is in the United States on a seven weeks' lecture tour.

WESTMINSTER

The pastor's text, Jan. 30, was Behold I make all things new" and his discourse concluded with the poem by Susan Coolidge, beginning, "Every day is a fresh beginning."

The topic for the home prayer worship for Jan. 30, was Christ, the Son of God, and the Scripture, St. Matt. 4: 1-11.

The annual business meeting of Westminster Ecclesiastical Society was held in the church house Jan. 21, at 2 p. m., all members being present with one exception. A. T. MacLeod was elected moderator and Charles Barstow scribe. The other officers were re-elected, with Albert Pellett, chairman of the society's committee and Charles Barstow custodian of the three cemeteries, Westminster Hill, Smith and Winchester. Prior to the close of the meeting Mrs. T. Edward Davies gave a report of her activities in painting the exterior of the church two coats, in brief, as follows: Paint and freight $185.31; labor, $315; hanging 36 pairs of blinds $86.50. Total of both jobs $436.80. Of this $49.19 was raised by a local chicken lunch, Sept. 5, 1921, and a chicken dinner gotten up by Mrs. Moody and Mr. Robbins: $30.45 from two six church offerings and the Plainfield church service at Westminster; $93 by former residents and their descendants; $63.76 by individual gifts from the present members and congregation. The balance was raised by Mrs. Davis from her friends and relatives, who were otherwise strangers to Westminster. A unanimous vote of thanks to Mrs Davies for her labor in connection with raising the cost and supervising the painting of the exterior of the church was passed by the society, and ordered inscribed in the Ecclesiastical society's record.

C. H. Koch and son Edgar who were at their Westminster home for a week, have returned to their family at their winter home near New York city.

In the terrible wind storm, some days since, one of the families in an old large house had seven of the 13 panes of glass blown from a window by one blast of the furious gale.

Last Sunday the mercury at MacLeod's store stood at 6 degrees below zero at 7.30 a. m. and 10 below has been reported in other parts of the town.

Tuesday was almost summer weather and purple grackles and other birds were seen.

Last Friday Miss Sarah T. Palmer visited schools, bringing Miss Hadley as her guest.

Jan. 28, Richard Davis, now employed in Willimantic celebrated his arrival at his majority.

Joseph Perkins has sold his woodlot to George Nichols.

Carl Stahnke was in Willimantic Friday last.

Earle MacLeod has been cutting wood in his spare time, lately, for Henry Dorrance.

The subject for the home prayer hour Wednesday, Feb. 6, is Christ and His Mother.—St. Luke 2: 40-52.

COVENTRY

Mrs. Ruth Jacobs, who is taking a course of instruction at Winthrop Training school, near Boston, with the purpose of becoming a trained attendant, is at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Isham for two weeks' vacation.

Clayton Jr. and David Hunt, children of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton E. Hunt, are ill with swollen glands in the neck.

Monday was an ideal day for harvesting the ice crop, and as it was of the required thickness and quality, those who could improve the opportunity, began cutting ice at the lake early in the morning.

William Wolff has the honor of being the first to bring a load across the Green at 11 a. m. for his house. The work has been continued steadily, Clinton Lewis putting in 450 cakes Tuesday afternoon and evening, using two motor trucks. Hubert Collins began filling his house the same day, finishing Wednesday, and Fred A. Hunt was also engaged Tuesday and Wednesday, using both horses and motor trucks. There are many more icehouses in town to be filled, when the weather is suitable, and help can be secured for the purpose.

The stringing of a cable line in Columbia by the telephone company, to take the place of the several wires which have heretofore been in use, is completed, and the actual work of transferring the connection to the cable was completed Wednesday. For a portion of the day only, while the actual transfer was in progress, the telephone could not be used by the subscribers. Many subscribers have been placed on different lines and their call numbers changed.

CLARK'S CORNER

Mrs. Seth Rodman of Providence visited friends in town this week.

Mrs. Clara Moran of Munson, Mass., spent the week-end with her parents here.

Patrick J. Navin returned from New Haven Monday after a few days' vacation.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"That's a tactful waitress. Yesterday she said to me as I was leaving: 'Please remind me tomorrow that you didn't pay your bill today.'"—Der Brummer (Berlin).

Flinn—The Metropolitan Museum of Natural History wants to sell a dinosaur's egg for $100,000.

Dinny—Not to me; I don't like 'em. I had two fried for lunch and they gave me indigestion.—New York Sun and Globe.

"Darling, I noticed a fiver on your dressing table. Won't you make me happy forever by letting me have it for a new hat?"

"Certainly, dear. I'll fetch it."

"Don't worry, darling. I've got it."—Chicago News.

"I don't know what to give my husband for Christmas this year!"

"What about cigars?"

"No, George is so sentimental about my presents. He hasn't smoked those I gave him last year yet."—London Opinion.

"You don't seem to get along very well with Mrs. Watson as your bridge partner."

"No. It seems she had just read a new article on the game which I hadn't seen."—Detroit Free Press.

"Well, have you fixed the status of the lady who moved in across the street?" asked Mr. Tenspot.

"Not yet," replied his wife. "She has no car."

"No?"

"No Pom, no Peke, no talking machine; I can't imagine what they have."

"Maybe they have a bank account"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

There had been a blowout, and the father of the family was perspiringly and profanely changing tires.

"I don't see why you have to talk that way," said his wife reproachfully. "You act as if it were a total loss. You never see the good in things."

"Well, what good is there in this?"

"Why, it tickled the baby so. He laughed right out loud when it went bang!"—American Legion Weekly.

Bookie—So y'see, if the horse starts at 15 to 1 you get 15 quid, 10 to 1 you get 10 quid, 5 to 1 five. D'y'see?

The innocent—Oh, yes, I see perfectly. But what do I get if the horse starts at 1 o'clock exactly?"—Illustrated Bits.

Wealthy One—I am a self-made man.

Friend—And I suppose your wife and daughters are proud of you?

Wealthy One—Yes, just about as proud as they would be of a home-made dress.—Toronto Telegram.

"Suppose," quiries the blurbist of a bit of new fiction, "you were facing bankruptcy. How would you tell your wife about it?"

Well, we should say, as we do about the first of every month: "Darling I am facing bankruptcy." And she would say, in the customary patient tone of voice: "I'm sure I haven't been spending much money on the house."—Spokane Spokesman-Review

MYSTIC TOURISTS TO FLORIDA WRITE OF HOSPITALITY

Writing to Norwich friends, a Mystic woman now at St. Andrews, Florida, gives the following interesting account of her experiences:

After a long drive over not particularly good roads we entered a quiet little southern village. Our attention was called to a large colonial mansion with huge fluted pillars along the front piazza which piazza extended along the entire width of the house. As we slowed down to admire the place a young lad approached and touching his cap politely said: "Would you like to stop here? Good large rooms with fire places, fine southern cooking, cars stored free of charge."

This all sounded cheerful and inviting so we followed our young guide to the rear and proceeded to select the luggage needed for the night. An enormous hall extended through the house and the large rooms with their lofty ceiling seemed to tell of former glories, while the wide staircase with its broad steps easy of access seemed to take us back to the day of minuets and powdered hair. We wondered how many scenes of gay festivities the old mansion had beheld.

The lady of the house being somewhat of an invalid welcomed us in the parlour, inviting us to sit with her by the cheerful grate fire. A most inviting and cheerful atmosphere it seemed to a couple of weary travelers from New England!

Presently another boarder—a bright old lady of eighty-seven entered the room saying to the hostess: "Do you know that last new girl you hired has been up in my room and wants me to give her all my clothes." "The colored folks around here are great beggars!" laughed the hostess.

After an hour or so there was a rap at the door and a dark face surmounted by a snowy turban looked in saying, "Miss Minnie, you'll haf to 'scuse yo'self 'an' come 'tend to de fixens! De suppa's done cooked!" So "Miss Minnie", a matron for more than thirty years and mother of grown daughters, obeyed the summons of the dusky autocrat, who had served her faithfully through all that time.

The supper was a work of culinary art, beaten biscuits, corn muffins, fried chicken, cold ham, candied sweet potatoes, roast apples and cheese with coffee, who could ask for more?

The host, being a devoted Methodist, insisting upon taking us to prayer meeting with him, and as the church was near we were pleased to go and join in the singing of old familiar hymns, led by the pastors wife whose voice was most unusual and would have been valued even in a large church.

The pastor's address was earnest and inspiring and the members heartily welcomed the strangers. After a good night's rest in a comfortable bed under some of the most wonderfully quilted bed coverings, we were summoned to a most appetizing breakfast, with more fried chicken, also sausages and cakes.

A flat tire necessitated a little delay, but not enough to keep us until noon, although the genial autocrat assured us that she had been planning to cook us a "mighty good" dinner with mashed taters an' turnip greens."

We left with the glad assurance that we would surely stop if we ever came that way again.

TITLE TO KEEFE PROPERTY PASSES TO REFINING COMPANY; NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Jan. 31.—Title to the Keefe property, so-called, at the southwest corner of Bank and Tilley streets, passed today to the Atlantic Refining company and the buyer will proceed to establish there a filling station and gasoline repository. It is understood to be the purpose of the company to greatly improve the property and to establish a business there that will be to the advantage of New London as well as to the company. As to what sort of an oil repository shall be erected the state will have a voice, but the refining company is agreeable to compliance with every requirement. The city sought to deal with the company as to conceding some land there for the widening of the corner, but details as to that are not obtainable now. The city withheld permission to erect a station there by the company till such time as the proposed arrangement should be carried out. The matter was openly discussed in the council and the details of the discussion were imparted to the refining company when they were practically told that the city would endeavor to exact a concession from the company in exchange for permission that the law conferred without any concession.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel has caused the operators' licenses of Levi G. Raymond, of Montauk avenue, and Irving Dean, of 79 Garfield avenue, to be suspended. The suspensions were made following the conviction of Dean and Raymond of the charge of reckless driving in the Waterford town court recently. Raymond has appealed from the decision of the court in imposing a fine and will defend the appeal at the next session of the court of common pleas.

George A. Thomas of St. James, Long Island, N. Y., has written the New London police in an effort to ascertain the whereabouts of his mother and brother, Mrs. Fred A. Thomas, (Nellie L. Howard) and Harold Benjamin Thomas, respectively. Thomas has not heard from or seen either since 1914.

John McDonough, a frequent violator of the law and with a long police court record for the commission of petty offenses, was taken into custody this morning charged with theft. He will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning and will probably be committed to jail for he has confessed his guilt and besides he is in need of medical treatment as a result of having imbibed for three weeks or more of denatured alcohol, the liquid having been purchased at a drug store in quantities of pints and half pints.

McDonough was arrested by Patrolman George Perkins on Broad street, near Connecticut avenue, two proprietors of stores in that vicinity having complained of late of the theft of bread and milk from their doorways, where the foodstuffs had been deposited prior to the opening of the stores for business. Patrolman Perkins had maintained a watch of the stores several mornings and today when McDonough appeared loitering about the places he was questioned and then arrested. At the police station he confessed the theft of the milk and bread and declared that he had been sleeping for several weeks in a vacant barn on Broad street extension, owned by Mrs. Louisa Bishop.

McDonough is suspected of having stolen milk from a doorway of a Bank street store and having burglarized the store of the New London Candy Kitchen, 611 Bank street, last Saturday night or Sunday morning at which time $10 was taken from a drawer and an attempt was made to force the safe. McDonough, however, denies any complicities in the two offenses. Suspicion of McDonough being guilty of burglarizing the candy store resulted when it became known that he was in an alleyway adjoining the store, last Sunday forenoon.

Jacob Liniecus of Montauk avenue and Mrs. Herbert Cady and infant son of Groton, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

Helen Rothen, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rothen, of Bayonet street, died this morning at the Mitchell ward of Lawrence hospital, where she had been under treatment but a few days for diphtheria. The girl had been a student at Winthrop school and within the past two or three days the other students have been examined by physicians.

Mary A. Kelsey, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kelsey, of Waterford, was taken into custody this morning by State Policeman T. J. Henry of the Groton barracks, charged with being incorrigible and in danger of falling into ways of vice. She was given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton this noon and was committed to Long Lane farm, Middletown, being accompanied there by Mrs. Alice Hunt, formerly policewoman in New London.

It developed at the hearing today that the girl, who was arrested several weeks ago in Groton, where she was residing with Harold A. Brand, also of Waterford, as man and wife had planned to leave for Canada in company with Brand within a few days. It also became known that the couple have been in each other's company on numerous occasions since their arrest.

Brand, who is awaiting trial before the next term of the superior court on a charge of attempted rape, and is at liberty under bonds of $3,000, is married and has several children.

Sarah Turner has sold two building lots in the rear of Montauk avenue to Wentworth W. Meek.

Edna B. Chester has sold a tract of land on Jefferson avenue, near St Mary's and Cedar Grove cemeteries, to the Connecticut River company. The price paid was $1,500.

Andrew Maher, of the firm of Murray & Maher and a former member of the board of water and sewer commissioners, critically ill at his home on Broad street many weeks, is constantly growing weaker and no hopes are held out for his recovery.

Since the Boy Scouts have been authorized to handle traffic at several of the public schools the youths have performed efficient work. This afternoon at Nameaug school where two scouts were on duty and guiding children across Montauk avenue, a driver of an automobile of the Connecticut Power company, ignored the signal of one of the youths to stop and operated the machine through the avenue where children were crossing. The matter was reported to the police and Sergeant Frank Howard was delegated to notify the Connecticut Power company that their drivers must heed the signals of the youths and that failure to do so would result in arrests being made.

Mrs. Mary L. James has returned home after spending several days with relatives and friends in New York and New Jersey.

Mrs. Harry Carr of Connecticut avenue, is convalescent following a severe illness at her home.

Last evening at a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Beebe announcements were made of the engagements of their daughter, Hazel, to Cecil H. Schofield of New York and of their son, Revere to Miss Doris E. Troland of Willimantic. No dates for the weddings have been made public.

Frederick Graham and his sister, Miss Kathryn Graham, have returned home, having spent several days in New York.

The Dodds divorce case, on trial at New Haven, is attracting about as much attention here as in the Elm City, for the parties to it are well known here as they resided at Ocean beach and in Federal street a summer or two ago, and were guests at the Mohican hotel also during the early part of the summer they passed here. They got into the police court when it was alleged that Mrs. Pudman, a witness in the case now, had taken things from the cottage Mrs. Dodds occupied at the beach. The case created something of a scandal here at the time, but nothing was proven in the police court.

The grand list of New London, as prepared by the assessors and presented to the board of relief shows a total of about $46,000,000. This will be cut down somewhat by exemptions but still the total will remain about as a year ago. Now come the protests, which will be made before the board of relief, and they are expected to be many.

The city council members are at work on the budget this evening—no little job to accomplish the completion of it.

Giles Gurley, 76, died this morning at his residence, 40 Reed street, following an illness of two months. Mr. Gurley was born in Lyme, but resided the greater part of his life in Waterford where he operated a farm. He is survived by his daughter, Mrs. Henry Maickl of New London, by a son, Fred Gurley, of 46 Spring street and by two brothers.

The New London police were on the lookout during the early morning hours for two automobiles that were stolen in New Haven last night. As soon as word of the theft of the cars was received here a watch was maintained for the stolen machines on the outskirts of the city.

Miss Mabel Darling returned to her home on Evergreen avenue today after having been a patient at Home Memorial hospital.

The first session of the juvenile court in the municipal building where quarters have been established will take place tomorrow when two youths guilty of amusing themselves by throwing stones promiscuously, will be presented before Judge S. Victor Prince.

The funeral of Mrs. M. Alice Way was held this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at Flanders Baptist church. The services were conducted by Rev. Edward T. Phreaner, assisted by Rev. P. S. Collins. The bearers were John Sharpe, Fred W. Harvey, James A. Way 2nd, Francis G. Way, William Clark and Roy Kelly. Burial was in Flanders cemetery.

Funeral services for Charles O. Newton of Groton were held this afternoon at 1 o'clock at 15 Masonic street, Rev. George R. Athe, pastor of the Groton Heights Baptist church, officiating. Burial was in North Stonington, where the committal service was conducted by Charity and Relief lodge, No. 72, of Mystic, of which order Mr. Newton was a member.

Harry Auwood of Oakdale, while driving through Main street this afternoon, ran over a dog that is the property of a Mrs. Flora, residing at 3 Pierce street. The owner was notified, but the dog did not appear to have been seriously injured. Mr. Auwood reported the accident to the police, nevertheless.

No movement has yet been made toward circulating petitions calling for a special election to pass upon the matter of erecting a junior high school in this city, on the Harris lot, opposite the Nathan Hale grammar school building. It will be necessary to secure some 500 signatures to such a petition and then it will be presented to the city council and a ballot on the matter must be ordered.

There appears to be a strong sentiment that the city schools be put back to the method of having pupils graduate from the district schools to the high school, and to have the grade of studies raised, so that when the pupils have finished at the high schools they will be prepared for entrance into the colleges. The claim is made that the pupils now are not as far advanced in studies as they were under the old method.

Changes will be made in the beats of police officers tomorrow, the first of February, some of the officers who have been doing duty in the center of the city being assigned to beats on the outskirts.

Members of the fire department declare they cannot remember a time when the city was freer from fires of consequence than for the past few months. They say that the department has not had a serious fire to contend with in several weeks and that before that time the fires of consequence were even farther apart than ever before.

The weather has been so mild this winter that there has been no cessation of work where digging in the ground has been necessary.

This forenoon the temperature was close to 50 above zero, and up to the time the sun went down the thermometers showed a temperature above 40 degrees.

Union Masonic lodge is to work the master Mason degree next week with the chairs filled by members in the naval service of Uncle Sam. There will be more than 30 lodges represented by the team that does the work, something never known before in the history of Masonry in this city.

Capt Edward R. Geer of the New England Navigation company is at his home here on a vacation of two weeks.

HOUSE PASSED $262,000,000 INTERIOR DEPARTMENT BILL

Washington, Jan. 31.—The first of the dozen annual supply bills which congress must dispose of before adjournment—that carrying $262,000,000 for the interior department—was passed today by the house before which it had been pending for three weeks.

The measure was sent on its way to the senate without a record vote and the house immediately plunged into consideration of the appropriation bill for the treasury and postoffice departments, its $730,000,000 total making it the largest peacetime supply bill ever before congress.

Just before the interior department bill was approved an unsuccessful effort was made to reconsider amendments which would perpetuate 21 land offices the bill originally sought to have discontinued July 1 and which would postpone until June 1, 1925, proposed consolidation of the offices of register and receiver at 14 others.

Contending that this retrenchment would save the government $173,000 a year without impairing service, Representative Cramton, republican, Michigan, in charge of the bill, demanded a roll call on the amendments. By a narrow margin, however, they remained in the bill. As approved the measure is practically in the form in which it was reported to the house.

TO REDEEM TWO ISSUES OF TREASURY CERTIFICATES

Washington, Jan. 31. — Immediate redemption of the two issues of treasury certificates of indebtedness maturing March 15 was authorized tonight by Secretary Mellon. The two issues, one dated March 15, 1923 and the other Sept. 15, 1923, aggregate approximately four hundred million dollars.

The treasury's decision to begin retiring the two issues, which otherwise would be taken care of from proceeds of the March 15 tax payments, was regarded as indicating that the fiscal plan, effective more two years, has worked out to the entire satisfaction of the official in charge. Announcement of the action was made in the following brief statement, which was issued without comment:

"Secretary Mellon announced that he has authorized the federal reserve banks on and after Friday, February 1, 1924, and until further notice, to redeem in cash before March 15, 1924 at the holder's option, at par and accrued interest to date of such optional redemption. Treasury certificates of indebtedness of Series TM 1 1924 dated March 15, 19293, and Series TM 2 1924 dated September 15 1923, both maturing March 15, 1924."

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

Plans for grand jury hearings on evidence disclosed by the senate veterans committee were begun at the department of justice.

The house passed the interior department appropriation bill, the first supply measure of the session.

The senate propaganda committee decided it had authority to inquire into methods of elimination in the Bok peace award.

Republican members of the house ways and means committee approved the surtax and normal income tax schedules in the Mellon bill.

Denial was authorized at the White House that Secretary Denby and Attorney-General Daugherty had submitted their resignations.

President Coolidge conferred with Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader; Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, and several republican senators on naval oil lease problems.

Rear Admiral Latimer told the house naval committee that Secretary Denby had initiated the transfer of the California and Wyoming oil reserves to the interior department.

The senate adopted the Walsh resolution directing the president to proceed with suits to annul the Doheny and Sinclair oil leases and took up the Denby resignation resolution but without final action.

Postmaster-General New with Secretary Mellon's acquiescence, ordered discontinued in 17 middlewestern and western states the sale through postoffices in treasury savings certificate in order to relieve the banking stress.

PINCHOT NOT IN ACCORD WITH HILL ON PROHIBITION

Washington, Jan. 31.—Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, made public today a letter from Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, in which the governor declined Mr. Hill's invitation to appear before the house rules committee in an effort to secure an investigation of the prohibition bureau, and added that his views on prohibition were "diametrically opposite" those of Mr. Hill.

FORECLOSURE OF $3,250 MORTGAGE IN COLCHESTER

Sadie Borets of Colchester has brought suit in the superior court for foreclosure of a mortgage for $3,250 on land on Pleasant street, Colchester, which is owned by Abraham Alpert of that town. The mortgage is dated March 21, 1923, E. T. Bunyan of Colchester, claiming an $800 first mortgage on the property is made a party defendant.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS STRONG.

New York, Jan. 31.—Selling pressure was lifted from today's stock market and the general list moved to higher ground on buying influenced by the prospective reduction of 1923 income taxes, a series of good earnings statements and favorable trade news including a reported increase in steel operations.

Trading was comparatively quiet in the first three hours but an active resumption of pool operations in the afternoon sent shorts scurrying to cover and imparted a buoyant tone to the whole market. American Can, selling ex-dividend 2 1-4, touched 121 and closed slightly below that figure for a net gain of 4 points. Baldwin hit 125 1-2 and then slipped to 135 1-8, up 5-8; Studebaker sold as high as 104 1-2 and closed just below that for a net gain of 2 3-8 and U. S. Steel moved up 1 1-3 to 107, duplicating yesterday's high price.

Motors gave one of the best demonstrations of group strength. General Motors was the individual feature, sales of approximately 140,000 shares of that stock representing more than one-tenth of the day's total business. The stock touched 16, closing at 15 3-4, up 3-4. Dupont, the largest holder of General Motors stock, closed 7 1-4 higher at 139 3-4. White Motor gained 3 points and Chandler, Mack Truck, Stewart Warner, Stromberg Carburetor and Hayes Wheel about 2 each.

Philip Morris' selling arrangement with Stephano Brothers led to reports of other combinations which brought fresh buying into the tobacco group, Philip Morris touched a new high for the year at 23 3-4 and American Tobacco B, Tobacco Products, and Schulte showed gains of 1 3-8 to 2 1-2 points.

Other active strong spots in the industrial group included General Electric, Famous Players, Marine Preferred, American Ice, Beechnut Packing, California Packing, Computing, Tabulating and Recording, Laclede Gas, Pierce Oil preferred and Westinghouse Air Brake, all up 2 to nearly 5 points.

The American Petroleum Institute reported a slight increase in crude oil output, but this was more than offset by the decrease in imports. Pacific Oil and Associated Oil touched new 1924 tops at 67 1-4 and 34 1-8, respectively.

Establishment of a new high record for all time at 46 7-8 by Southern railway, an overnight gain of 2 1-2 points, was the outstanding feature in the railroad group. Good buying also was noted in the Standard dividend payers.

Short covering by European speculators imparted strength to British exchange of the local foreign exchange market, demand sterling jumping more than 5 cents to $4.31 1-4 and then easing slightly. French francs held fairly steady just below 4.70 cents.

Money rates were firmer. Call money opened at 4 1-2 and then advanced to 5, time money, which was available at 4 1-2 earlier in the week, was practically on a 4 3-4 per cent basis today. Trading in commercial paper was quiet with no change in rates.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Jan. 31.—Strength of United States government bonds, with Liberty third 4 1-4s again reaching par and the treasury notes touching a new high level for the year, featured today's bond market. Activity in these issues was attributed to the steps taken at Washington to reduce 1923 taxes 25 per cent an announcement which exerted a general favorable influence on the entire market.

An unusually heavy turnover took place in Serbian 8s, sending these bonds up another 3 points, as a result of the improved political outlook in southeastern Europe due to settlement of the Fiume question. With the issue selling 25 points below the offering price fixed in June, 1922, signing of the treaty with Italy brought an immediate response.

With interest payments drawing near, speculative railroad issues were in demand, the majority making fractional gains. Seaboard liens all were higher, the adjustment 5s which are to receive their first interest payment since 1921 tomorrow, gaining more than a point. Although International-Great Northern adjustment 6s had been advancing steadily for a week, they gained still further on the announcement that sale of the road to the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway would carry with it a guarantee of 4 per cent. interest until they become cumulative in 1928. Strength of Canadian Pacific Perpetual 4s was attributed to British buying, as a result of the low sterling rate.

New York bankers expect shortly to participate in $20,000,000 new financing for the city of Montivideo, if proposals, now before the city council, are approved. No bids have been asked for yet, however, it was said.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Wheat and oats today reached new price records for the season. Sustained buying on the part of commission houses absorbed the future delivery offerings of both cereals. With wheat traders giving considerable attention to developments regarding financial relief for the northwest, wheat closed strong, 7-8c to 1 1-4 net higher, May 1.11 3-8 to 1.11 1-2 and July 1.10 to 1.10 1-8. Corn finished at a shade lower to 1-2c advance, oats 1-4 to 5-8c up, and provisions unchanged to 17c down.

In the wheat trade, it was September delivery which scored a new top record price. May and July were in new ground on the present upturn, the price of May being the highest since December 7 last. Buying of distant deliveries was encouraged both as a result of prospects of damage to winter wheat and because of talk of reduced spring wheat acreage. Some of the buying was said to be on foreign account. Bulls contended that the domestic visible supply will decrease sharply and that receipts at terminals during the remainder of the season will be the lightest seen in many years.

Despite mild weather which curtailed demand from feeders the corn market sympathized with the advance of wheat and oats. May corn was especially firm, selling pressure being chiefly on later months. Primary receipts were larger than a year ago, but indications were that the chest of the present movement has been passed.

Demand for oats was due largely to reports that oats stocks on farms and in country elevators are light.

Packers selling weakened the provision market.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Jan. 31.—Ten point breaks in the Liggett & Myers Tobacco issues, following the announcement of a new stock offering, and Buckeye Pipe in belated reflection of a cut in the dividend featured today's highly irregular curb market. Liggett & Myers issues closed near the bottom, but Buckeye Pipe rallied 6 points from its low.

Strength of Magnolia Petroleum up 3 1-2, was due in part to the material increase in the value of its oil in storage by recent increases in crude prices. Prairie Oil & Gas, Vacuum and Imperial of Canada also were strong, but the pipe line shares lost ground in sympathy with the break in Buckeye.

Dubilier Radio improved slightly on the announcement of record-breaking production and earnings. National Dairy Products jumped nearly 2 points in sympathy with the strength shown by the motor group on the "big board." Glen Alden Coal dropped 1. Other changes in the industrial list were generally small and unimportant.

CAN'T STOP JOINT-EASE

"You can't stop people from buying Joint-Ease for sore throat and cold in chest," writes one of our druggist friends. "They say it's the best ever."

We know that, of course, but please remember that Joint-Ease is for stiff, swollen, painful joints, whether rheumatic or not, and its tremendous sale for that purpose proves that it is the one joint remedy that gets the most satisfying results.

A tube costs 60 cents at all druggists everywhere. Just rub it on and in a few seconds it disappears completely under the skin, and relief follows instantly.

SUFFERED 20 YEARS FROM BRONCHIAL COUGH

Cured by Allen's Lung Healer

The following letter from Mrs. C. C. Maxwell of Danville, Me., speaks for itself:

H. J. Allen Co., West Lynn, Mass.:

Gentlemen — I am so enthusiastic about your Lung Healer that I want you to know what it has done for me.

I had given up all hope of ever curing a cough that began 20 years ago. It was a hard, rasping cough that used to keep me awake four and five hours almost every night. My throat was parched and there seemed to be bunches in my throat.

Other medicines, even cod liver oil, had no more effect than water, but when I first took the Lung Healer it seemed to clear a path through the fullness in the throat and allay the irritation as nothing else had ever done. After taking the first bottle I was wonderfully relieved and the bunches in my throat disappeared and I slept without coughing a bit.

After a few weeks I was rid of the cough, and you may rest assured that life took on a rosier aspect to me after that. Today I have no lung trouble at all and I give the Lung Healer all the credit.

I have given it to my children at different times, with just as effective results. It is also a splendid body builder.

Yours gratefully,
MRS. C. C. MAXWELL,
Danville, Me.

JEWETT CITY

The overseers and assistants and electricians at Aspinook Bleachery gave a banquet in honor of Frank Goring, chief electrician, Thursday evening in the private dining room at the Jewett City restaurant. Mr. Goring closes his work at the bleachery this week to go to Norwich, and take charge of the Norwich Electric Co., He is to succeed the late Arthur Jenkins. The dining room had been decorated with red and green crepe paper festoons and vases of red roses were upon the tables. The menu included:

Chicken Gumbo
Roast Vermont Turkey
Oyster Stuffing
Browned Potatoes
Relishes
Mashed Turnip Mashed Potato
Cranberry Sauce
Orange Short Cake
Coffee

The favors were fantastic caps placed at each plate.

Fred Condie was the efficient toast master, and speeches were made by a numbre of the men. Piano and victrola music added to the pleasure of the evening. A tinge of sadness was underneath the fun, since Mr. Goring has been very popular with his associates, and they are sorry to lose him. The electricians presented him a fountain pen, and the overseers and their assistants gave him a meerschaum pipe. Mr. Goring was visibly affected by these expressions of good fellowship and was most appreciative in his thanks.

The overseer and their assistants present were Herbert Wyatt, William McCluggage, Robert Robertson, John Jacobs, John Sharkey, Fred Condie, Kenneth Church, Fred Taylor, Kenneth Everett, William Sammons, Herbert Kingsley, James Blair and Otto Gilbert, Charles Frye, S. A. Thompson.

The electricians present were Herbert Thompson, Erne Raney, John Dolan, Edward Raney, Gerald Wolf, Edward A. Faust, Frank Durfey and L. G. Buckingham were present also.

The newly organized Catholic Women's League is soon to give its first whist and dance. This organization is one which does charitable work in the town, wherever there is need, regardless of nationality, religion or politics. Already the members have rendered valuable assistance in several cases, and have brought cheer into homes at Christmas time, visiting the town farm among other places.

PLAINFIELD

Winifred Gardner is again working on his new house on Gallup street and hopes to have the roof up before the end of the week.

Herbert Parkhurst has a unique record made by his fine strain of white leghorns. During January, about 200 hundred pullets, hatched the 8th of June, have laid 2,682 eggs.

The ice men are dispairing of a good crop for ice that was eight inches thick three days ago has dropped to six inches in thickness.

The seventh cottage service held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barber Wednesday evening, brought out the largest attendance of the season, friends and neighbors filling the house. At this service, a duet by Miss Dorothy Pike and Miss Ione Barstow, was well received. Harold R. Barstow was accompanist.

During this week, the grades in the Grammar school have been taking their examinations. The High school pupils began examinations Thursday which will continue for a week. The students attending Brown University are also in the midst of their mid-year examinations.

Frederick D. Lyon has been ill at his home for a week with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism. His father, Nelson Lyon of Canterbury has driven in every day to visit his son.

There was a collision on Plainfield street Thursday evening at the corner of Gallup street, caused, not by speeding automobiles, but by two pedestrians hurrying for their supper. There were no serious results, but the mishap would indicate the need of a street light at this point.

WESTERLY TOWN COUNCIL HAS A BUDGET-MAKING SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, R. I., Jan. 31.—The Westerly town council, President Campbell and Councilmen Morrison, Utter, Rossi, Fowler, Nichols and Smith, together with Council Clerk Whipple, Town Solicitor Ferguson, Town Treasurer Pendleton, met in the council chambers of the Westerly town hall at 7.30 o'clock Thursday evening. Beside the councilmen there were twenty other interested taxpayers of the town present. The council canvassed the voting list, when the changes submitted by Clerk Whipple were examined, approved and corrected.

The council then resolved itself into a budget-making session, in anticipation of the annual financial town meeting which takes place Tuesday evening, Feb. 5. With the exception of the figure for town officers, which last year was a $10,300 appropriation and one other omitted, the total estimates submitted amounted to $367,950 before the paring down process was begun and previous to which the council entered into an executive session to consider the town officers' appropriation, at the suggestion of Councilman Smith. For 1923 the total tax to be collected amounted to but $343,912.90. The estimates follow: Schools, $132,500, submitted by Thomas Perry for the Westerly school committee, being $6,000 more than a year ago, necessitated by six new school teachers, increase on new school building at Bradford and decrease in amount received from state and playground improvements. Councilman Smith asked how much the playground had cost to date. Committeeman Perry replied that he could not tell offhand.

Edward J. Burdick, for the Spanish War Veterans, asked for an appropriation of $5,000 for the Hiker memorial, a picture of which was presented, the total cost being $4,000. Representative S. H. Davis wanted an appropriation of $5,000 for mothers' pension, to be administered by a pension commission and spoke at length on the desirability of the work. Supt. of Poor Oliver Crandall asked for $6,000 for the poor and $500 for hospital care.

Charles J. Butler presented a yearly budget figure of $128,400, $32,500 being for maintenance and $95,900 new construction work and also a three year budget of $465,200 for the Westerly highway commission, with list of streets to receive attention. Councilman Rossi asked if the $5,000 was still available for Central park work and was told by Commissioner Butler that it would be, if it had to be taken out of something else. Councilman Nichols asked if the $10,000 appropriation voted for the White Rock road was available. Town Solicitor Ferguson said that the financial town meeting vote for the same was illegal as the debt limit was exceeded. It was stated that in six weeks or two months the plans of the Rhode Island board of public roads would be known for the new highway to enter Westerly from Providence.

For the board of tax assessors, Walter Hiscox asked for $500 for assessors' plots. Councilman Smith asked for $14,500 for police. Town Clerk Whipple wanted $4,000 for the town hall. Councilman Nichols wished $12,500 for street lights. Clerk Whipple estimated printing and publishing $2,000, shade trees $250, bounties $100 and miscellaneous $7,500. For zoning or city planning $1,000 asked by Councilman Utter was adopted by a four to three vote. Councilman Utter also urged a $1,000 miscellaneous item for an accounting program by an expert accountant. Councilman Smith stated that in the city planning he did not approve of the spending of the town money to lay out any man's land.

Town Treasurer Pendleton was called into the council meeting from the town treasurer's office, where town auditors R. J. Butler and Harold D. Livingstone were auditing the town accounts. He was asked to estimate the amount of the interest figures for the coming year which he placed at $30,000 and for a state tax, $21,000. Treasurer Pendleton reported that town bonds had been sold for $475, the last being at the good figure.$435 He stated that the town had run behind $5,517, being the increase in debt over last year which equalled the figure of interest money. Councilman Campbell thought that the schoolhouse bonds would be ready for issue at the end of the year. At this point the council went into executive session.

Somehow the less account a man is the more faith some fool woman seems to have in him.

REVOCATION OF LICENSES OF ECLECTIC PHYSICIANS

Hartford, Jan. 31.—Recommendation for the revocation of 132 licenses of eclectic physicians in Connecticut was made by the grand jury in a communication to State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, the greatest number of physicians whose privilege to practice medicine in Connecticut has been taken away at any one time since the probe of medical conditions in the state had been started. The eclectic medical examining board was called into session today to receive from the state's attorney a request for action on these names. The sweeping revocation of licenses of physicians who are alleged to have obtained their right to practice medicine in the state by fraudulent means, brings the total number thus acted upon to 178, all but two of these being eclectics.

NORWICH TOWN

The Home Missionary sewing society of the First Congregational church is to meet for work, this (Friday) afternoon at the home of Mrs. Orrin F. Merry.

A specially arranged union service is to be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Methodist Episcopal church, with the parish of the First Congregational church and the parish of Grace Episcopal church at Yantic, uniting.

Rev. A. Earle Kernahan, D. D., of Boston, is to be the speaker, and will bring a message mostly to the young people.

Mrs. George Beebe of Scotland road had as her guests, Mrs. George A. Peck of Otrobando avenue on a motor trip to Hartford, Wednesday. With them was Mrs. Beebe's daughter, Miss Gladys Belle Beebe.

Mrs. Frederic H. Wyant was the hostess Thursday afternoon, when the Thursday afternoon pinochle club was pleasantly entertained at her home on Town street.

At the close of the game, Mrs. Wyant served sandwiches, and cocoa, with marshmellow.

There will be the regular parish mass at 7 o'clock this (Friday) morning, at the Sacred Heart church. First Friday devotions in honor of the sacred heart of Jesus, will take place at this church in the evening at 7.30.

Saturday, the Feast of the Purification or Candlemas Day mass will be at 7.30, at which time the candles will be blessed, to be used during the services and ceremonies in the church for the year, also by the parishioners in their homes, in time of sickness.

Miss Gladys Belle Beebe, who was graduated Jan. 9 from Hartford Training school for nurses and who has been spending two weeks at her home on Scotland road and in New York, returned Wednesday to Hartford where she has an assignment at the Hartford hospital in charge of ward 10. Owing to the fact that Miss Beebe was a graduate from Connecticut college for women in the class of 1921 she was credited with nine months in her hospital training. Because of this Miss Beebe is much in advance of the other members of the nurses' training class, who, it is expected, will be graduated next October.

VOTING ON POINCARE'S TAX ECONOMY PROJECTS

Paris, Jan. 31—(By the A. P.)—The chamber of deputies this evening reached a vote on the third article of the first of 75 amendments to Premier Poincare's tax economy projects. The Premier showed the effects of the dilatory tactics of the opposition in more than his usual nervousness and greater vehemence in dealing with that section of the chamber which is against the government.

M. Poincare said the government was aware that intrigue was going on in the lobbies while confusing and obstructive discussion was proceeding in the chamber. Rumors of an intended attack by Andre Tardieu and M. Herriot, the latter leader of the radicals, on the cabinet, with a view to bringing Aristede Briand into power, were rife during the afternoon. Color seemingly was lent to these reports by the intervention of Mr. Briant in the debate.

The former premier was listened to with the greatest attention and cries from the radical benches of "there is a statesman" were mingled with applause as he sat down after having pronounced a few conciliatory words to bring the chamber together on the adoption of a compromise measure of minor importance on the question of revision of the war damages schedule. The chamber, however, adopted the compromise proposed by Premier Poincare.

WARNING GIVEN PACIFIC COAST PAPER DEALERS

Washington, Jan. 31.—Pacific coast paper dealers affiliated with the Pacific States Paper Trade association and its local units were declared today by the federal trade commission to be engaged in price fixing and conducting operations in "a manner that restrains, limits, and lessens competition in interstate commerce."

Together with local associations in Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Spokane, they were ordered by the commission to "cease and desist" from a series of specified actions, including among others an alleged boycotts of the American Writing Paper company of Massachusetts, which were held to be instances of the trade restraint found.

Concerns and individuals cited, the commission report said, are engaged in wholesaling of all types of paper except newsprint. They were named as including all members of the Seattle-Tacoma paper trade conference; Spokane paper dealers, Portland paper trade association, paper trade conference of San Francisco, and the Los Angeles wholesale paper jobbers' association. Approximately 75 per cent. of the entire paper trade in the Pacific states was said to be handled by them.

WOMEN ATTENDING THE SCHOOL FOR DEMOCRACY

Cleveland, Oct. 31—(By the A. P.)—Democratic women attending their "school of democracy", here were called today to make formal protest against the sale of arms to the federal government of Mexico by the United States, and to approve entrance of the United States into the world court. Resolutions embodying such declarations were submitted to the gathering today and will be acted up tomorrow.

In addition, they will have before them a proposal that they extend to Senator Walsh, of Montana, their thanks for his "brave and wonderful service," in the "exposure of corruption," in the Teapot Dome investigation.

The women also sent a telegram to former president Wilson expressing hope for improved health and congratulating him upon his accomplishments.

Subjects attempted ranged from "husbands of political wives," to "political cooperation,"—all discussed amid the criticism of friendly hecklers. The league of nations was discussed tonight by former secretary of war, Newton D. Baker.

FATHER AND TWO SONS UNCONSCIOUS FROM GAS

Weeaosckat, R. I., Jan. 31.—Thomas Aubin and his two sons, Edmund, 18 years old, and Adore, 15, were found unconscious in their home here late today suffering from gas poisoning. A partly open valve on a gas stove indicated that they had been exposed to the gas since retiring Wednesday night. Hospital authorities said that their condition was serious and that they had only an even chance for recovery.

There is something wrong with a woman who can't generate a few tears at a moment's notice.

NORWICH TOWN

The Home Missionary sewing society of the First Congregational church, is to meet for work, this (Friday) afternoon at the home of Mrs. Orrin F. Merry.

A specially arranged union service is to be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Methodist Episcopal church, with the parish of the First Congregational church and the parish of Grace Episcopal church at Yantic, uniting.

Rev. A. Earle Kernahan, D. D., of Boston, is to be the speaker, and will bring a message mostly to the young people.

Mrs. George Beebe of Scotland road had as her guests, Mrs. George A. Peck of Otrobando avenue, on a motor trip to Hartford, Wednesday. With them was Mrs. Beebe's daughter, Miss Gladys Belle Beebe.

Mrs. Frederic H. Wyant was the hostess Thursday afternoon, when the Thursday afternoon pinochle club was pleasantly entertained at her home on Town street.

At the close of the game, Mrs. Wyant served sandwiches, and cocoa, with marshmellow.

There will be the regular parish mass at 7 o'clock this (Friday) morning, at the Sacred Heart church. First Friday devotions in honor of the sacred heart of Jesus, will take place at this church in the evening at 7.30.

Saturday, the Feast of the Purification or Candlemas Day mass will be at 7.30, at which time the candles will be blessed, to be used during the services and ceremonies in the church for the year, also by the parishioners in their homes, in time of sickness.

Miss Gladys Belle Beebe, who was graduated Jan. 9 from Hartford Training school for nurses and who has been spending two weeks at her home on Scotland road and in New York, returned Wednesday to Hartford where she has an assignment at the Hartford hospital in charge of ward 10. Owing to the fact that Miss Beebe was a graduate from Connecticut college for women in the class of 1921 she was credited with nine months in her hospital training. Because of this Miss Beebe is much in advance of the other members of the nurses' training class, who, it is expected, will be graduated next October.

VOTING ON POINCARE'S TAX ECONOMY PROJECTS

Paris, Jan. 31—(By the A. P.)—The chamber of deputies this evening reached a vote on the third article of the first of the amendments to Premier Poincare's tax economy projects. The Premier showed the effects of the dilatory tactics of the opposition in more than his usual nervousness and greater vehemence in dealing with that section of the chamber which is against the government.

M. Poincare said the government was aware that intrigue was going on in the lobbies while confusing and obstructive discussion was proceeding in the chamber. Rumors of an intended attack by Andre Tardieu and M. Herriot, the latter leader of the radicals, on the cabinet, with a view to bringing Aristede Briand into power, were rife during the afternoon. Color seemingly was lent to these reports by the intervention of Mr. Briand in the debate.

The former premier was listened to with the greatest attention and cries from the radical benches of "there is a statesman" were mingled with applause as he sat down after having pronounced a few conciliatory words to bring the chamber together on the adoption of a compromise measure of minor importance on the question of revision of the war damages schedule. The chamber, however, adopted the compromise proposed by Premier Poincare.

WARNING GIVEN PACIFIC COAST PAPER DEALERS

Washington, Jan. 31.—Pacific coast paper dealers affiliated with the Pacific States Paper Trade association and its local units were declared today by the federal trade commission to be engaged in price fixing and conducting operations in "a manner that restrains, limits, and lessens competition in interstate commerce."

Together with local associations in Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Spokane, they were ordered by the commission to "cease and desist" from a series of specified actions, including among others an alleged boycott of the American Writing Paper company of Massachusetts, which were held to be instances of the trade restraint found.

Concerns and individuals cited, the commission report said, are engaged in wholesaling of all types of paper except newsprint. They were named as including all members of the Seattle-Tacoma paper trade conference; Spokane paper dealers, Portland paper trade association, paper trade conference of San Francisco, and the Los Angeles wholesale paper jobbers' association. Approximately 75 per cent. of the entire paper trade in the Pacific states was said to be handled by them.

WOMEN ATTENDING THE SCHOOL FOR DEMOCRACY

Cleveland, Oct. 31—(By the A. P.)—Democratic women attending their "school of democracy", here were asked today to make formal protest against the sale of arms to the federal government of Mexico by the United States, and to approve entrance of the United States into the world court. Resolutions embodying such declarations were submitted to the gathering today and will be acted up tomorrow.

In addition, they will have before them a proposal that they extend to Senator Walsh, of Montana, their thanks for his "brave and wonderful service," in the "exposure of corruption," in the Teapot Dome investigation.

The women also sent a telegram to former president Wilson expressing hope for improved health and congratulating him upon his accomplishments.

Subjects attempted ranged from "husbands of political wives," to "political cooperation,"—all discussed amid the criticism of friendly hecklers. The league of nations was discussed tonight by former secretary of war, Newton D. Baker.

FATHER AND TWO SONS UNCONSCIOUS FROM GAS

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 31.—Thomas Aubin and his two sons, Edmund, 18 years old, and Adore, 15, were found unconscious in their home here late today suffering from gas poisoning. A partly open valve on a gas stove indicated that they had been exposed to the gas since retiring Wednesday night. Hospital authorities said that their condition was serious and that they had only an even chance for recovery.

SUES HER SISTER-IN-LAW TO RECOVER FRANKLIN ST. PROPERTY

When she was seriously sick in bed and in fear of death, Grace Desario, widow of Toni Desario, claims in a suit brought in the superior court, that she was induced to deed over to her sister-in-law, Seraphina Fiore of Port Richmond, Staten Island, the so-called Berry block at 260 Franklin street. Now that she is well she wants to get the property back under the agreement that she claims was made, but her sister-in-law, refuses to re-convey it to her.

Upon application of Thomas M. Shields, counsel for Mrs. Desario, a temporary injunction has been granted against Mrs. Fiore, by Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court, restraining her from conveying any interest she claims in the real estate.

In a suit for $6,000 damages against Seraphina Fiore brought by Mrs. Desario, a court order is asked to vest the title again in Grace Desario and an injunction to restrain Mrs. Fiore from conveying any interest or title she claims in the property.

It is alleged that while Grace Desario was sick in bed and in danger of death on July 14, 1922, Seraphina Fiore, acting through her brother and agent, Toni Desario, husband of the plaintiff, induced Grace Desario to deed to Seraphine Fiore the so-called Berry block, which is worth $6,000.

No consideration was paid, it is claimed, but one of the inducements used was the promise to the two Desarios that Mrs. Fiore would deed back the property to Mrs. Desario in case the latter recovered from her serious illness. She did recover and on Dec. 26, 1923 requested the defendant through her attorney Thomas M. Shields, to deed back the real estate but she refused to sign the deed which was presented to her for that purpose. The defendant claims to hold the real estate as her own absolute property, but the plaintiff has been in possession of it at all times and is now in possession.

HUMANE SOCIETY SPENT $54,582.061 SINCE 1880

The forty-third annual meeting of the Connecticut Humane Society was held at headquarters of the society in Hartford, this week. Hon. Samuel O. Prentice, president of the society, pointed out in his address among other things the widely extended activities of the society covering the entire state. Judge Prentice also directed attention to the growing work in the branch offices and referred to the designation of F. H. Wyant, as the district agent in Norwich who will begin his duties almost immediately, following several months training at Headquarters.

The society received from all its sources since 1880 according to the report of the treasurer, Francis R. Cooley, the sum of $55,130,033, and expended for all purposes, $54,582,061. From contributors, donors and members the society received $14,377,060, with a slightly increased list of givers over the year before.

Mrs. Nellie T. Brent, supervisor of the family department reported the society had under care in 1923, 1,083 families, concerning the welfare of 3,595 ill treated, neglected or uncared for children, classified as follows. Where neglect existed 470; without proper guardianship 242; deserted or destitute 25; children cruelly punished 58; charged with being wayward or unruly 69; where the ill health or morals of a child were in danger 167; and where the records were closed and families left with other agencies, but for some reason the society again became active, 133; with 283 incomplete investigations noted. There were 191 prosecutions on various charges of offenses committed against children, including 47 court actions on commitments or petitions in probate court.

While traveling over the state the agents of the society examined 14,982 horses and inspected 29,784 crates of live poultry. They blanketed 746 horses and dealt in some way with 4,162 farm animals. They turned in 395 horses found working in an unfit condition, and ordered attention of some sort for 2,967 horses besides inspecting 1,147 stables and 1,107 poultry markets also 148 animal stores. First aid was given to 79 animals injured on the road. There were 70 prosecutions on charges of cruel treatment, abandonment, driving when lame, left without food or shelter and for unlawfully exhibiting animals.

Atwood Collins, Charles Hopkins Clark, Charles A. Goodwin, Wilbur F. Gordy, Dr. George C. F. Williams and Arthur Shipman were reelected directors, who, with Honorable Samuel O. Prentice, president, Francis R. Cooley, treasurer, and Mrs. W. B. Williams, Jr., secy., constitute the board of directors for the ensuing year.

LIONS HAVE GUESTS AT CLUB DINNER

The regular weekly meeting of the Norwich Lions club was held Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel with President George A. Finn presiding at the business session. Lion Hermon A. Gibbs led the singing for the day and many popular numbers were enjoyed. Guests present for the day included Rev. R. B. Day of Yantic, Phil Sherman of Hartford and Harry Schwartz of this city.

The meeting was opened as usual with the singing of America, followed by the introduction of guests. A feature of the entertainment was a recitation by Harry Schwartz, entitled Jake, the Plumber, which was pleasantly received.

Rev. R. B. Day of Yantic spoke briefly on Lionism, his talk being most interesting, as he was a cub while serving in the World war in Canadian forces under the British Lion in 1914.

Reports were also made regarding the Grace Sage concert after which the meeting closed in the usual manner with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner and the salute to the flag.

CLAIMS WIFE CRUEL WEEK AFTER WEDDING

Louis George Holder of New London has brought suit for divorce from Susie Anna Holder, now of parts unknown, on the ground that she was intolerably cruel to him from Dec. 1, 1919, which was approximately a week after they were married on Nov. 25, 1919. Hermaiden name was Susie Anna Alston.

The suit is returnable in the superior court in February.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

Twisted, swollen, unsightly joints are rapidly freed from pain and brought back to normal with Rheuma.

Lame people walk without aid; sleep comes to those who have been unable to lie in bed; hands that were helpless because of terrible rheumatism are now able to do their share for the support of the family.

RECEIVED FIRST PLATES WITH LETTERS N AND L

The names of the holders of the first 50 registration numbers of the series carrying the prefixes N and L were announced by the state motor vehicle department Thursday. These numbers and other small-figure numbers of the letter series were allotted by the department by a drawing in which applications received prior to December 1 competed, in cases where letter series numbers or lower plain numbers than those held in 1923, were asked for.

Motor vehicles bearing markers with the prefixes N and L will be seen most frequently in New London county as the plates of these types are being distributed exclusively from the New London branch office of the department. Applicants who received by the drawing the first 50 registration numbers of this series are:

EXAMINING BOOKS OF ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

New York, Jan. 31.—Two representatives of the internal revenue department today examined account books of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, showing the income of William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the league, who was convicted of third degree forgery. The books were inspected in the office of Assistant District Attorney Pecora, who was in charge of Anderson's prosecution.

Mr. Pecora said the internal revenue representatives would inspect the books again.

District Attorney Banton today declined to state whether Anderson would be tried on any of the four indictments remaining against him. Two of these are for grand larceny and two for extortion. Mr. Banton said he would have nothing to say until Anderson had been sentenced on Feb. 8.

GERMANY TO BUY COTTON FROM UNITED STATES

New York, Jan. 31.—Germany will buy from the United States cotton to the value of $100,000,000 during the coming crop year, it was disclosed by Wall street cotton experts today.

This figure was based upon reports that Germany has purchased 500,000 bales up to January 1, coupled with information that representatives of the cotton spinning industry in that country has just established a $10,000,000 credit with American bankers.

At least 200,000 bales in addition to the 500,000 already recorded sold will be required by Germany during the crop year, it was estimated. Whatever her requirements, sufficient credit to cover them was understood to have been assured by banks in the United States.

BROKEN HOMES CAUSE DELINQUENCY IN GIRLS

New Haven, Jan. 31.—Broken homes caused by the death of mother or father was responsible for delinquency in girls in a large percentage of cases, according to a report of an investigation of cases of 200 delinquents who came under observation of the supervisors of the local Civic Protective association.

"In 30 per cent of the cases the mother or father is dead and the stepparent is the source of the trouble," says the report of the investigation." When the father dies the mother becomes a wage earner and when the mother dies the girl becomes housekeeper, both furnishing incentive to delinquency, the report says.

"In 23 per cent of the cases parents were found to be alcoholic while in 26 per cent parents had records of immorality. The 23 per cent of the girls, who had spent the whole or a portion of their lives in institutions failed to develop initiative, self reliance or resourcefulness, the report says. In ten per cent of the cases insanity in one or both parents was found.

"We find that only 19 per cent of this group had been definitely classed as feeble minded," says the report, "and 2 per cent epileptic. Even this number presents a grave reason for asking for increased facilities for custodial care, for, if society is to be safeguarded, these girls must be prevented from reproducing."

WOODROW WILSON'S LIFE IS EBBING AWAY

In the Shadow of Death the Former President is Displaying the Same Indomitable Spirit That Has Marked His Career and With Which He Met the World War Crisis—Conviction of Physicians and all Close About the Patient is That the End is Only a Question of Hours—Mrs. Wilson, at the Bedside of Her Husband, is Bearing Herself With Fortitude That Compels Admiration—President and Mrs. Coolidge Were Among the First to Send a Message of Sympathy and Express a Hope of Recovery to Mrs. Wilson.

Washington, Feb. 2.—At 2 a. m. no change in the condition of President Wilson was indicated. All was quiet at the S street house.

Dr. Grayson remained in the sick room.

Soon after midnight Mrs. Wilson retired.

As night wore on the watchers at the home of former President Wilson saw no indication of a change in his condition.

3 a. m.—The quiet that had prevailed during the night continued.

ABANDON HOPE FOR LIFE OF FORMER PRESIDENT

Washington, Feb. 1.—Woodrow Wilson is fighting against death at close quarters.

With a tenacity born of the old indomitable spirit that carried him through so many desperate battles in the momentous days of his service in the White House, he clung to life tonight after those about him had all but abandoned hope of his recovery.

By nightfall he had snatched back a little of the strength that had ebbed away in the earlier hours, but his condition remained grave and the watchers at his bedside realized how insignificant a turn for the worse it would take to snuff out the flickering flame of his earthly being.

As the evening hours passed the broken remnant of his vitality reached the stage in which both friends and physicians were powerless to do more than hope for the best. No one knew at what moment the supreme crisis might come, or whether he again would emerge victorious.

A conviction lay upon all of those closest about him, however, that even should he live to see the day, the end would be only a question of hours.

Sudden Turn For Worse.

The immediate cause of his relapse was a minor digestive derangement which first appeared last Monday. In the beginning it was not in itself alarming; but it was enough to undermine the slender and tottering support by which his vitality has been sustained since lingering illness first took a grip upon him four years and four months ago. He took a sudden serious turn in the early hours of today, and ever since has lain between life and death.

While the great personages of Washington and the lowliest of his followers far and near were pouring in a flood of messages of sympathy or calling at his home to express their concern, he spent the long hours of the day and night sleeping fitfully and awakening to speak in faint whispers to those who were with him.

During the afternoon he was able to take some nourishment; his heart seemed a trifle stronger; his mind remained for the most part clear and alert; he suffered somewhat, but bore it stoically. The sinking sun and the twilight hours saw him still fighting, but there were no signs that encouraged his physicians to believe that a material change for the better was in prospect.

Ready to Die.

He himself understood that the battle through which he was passing probably would be his last.

"I'm ready," he said to his friend and physician, Dr. Grayson, "you've done all you could. I am a broken machine. It's better that I should go than remain a helpless invalid."

Mrs. Wilson, who has been his constant companion since his long illness began, remained silent at his bedside as the battle went on. Miss Margaret Wilson, of New York, the former president's daughter, and Joseph Wilson of Baltimore, his brother, joined her late in the day. Other members of the family also have been summoned by telegraph.

The digestive trouble that led to the present grave condition resulted from some injudicious choice of food taken Monday. Dr. Grayson was in North Carolina on a hunting trip, but Mrs. Wilson sent for him because out of her long experience with the delicate and feeble constitution of the former president she saw there might be real danger ahead. Meantime, Dr. Sterling Ruffin, who had helped care for Mr. Wilson in the White House, made an examination and prescribed a course of treatment.

When he reached Washington yesterday Dr. Grayson found the patient up and around the house, although he had cancelled his daily automobile rides about the city. The physician ordered him to bed, but there were further stomach upsets, accompanied by a violent bleeding at the nose.

New Complication Developed.

So rapidly had the new complication developed that Dr. Grayson spent last night at the Wilson home and toward morning he found symptoms that told him an alarming situation was likely. Soon afterward Mr. Wilson suffered a sudden collapse, and at 9 o'clock this morning the doctor summoned other medical aid and announced that the former president's condition was "very serious."

Dr. H. A. Fowler, a kidney specialist who also had treated Mr. Wilson previously, made an examination and acquiesced in Dr. Grayson's verdict that little could be done. They tried to make him comfortable but they decided the situation did warrant a resort to heroic remedies because they could not be endured by the wasted constitution of the patient. But they remained within call, and in addition two nurses and an orderly were on duty in the sick room.

All of the former president's medical attendants were in agreement tonight that his death might momentarily, or that he might linger on for hours. They said no professional predictions would be made. Dr. Grayson left the house for a few moments shortly after seven o'clock, but he arranged to be within instant call, and he again called for a general consultation of the physicians two hours later.

Patient Remains Conscious

During the evening Mr. Wilson remained conscious a part of the time, but there were frequent relapses into sleep. He was able to talk with those near him only in a whisper, and then with the greatest difficulty. Some of the old symptoms that had yielded to the careful treatment of months came back upon him, but for the most part he was free from complications and had to fight only with the languor of a growing exhaustion.

Coolidge Sends First Message

The news of the serious turn in his condition, spreading quickly over Washington, aroused many echoes throughout the machinery of the government over which for eight years he had presided. President and Mrs. Coolidge were among the first to send a message of sympathy and express a hope of recovery to Mrs. Wilson. Chief Justice Taft called alone and on foot at the S. Street home and left his card, in the house, at the motion of Republican Leader Longworth, an impending partisan debate over the Teapot Dome disclosures was adjourned.

Another of those who called in the constant flood of humanity that transformed the quiet residential street and kept it crowded throughout the day was John W. Weeks, secretary of war. There were several of the former president's old friends admitted to the house, but none of them were permitted to enter the sick room.

The sudden collapse of the former president meantime had started rumors of his death, and at one time late in the afternoon the flags on the great state, war and navy building were lowered to half-mast. The order was recalled a few minutes later.

Mrs. Wilson at Bedside

Throughout the day and into the night Mrs. Wilson, at her long-accustomed post beside the sufferer, bore herself with the same fortitude that has made her devotion a subject of tender admiration through the national capital. It was she who first nursed him when the hand of affliction was laid upon him more than four years ago during his historic speaking trip for the league of nations. In the flying trip across a continent to Washington she stuck with Dr. Grayson the constant watch beside him, and it was only after he had been taken gravely ill at the white house and had begun to win back his strength again that she consented to leave him even for the shortest intervals.

Not only in the higher places of the government, but among the rank and file of the citizens of Washington, was further news from the sick bed awaited anxiously. In the days of his residence here, and particularly during the time he has resided almost in seclusion at the house to which he went from the inaugural ceremonies of Warren Harding, Mr. Wilson has been a figure dreaded of greatest interests to thousands who live in the capital city has been greeted with many a wave of the hand by his fellow Washingtonians as he took his daily automobile ride through the city, and crowds came to have gathered to watch him enter and leave his favorite theatre during his weekly visits there.

To most of these observers he has appeared during recent years to have been somewhat improved in health. He took on flesh after he left the white house, and the filled-out appearance of his face often was mistaken as a sign of returning health. Those who believed his condition materially improved have been further deceived by his recent activities in public affairs; by his voluminous correspondence with his old political friends on subjects of current interest to his party; by his recent visits with the distinguished men of Europe on tour here; and by the fighting speech he delivered by radio on armistice eve.

But to his physicians and a little circle of friends the enfeebled condition of the man has been fully apparent, and they have understood but too well that his delicate hold on life might at any time be loosed forever.

After a consultation of more than an hour, the three physicians attending Mr. Wilson issued a bulletin at 10.20 tonight saying that the former president had "gradually lost ground." At that hour he was conscious, and was in no pain but there was nothing either in the announcement or the demeanor of the attending physicians to raise hope that the end would long be delayed.

Doctors Ruffin and Fowler left the Wilson residence shortly after the bulletin was issued, but Dr. Grayson remained on watch during the night. He he would make an announcement if there were any change for the worse.

TO CONNECT GREAT LAKES AND ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

Washington, Feb. 1.—A communication from the Ottawa government understood to be in relation to the project proposed to connect the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence river, has been received by the Washington government.

INSURGENT MINERS TO MAKE FINAL FIGHT TODAY

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 1.—(By The A. P.)—Defeated in every attack upon the conservative administration of the United Mine Workers of America, insurgents tonight planned a grand finale for tomorrow in their attempt to have Alexander Howatt of Kansas, reinstated as a member of the union. Their last defeat came today when the convention voted down a resolution intended to depose Ellis Searles as editor of the Mine Workers' Journal, and provide that only a practical coal miner shall hold the job.

The deposed Kansas president has a following of uncertain size in the convention, but according to administration leaders, the great majority of delegates are solidly in support of President Lewis' policy. The committee on appeals and grievances will make its report tomorrow morning, deposing of Howatt's appeal and also that of Thomas Myerscough, Pittsburgh, who was expelled from the "progressive miners' committee," organized in line with the principles of the red internationale of Moscow. There was no doubt in any quarter tonight that the committee will recommend that neither of these men be recognized.

Administration candidates for delegate to the world mining congress at Prague, Czechoslovakia, in June, were elected on the first ballots today. Walter Nesbit, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois district, by a vote of 983 and President Thomas Kennedy, of District 7, Pennsylvania, by 806; John Hindmarsh, of Riverton, Ill., an insurgent candidate, got 477 votes, and Frank Ledvinka, of Bellaire, Ohio, 128.

Kennedy and Nesbit will cast the votes for half a million American miners in the world congress on roll call, but on a viva voce vote will have only two votes as compared with the 32 German votes and 38 from Great Britain. There will be 128 delegates in the world congress.

Today the convention adopted the report of the scale committee's report and the report of the constitutional committee. The scale committee recommendation for a renewal of the present wage scale for a term of four years was approved without change, over opposition of insurgents.

Delegates voted a substantial majority against striking the ban against the Ku Klux Klan from the constitution. The subject was declared the most delicate the convention had to deal with and the vote on it split both insurgent and administration ranks. The committee had offered a substitute declaring against "any organization whose principles are detrimental to the United States government or the United Mine Workers of America."

WAGE INCREASE FOR N. Y. C. ENGINEERS AND FIREMEN

New York, Feb. 1.—The New York Central railroad announced today that it had agreed with leaders of the "Big Four" unions to grant conductors and trainmen wage increases upon the same terms as were granted engineers and firemen last January 22.

The engineers and firemen received increases averaging five per cent, and railroad officials made plain that a similar increase would be given the conductors and trainmen. A further conference for completing details in agreements for the New York Central system's seventeen subsidiary lines will be held here next Tuesday. E. L. Sheppard will appear for the conductors and W. N. Doak, for the trainmen.

Unions representing the four branches of the service had asked for the return of wage scales prevailing in 1920, which would have represented an average increase of about 20 per cent over the prevailing schedules.

COOLIDGE TOUCHED BY ILLNESS OF WILSON

Washington, Feb. 1. — President Coolidge, speaking of the illness of former President Wilson at his semi-weekly conference with the newspaper men today said:

"I am very much disturbed to hear of the illness of President Wilson. I met him most pleasantly when he returned the first time from France. He landed in Boston. A public reception was tendered him there at which he made an address and I extended the welcome of the commonwealth.

"I have always recalled with a great deal of feeling that when I was chosen governor for the second time, though he was very ill, he sent me a message of congratulations. So that learning of the probable nearness of his end is a matter that touches me deeply."

Britain Recognizes Soviet Russian Gov't

Russia Has Been Invited to Send Representatives to England to Negotiate a New Treaty.

London, February 1.—The government of soviet Russia has been accorded recognition by Great Britain and according to the text of a note given out at the foreign office tonight, embodying the government's communication to the soviet's diplomatic relations after a six year suspension, are to be resumed.

The recognition is unconditional and leaves all questions of treaties, debts, claims and other obligations to be settled later by agreement between the two governments. Russia is invited to send representatives to England to negotiate a new treaty settling all outstanding questions.

By a large body of opinion opposed to unconditional recognition of Russia, Premier MacDonald is accused of precipitancy. These observers point out that although in office only a little over a week, he is trying to settle the thorniest foreign problems without evening waiting for the reassembling of parliament. But, it is added, he is sure of parliamentary approval in these matters because the liberal party itself has advocated recognition of Russia.

It is understood that the soviet government has already indicated to the the British government its readiness to appoint a mixed committee to arrange the treaty suggested in the recognition communication.

One motive pointed to for Mr. MacDonald's prompt action is his belief that British recognition, especially under the present uncertain conditions arising from the death of Lenine, might have the effect of hastening the time when some form of parliamentary institutions might be developed in Russia. The premier's main object, however, is said to be the development of trade between the two countries as a means of remedying unemployment

MANY ACCIDENTS DURING HEAVY FOG IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 1—More than forty persons were injured today in accidents on steam railroads, elevated lines and in the streets, while thousands of others were delayed on their way to work by one of the heaviest fogs in the history of the local weather bureau.

Twenty passengers on two loop-bound elevated trains were hurt, six of them seriously, in a rear end crash.

Fifteen persons on an Illinois Central suburban train were injured when another passenger train ran into it.

Five other collisions on the elevated lines tied up traffic on the various lines until nearly noon.

Two men were probably fatally hurt in street accidents and a half dozen others were run down by automobiles.

The fog upset railway and street traffic generally. Trains and street cars barely crawled along in the murk with the head-lights piercing the fog only a few yards.

Poincare Gov't Wins By 168 in Test Vote

French Chamber Voted Entire Amendment Providing For Revision of War Damages.

Paris, Feb. 1 (By the A. P.)—The first skirmish between the government and the opposition in the chamber of deputies debate on the proposed new taxes and economies to balance the extraordinary budget, ended in victory for the government today when it obtained a majority of 168 in a test vote. At the end of discussion on revision of the war damages figures, M. Klotz, minister of finance in the Clemenceau cabinet, who has been fighting the government throughout the present debate, offered an amendment providing that all war contracts passed since 1914 be revised at the same time action was taken on the budget.

Premier Poincare pointed out that the amendment was a mere diversion; that a bill containing the same provisions had been passed by the chamber and was before the senate. He demanded that the chamber reject the amendment and proposed that it be made a question of confidence. The radicals joined the socialists in opposition, but the government mustered 375 votes to 207, which was regarded as quite a sufficient majority considering the nature of the questions involved.

The entire amendment providing for revision of war damages was then voted, and, at the request of the premier was disjoined from the other tax economy bills and sent to the senate so as to expedite action by that body. Debate on the government measures will be resumed Monday.

KELLOGG WELCOMED BY PILGRIMS' SOCIETY, LONDON

London, Feb. 1—(By the A. P.)—Several hundred members of the Pilgrims' Society tonight gave a hearty welcome to Frank B. Kellogg, the new United States ambassador to the court of St. James, and Sir Esme Howard, who is to succeed Sir Auckland Geddes as British ambassador in Washington, the occasion was a banquet which was featured by the presence of the Prince of Wales, Ramsay MacDonald, the British Prime Minister, and the French, Belgian, Japanese and Italian ambassdors.

But throughout the festive ceremonies there was apparent a peculiar note of sadness over the news that Woodrow Wilson probably was at death's door. Mr. MacDonald voiced the feeling of the great gathering of distinguished Britons and Americans, as well as the sentiment of all England, when, referring to Mr. Wilson, he said:

"This is a moment when partisanship and party allegiance sink into significance, the whole English nation tonight is standing with held breath, waiting for further word of this Great American.

"Our party differences flare up like a great beacon and die down like the flames of a great beacon, for what is great and inspiring in the actions of public men belongs not to parties, not to nations, but to the whole of humanity."

Mr. Kellogg sat between the Prince of Wales and Lord Desborough, who presided. The Prince divided his time between Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Kellog, chatting in animated fashion with them between courses.

Mr. MacDonald proposed the health of Mr. Kellogg and introduced him as belonging to that category of ambassadors who always give joy to a foreign minister because they have nothing whatever to say to him. The premier declared that the relations between Great Britain and the United States never were better than at present; and he prayed to go that they would long continue in that happy condition.

The premier drew a burst of applause when he said the nations of the world had not yet discovered how to be neighbors, but that the United States and Great Britain had gone far in that direction.

FIVE MEN MISSING SINCE WRECK OF STEAMER POWELL

Paducah, Ky., Feb. 1.—Five men, missing since the wreck of the steamer Thomas C. Powell, eight miles below here in the Ohio river, still were unaccounted for tonight and were believed to have perished in the disaster.

Survivors brought here early today by the tugboat Marcia Richardson, held the opinion that bodies of the missing men, two passengers and three negro deckhands, were in the sunken vessel, the victims having been trapped by the inrush of water or pinned in lower parts of the steamer by slipping freight.

Captain Green said the Powell sank within three minutes after the smash, caused possibly by striking a large ice floe.

DO YOU SAVE ENOUGH?

Bankers say that saving money is largely a matter of habit—of systematically putting away something every pay day—of consistently thinking in terms of thrift.

The bankers are right. But remember that thrift embraces buying as well as saving. It is "penny wise and pound foolish" to save by scrimping and yet spend money needlessly in making your every day purchases.

Has it ever occurred to you that every day you can save something simply by reading the advertisements in The Bulletin? Do you realize that the advertisements tell you just where and when to buy to advantage—that they tell you how to avoid regrettable expenditures?

So, you owe a great deal to advertising. And you owe it to yourself to read advertising. Advertising helps you to save money. Read it systematically.

DOHENY'S DEALINGS WITH FORMER PUBLIC OFFICIALS

Oil Magnate Retained McAdoo After His Retirement as Secretary of the Treasury, Also Gregory, After He Quit as Attorney General and Two Other Democrats, Formerly Attorney General, and Two Other Democrats, Formerly Democratic Cabinet Members who Brought Out in Response to Inquiries by Senator Lenroot—Only Loan Made to Public Official was $100,000 to Albert B. Fall, When Secretary of the Interior—Congress Has Directed President Coolidge to Bring Court Action for Annullment of Oil Leases and Punishment of Any Persons Guilty of Any Crime in Connection Therewith.

Washington, Feb. 1. — William G. McAdoo, candidate for the democratic nomination for president, and Thomas W. Gregory, the democrat selected by President Coolidge to assist in the prosecution of the oil lease cases, have had employment as counsel for oil interests, Edward L. Doheny, California oil magnate, testified today before the senate investigating committee.

Mr. Doheny said he personally had retained Mr. McAdoo after his retirement as secretary of the treasury, that he thought his company had paid him "all told" about $250,000 in fees, and that it now pays him a retainer of $50,000 a year. His company and half a dozen other oil companies employed Mr. Gregory after he quit as attorney general, Mr. Doheny stated, for the purpose of appearing before President Wilson or the state department in connection with Mexican oil matters. His company's share of the fee paid was $7,000, he said.

Testimony also was given that companies in which Mr. Doheny had an interest had given employment to two other members of the cabinet in the Wilson administration after they quit office, Franklin K. Lane, former secretary of the interior, and Lindley M. Garrison, former secretary of war. Mr. Lane was a consultant to the president of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, Mr. Doheny said, while Mr. Garrison was associated with the New York banking firm of Blair and company.

The committee also was told by Mr. Doheny that he had advanced $5,000 to Leo J. Stack of Colorado, who told him he wanted the money for George Creel, chairman of the committee on public information during the war, who was employed by Mr. Stack said, in connection with efforts to prevent the leasing of the naval reserves to republicans after the change of administration. This was in 1920, he added, when he and Mr. Stack were seeking to get a lease on the teapot dome reserve from the then Secretary Daniels.

Evidence relating to the employment of former democratic officials by oil interests was brought out in response to inquiries by Chairman Lenroot, put as a result of a demand made in the senate yesterday by Senator Reed, of Missouri, who also is a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination. Mr. Reed insisted that the committee give Mr. Doheny a searching examination as to whether he had paid any money to men while serving as public officials or afterwards.

Mr. Doheny declared that he had not advanced any names to any public official other than the $100,000 which he has testified he loaned Albert B. Fall, then secretary of the interior, on November 30, 1921, nearly a year before his firm obtained the lease for California naval reserve number 1, which the government now seeks to annul along with that to the teapot dome reserve granted to the Sinclair interests by Mr. Fall.

As a result of the testimony of Mr. Doheny that Mr. Gregory was employed by a number of oil companies and that he has been counsel for the Island Oil company, President Coolidge has definitely made up his mind not to retain him as counsel in the oil cases. The executive talked over the matter tonight with Chairman Lenroot and Senator Curtis, of Kansas, the assistant republican leader in the senate. He will see Mr. Gregory upon his arrival here tomorrow, from Texas.

Before resuming its inquiry today, the oil committee decided to compel the attendance of Mr. Fall tomorrow morning for questioning. This decision was made after the committee's medical commission had reported in writing that the former secretary is in condition to appear; that while he is in an "anxiety state," there is no evidence of any organic nervous disease and no psychotic symptoms.

After Mr. Fall testified with reference to the Doheny loan and the loan of $25,000 made to him by Harry F. Sinclair, Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, will broaden the scope of the inquiry in an effort to determine wheth any public officials had transactions in stock of the Mammoth Oil company, which was organized by Mr. Sinclair to take over the Teapot Dome lease. To that end, he has had representatives of a number of Washington brokerage firms subpoenaed.

Aside from hearing evidence as to employment of former public officials by oil interests, the committee received today from Mr. Dheney a mutilated note which he presented as evidence of his loan to Mr. Fall. The signature had been torn off and he explained that he had given it to his wife they having decided to divide the note so that in case of accident to both of them the note would not be pressed for collection by executors of their estates. He had been unable to find the scrap bearing the signature, he said, but promised to make another search at his home in Los Angeles.

Final congressional action was taken today on the Walsh resolution directing the president to initiate court action for annulment of the oil leases and punishment of any persons guilty of any crime in connection with their negotiation. The house adopted the resolution on a rising vote, 139 to 6—less than a quorum—without any debate. Republican Leader Longworth said he thought debate should be dispensed with owing to the condition of former President Wilson.

In the senate the Robinson resolution, demanding the resignation of Secretary Denby for his part in the oil leases was laid aside until Monday, after Senator Robinson had offered a substitute which would limit it wholly to the naval secretary.

The oil leases got into senate debate, however, Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, speaking again on them and making a general attck on the republican party. He suggested a new title in place of grand old party—"great oil party." Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, appealed Mr. Gregory for not informing President Coolidge that he had been counsel for oil companies and suggested that Mr. Coolidge appoint in his place Justice Brandeis of the United States Supreme Court. He declared that Mr. Brandeis is an "able and fearless prosecutor" and that he should be given a furlough from the court to prosecute the oil cases.

A denial that he ever was consulted by any one as to the wisdom merits or legality of the California or Teapot Dome leases now in test to the senate committee today by Attorney General Daugherty in a telegram from Miami, Fla. The message said:

"I beg to advise you and your committee that I was never consulted by anyone as to the wisdom, merits or legality of the California or Teapot Dome leases now under consideration by your committee nor was the department to justify ever asked for an opinion or consulted in regard thereto. The attorney general is permitted to render his decisions only when requested to do so by the president and heads of governmental department. I give you this information in justice to your committee, the department of justice an dall concerned."

M'ADOO DESIRES TO APPEAR BEFORE SENATE COMMITTEE

Los Angeles, Feb. 1.—William G. McAdoo, candidate for the democratic nomination for president, late today telegraphed Senator Walsh of the senate committee investigating Doheny and Sinclair oil leases, asking that arrangements be made for him to appear before the committee.

Mr. McAdoo's telegram to Senator Walsh quoted the statement he already had issued relative to E. L. Doheny's testimony as to Mr. McAdoo's legal relations with the Doheny oil companies. In conclusion he stated that he was leaving for Washington tomorrow on account of the illness of his father-in-law, Woodrow Wilson, he hoped he would be able to testify at the senatorial investigation and asked the senator to make arrangement for his appearance.

Mr. and Mrs. McAdoo earlier today had planned to depart for the national capital tonight but found that they could not arrange to leave until the morning.

DISSATISFACTION AMONG HOUSE REPUBLICANS

Washington, Feb. 1.—Rumblings of dissatisfaction among the house republicans over the action of the majority members of the house ways and means committee in decided to report a tax bill carrying the income rates proposed by Secretary Mellon crystallized today in an announcement by Representative Frear, Wisconsin, a leader of the republican insurgents, that his faction would not support the measure.

In announcing the stand of the insurgents, Mr. Frear revealed that a compromise on the Mellon rates had been virtually agreed to yesterday, by some republican members of the committee, including Chairman Green and the insurgent groups. The proposed compromise rates, which were upset by the decision of the committee majority, included. It is understood, a 50 per cent reduction in the normal tax instead of a 25 per cent as suggested by Mr. Mellon and maximum sur-tax of about 40 per cent instead of 25 per cent. Eleven members of the committee insisted upon the Mellon rates which were adopted.

While the republicans of the ways and means committee worked on further the details of the rate revisions preparatory to taking the bill up again next week in full committee, Secretary Mellon issued estimates showing the rate reductions proposed by Representative Garner, of Texas, for the democrats would cost the government $347,361,401 in revenue against a loss of $267,824,361 if the Mellon rates were accepted. He made no comment on the estimates.

PURSUING CONVICTS WHO ESCAPED FROM DEATH CELLS

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 1.—Posses tonight were in pursuit of Manny Chadwell and Joe and Rube Sullivan, who, after a spectacular escape from death cells in the Arkansas penitentiary today, forced Hamp Martin, prison warden, to drive them through the penitentiary gates to liberty.

Late tonight the only clue to the whereabouts of the fugitives was the abandoned prison car found on the edge of "Echo Valley" a forest and heavily wooded section 15 miles west of here.

The three men all under death sentence, escaped after they had held the warden and three other men locked all except the prison official in cells and then forced the warden to drive them beyond the penitentiary walls in the automobile.

Before attacking the warden, the men overpowered and disarmed a guard and forced him to join them.

Martin was put out of the machine about a mile from the prison. He immediately gave the alarm.

The list includes 2,362 women and 3,581 men, showing that since they fought and received the franchise the women have become quite a material support to the town. Last year tax payers called to pay up Friday but Collector Timmins is out to balance up his accounts at the end of this month.

With Robert E. Mitchell toastmaster eighteen "Old Timers", composed of local professional men, politicians and entertainers made merry at a chicken supper and smoker, held on Thursday night in Challenger's Inn, Windham Center.

A cart filling machine, working on a windlass plan, which is being used in the excavating on land of the Loomer estate, corner of Union and Broad streets, has attracted considerable attention. Another Old Folks' Concert is planned at the Methodist church and will be under the auspices of the choir this year. Several rehearsals have already been held by the chorus. After hearing the opinions of a few who believe that a horse race course at Merrill H. Jones' farm on the Windham Plains would not be a successful one local horseman points to the qualities of the most successful racing tracks in the state for comparison. The Cherry Park track is "Way in the woods" and yet is one of the most widely known in the state. In Hartford Norwich, Rockville and Stafford Springs the fair grounds and race tracks are located quite a distance from the center of the city proper. Having a race track on the Windham Plains would be near enough to the city so that the local merchants would benefit materially by the influx of visitors and yet would keep the city free of some of the bad features which go with the ordinary fairs and horse races.

Approximately 700 people greeted Miss Loretta Higgins upon her first appearance in Willimantic Friday evening in a concert given at the Windham High school auditorium under the auspices of the Willimantic Rotary club. The crowded hall rang with applause when the vocal artist of Norwich, a member of the Opera

Comique of Paris, appeared for her first number. She was ably assisted in her recital by Carl Brunner of New York, one of the leading accompanists in the country.

Preliminary to the opening of the concert, President James P. Mustard of the Rotary club spoke on behalf of the organization, in expressing his thanks for the attendance. The proceeds of the concert will substantially swell the fund for the boys' work committee of the club which is assisting the underprivileged youths of Willimantic. Speaking in glowing terms of the famous singer of our sister town, President Mustard thanked Miss Higgins for accepting the request to appear here in the concert.

The program was carried out as follows and supplemented by many enticing encore numbers: Aria de L'Enfant Prodigue, Dubeesy; Les Civilles de Chez Nous, Lavade; Le Marriage des Roses, Franck; Seguidille, DeSalle, by Miss Higgins; Impromptu, Chopin; Old Vienna, Dodowsky; Shepherd's Hey, Grainger, by Mr. Brunner; Micaela, aria, from Carmen (Bizet), by Miss Higgins. Including among the encores rendered by the singer were Kerry Dance and The Last Rose of Summer.

As the program came to a conclusion those in attendance were unanimous in the opinion that Miss Higgins was a singer of remarkable ability, all of her numbers having been rendered in beautiful tone and artistic manner. Mr. Brunner's panio selections displayed a finished touch and interpretive ability which merited much applause. The Rose of New England was well represented at the concert, the soprano being accompanied by her mother, Mrs. M. C. Higgins and a large number of friends. During the intermission the lovable soprano was presented an immense bouquet of carnations on behalf of the Rotarians by John F. Ahearn.

The able committee which was in charge of this successful affair comprised John F. Ahearn, chairman, Jeremiah E. Sullivan, George M. Shaefer, Richard E. Dodge, J. B. Fullerton. The decorations were by William A. Dawson and Almie J. Marlineau.

SUMATRA

"Down where the monkeys chatter, where the plants outgrow the trees, where old men climb the branches and drop like ripe fruit to be eaten, and natives keep their teeth filed close to the gums, such," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society, "is Sumatra, where the ubiquitous oil drill is reaping a remote harvest.

"Reports that the Jambi petroleum fields are to be developed give promise that the world's fifth largest island may soon experience a boom like that which has made its little sister, Java, a garden spot of the world.

"The length of Sumatra is equal to the distance from New York to St. Louis; its area is greater than that of all the New England states, New York and Pennsylvania; it is four times the size of Java, yet has only one-sixth as many people.

"The Dutch found Javanese a docile and industrious people but the mixed, warring and savage Malays of Sumatra to this day have defied the white man's rule. The Achinese natives, in the north island country, first rebelled against the newcomers in 1598, have fought steadily for the past forty years, and are reputed to have cost the Dutch 200,000 lives and $200,000,000.

"The Bataks, however, are the least civilized of the island natives. The Dutch have tried to stamp out cannibalism, but there is no certainty that they have been successful in their humane endeavor. When an aged warrior felt he no longer was a first-class fighting man he would climb a tree. Beneath it his relatives would chant and dance. After a time he would fall to the ground, symbolizing the dropping of ripe fruit, whereupon the 'mourners' would promptly kill him by a blow on the head and eat him.

"Even the Sumatran natives who work on the great tobacco and rubber plantations, and live along the beaten paths cling to their native customs. Women wear wedding earrings, not wedding rings. These are large, silver, button-like trinkets which must be kept in evidence until the first child is born, or for five years if there is no child, and then abandoned. The sagging, buttonless ears of the older women do not commend the custom.

"A Sumatran mother is her own perambulator. She carries her baby astride her hips, held there by a scarf tied across her shoulder. Her single-piece gown, and only garment, is a sarong which hangs loosely from under the arms, or from the waist. A turban-like headdress, of the same dark-blue cloth as her sarong, completes her costume.

"Sumatra is a botanical garden of amazing luxriance. Some varieties of banboo, which look like gaint asperagus stalks, grow a foot or more a day and in three or four months their waving tops appear above the centuries-old teakwood forest monarchs. A flower which attains the prodigious size of its name is the 'tjindawanmatabari.' All along the east coast, which stealthily reaches out to take the fringe of islands to its bosom, is the mangrove. When the mangrove's seeds are ripe they do not fall off. They germinate on the parent tree and grow downward in long shoots. These drop of their own weight, take root in shoal water, and help catch the silt worked down to Sumatra's swampy coast by rainfalls almost as heavy as those of Rodesia.

"Waterspouts, simoons and almost daily thunderstorms add to the weather variety of the east coast. The spine-like mountain range extends nearly the length of this island along the west coast, on which side are few rivers and more and more tempestate weather than on would expect in a land mass practically bisected by the Equator. A principal river of the east coast is the Jambi, which gives its name to the region and town where the oil drills break the skyline of forests jungles."

Scholarly books have been dispraised because they were not exciting; fine novels have been sneered at because they were hard to read; cheap stories have been proclaimed great because they were a protense of sericusness; sentimentality has been welcomed because it was warm hearted; indecency has been condemned for immorality; immorality has slipped through as romance; daring has been mistaken for novelty; painstaking dullness, for careful art; self-revelation, for world knowledge; pretty writing, for literature; violence, for strength; and warped and unhealthy egoism for the wise sincerity, which is the soul of literature.—Henry Seidel Canby, in the North American Review.

JOY RIDE OF TOBIN; BOOKKEEPER, HAS DOLEFUL ENDING AT NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 1—John Tobin, bookkeeper in the employ of the W. R. Frisbie company on Bank street, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman Clarence Wells, charged with operating an automobile without the permission of the owner. The arrest of Tobin resulted from the wrecking of a machine, early this morning, which it is alleged, he was operating. When locked up Tobin was intoxicated. He was unable to secure a surety on his bond for appearance in the police court tomorrow morning. Tobin declared that he had no knowledge of operating the car.

When workmen appeared for their day's labors at the corner of Montauk avenue and Pequot avenue, where road construction by the city is in progress they discovered a Reo commercial car straddling a pile of frozen earth, the car having crashed through a barricade fence. The fence was practically destroyed, while the automobile had demolished running boards, mudguards and fenders. The wreck was reported to the police and it then developed that the car had been taken from the garage during the night and suspicion pointed to Tobin. A search for Tobin failed to find him, but later Charles W. Tinker, manager of the company, located Tobin in a restaurant and had him accompany him to the automobile sales room where he was delivered to the officers.

When the car was found, a bottle of liquor and a woman's side comb were found alongside the machine.

At Ocean Beach it was revealed that a car with tires the same as those on the Reo car, had collided with bathhouses and had nearly reached the waterfront, by passing over the boardwalk.

A letter was read from Mrs. Clara McBride of Providence, R. I., first president of the club in which she expressed regret at not being able to attend the banquet owing to illness in her family.

During the banquet, solos were rendered by the club's sextet, Mrs. Stanley Thomas, Miss Abby Curley, Mrs. Conrad Stick, Mrs. Frank Savage, Miss Helen Downing and Miss Eleanor Pickett, there were recitations by Miss Mary Jane Nelson; solos by Miss Abby Curley, with accompaniments by Mrs. John Hokanson and Mrs. Philip Carney.

One of the oldest police officers on the New London force is authority for the statement that there are fewer violations of the liquor law in this city now than have been known since the adoption of the Volstead Act. The officer said there was some selling from the pocket, but that one was as likely to find hair on an egg as to find a place where liquor could be bought. He attributed this to the fact that liquor that the average man would dare to drink cannot be purchased by would be sellers and those who would sell it are fearful of the consequences if they are caught in the business. He also expresses the opinion that there was opportunity to purchase the "cut" liquors but he said these cannot be readily sold and the purveyors of that sort of stuff are having difficulty in finding a market for it. There have been fewer arrests for violation of the liquor laws during the past month than in any thirty days in a long period.

John McDonough, down and out, was taken into custody yesterday for stealing milk and loaves of bread from stores on Bank street where the articles were left before the stores were opened for business. Then it was found that the man had in his pocket a bottle of denatured alcohol, and that he had drank some of the liquid without sustaining worse effects than partial intoxication. He was frank about it and admitted that he consumed some of the alcohol. He couldn't resist the temptation to drink it, because he had formed the habit, and did not have the will power to break away from it. Judge Prince committed McDonough for a period of six months, during which time he can be treated medicinally for his affliction.

Rickenbacker

Everyone Agrees— Rickenbacker is Right

Enthusiastic and instantaneous endorsement was the response to that epoch-making announcement of "Nothing Else to Buy."

Factory advises that orders are pouring in, and we are warned that demand for Rickenbacker cars will exceed the possible supply, so we can expect only our quota.

That's the most eloquent endorsement of this latest Rickenbacker policy—a "Fully-Equipped Car."

You know what we mean, of course—a car that as it comes to you, and at the advertised price, is so completely equipped with every desirable safety factor and convenience that there is left for you, "Nothing Else to Buy."

That announcement made by Rickenbacker at the opening of the New York show, created a sensation almost as great as had previous epochal improvements first announced in Rickenbacker cars.

It was as great an innovation in its way as were the Vibrationless Motor, the Two Fly Wheels, the Automatic Air Cleaner, Disc Steel Wheels, Cradle Springs and 4-Wheel Brakes.

Until Rickenbacker set this new standard—this higher code of selling ethics—you used to pay extra for such necessities as front and rear Bumpers, Automatic Windshield Wiper, Disc Steel Wheels, Motometer, Wind Wings, Car Heater, etc., etc.

When you had paid for your car, you had only begun—you still had to pay $150 to $250 more before your car was complete.

Since January 1st, included as "standard equipment" in Rickenbacker cars are the following:—

Bumpers—front and rear; Folberth Automatic Windshield Cleaner; Moto-Meter; Moto-Meter Wings; Moto-Meter Lock; Transmission Lock; Ignition Switch Lock; Drum Tire-Cover; "Stop" light; "Pipeless" Car-Heater; Rear View Mirror; Shock Absorbers. Closed Models have Vanity Case and Clock. Open Models—Bevel Plate Windshield Wings—and all models have 4-Wheel Brakes, of course.

You are entitled to all these things and at the advertised price of any car—for Rickenbacker has included them without changing prices of closed models, and on open models at considerably reduced prices.

But accessories alone do not make a car.

So even did you obtain all these "extras" you still could not hope for Rickenbacker performance, or low upkeep, unless that car also had all the advanced engineering features which have made this car famous.

Rickenbacker is first choice of men who know most about automobiles, and when you learn all there is to know about this car no one could sell you any other at any price.

But, considering the nation-wide popularity and demand for Rickenbackers, you must not delay if you would ensure reasonably early delivery.

We are now taking orders for spring delivery—and a limited number for immediate—or as soon as we can get them.

So we suggest you place your order early—now—if you would avoid disappointment.

You'll never be happy till you do own a Rickenbacker.

INVESTIGATING GASOLINE.

Governors of various states have expressed their surprise at the advance in the price of gasoline and in some instances have set in motion the machinery for an investigation of the higher price. While there are those who find that there is little that can be done in the respective commonwealths there are others who insist upon an investigation, and steps have been taken for a conference of governors to get at the facts and determine what can be done.

Gasoline goes up and down for reasons that are little understood by the consumer. Action on such changes is invariably concerted. There may be a slight variance but when the big ones are down they are all down and when announcement of an increase is made there is no delay in taking the cue.

The law of supply and demand might be expected to govern such a commodity, but whether it does or whether it is a question of control is what the governors want to find out. That we have the big production of oil in southern California to thank for the price reductions that have been experienced in the past few months is generally accepted. So much crude oil was put into the market that it could not be controlled. The competition was great and the situation for a time got out of bounds. With the announcement of an increase and the indications that there will be more, it is to be inferred that the situation has got back again where the interests can control it.

What the governors want to find out is what justification there is for such an increase. The demand for gasoline is increasing every day. It has got to the point where it is no longer a luxury but a necessity. Greater and greater dependence is being placed upon it, but that is no reason why a greater price than is justified should be exacted. If the governors are able to clear up the situation and find out whether the prices are right or wrong, in order to insure a reasonable return, they will be rendering a valuable service. There is probably a wider public interest in such a matter than there is in anthracite.

STICKING TO AMERICAN SHIPS.

Less attention might be paid to the announcement that has been made by President Palmer of the emergency fleet corporation, to the effect that the American members of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World are going to the international convention in Europe next summer on American ships, were it not for the recent decision of the American Bar association to charter a British instead of an American ship to attend their convention in London in July.

The lawyers will go on one ship but the members of the advertising clubs will go on three, and it doesn't appear that the latter had any difficulty in making arrangements for accommodations on American ships. Whether the failure of the bar committee to secure an American ship had its effect upon the committee of the advertisers, or whether it stirred the American shipping interests to greater efforts is not disclosed. Presumably the criticism of the bar committee because of its seeming preference for a British ship has had its effect in more than one direction.

The American steamship lines may not be able to claim as long an existence but there is no getting away from the fact that they have desirable ships and that the interest of Americans should be first manifested in those vessels that fly the American flag.

The advertising club will get much deserved credit for their action, while the criticism of the bar committee will be difficult to shake off in spite of the claims that are made, since there exists the allegation that the American lines offered to meet any proposition that was put forth by the steamship lines of other countries.

We have long insisted upon a merchant marine. We have one. If it is going to be properly maintained for the good of the country it is not unreasonable to expect that Americans at least will display an interest therein and give it the preference where possible. It is taking an unfortunate stand when we insist upon American standards and yet rush to those of other countries when the first chance permits.

A DISGRACEFUL OFFER.

Germany unquestionably feels keenly the loss of its colonies and is anxious to get them back, but when those engaged in such an undertaking declare that they will reveal not to the world the remedy for sleeping sickness, which has been discovered by a German, they make a serious mistake.

As much as such a remedy would be desired for relieving that part of humanity which is subject to this dread disease, there is no disposition to yield to such a holdup scheme, even after the efficacy of the discovery has been established.

It is unquestionably of much importance, but it will do no good if kept stored in some pigeonhole. There is a marked contrast displayed between the demands which are being made in order to have this remedy bestowed upon humanity and that which was taken by the young doctors at Toronto who discovered insulin, which has been used so effectively in the treatment of diabetes.

Not all those who have discovered remedies have put aside the opportunity to get rich quick through their discoveries, and perhaps it would be too much to expect of the German bacteriologist that he would do so, but when the ultimatum is put forth that there will be no remedy if the colonies are not returned it should be understood that there will be no favorable response. Those responsible for such a demand should know that such terms could never be obtained, but they should further appreciate the fact that by insisting upon them they are taking upon themselves the awful indictment of failing to do what lies within their power to prevent the loss of thousands of lives.

Possibly they will experience a change of heart, but whether they do or not it must speed up the efforts of others to find an equally successful method of treatment for that disease. What would those discoverers think if the people of Germany were suffering from sleeping sickness and could obtain the recently found remedy only on similar terms?

FIGHTING ILLITERACY.

Gatherings that are held for the purpose of discussing illiteracy problems invariably disclose the fact that, while increased endeavors are being made to overcome them, we still have plenty to do. At the national conference in Washington this month it was brought out that the illiteracy menace existed largely in the cities because of the illiterate immigrants and in the nation at large because of the illiteracy among the Negroes and the foreign born white adult. The illiteracy among the native born whites is largely restricted to the south.

Whether the centers of illiteracy lie in the cities or the country, whether they are in the north, west, east or south, the fact that there are those who cannot read or write in any language, or are equally deficient in the English language is sufficient reason for the devotion of all possible means to eliminate such a situation.

That there can be only a limited amount of work among certain of the adults is recognized, but that does not place very serious obstacles in the way of insisting upon the teaching of those of school age and those who have unfortunate enough to be deprived of opportunities to learn either in other countries or this. It is time that there was a general assault made upon illiteracy.

With particular stress being laid upon the illiteracy of the south, it is a situation which the states responsible should be ashamed of. Long ago should there have been more liberal doses of the remedy for the uneducated black as well as the white. Where illiteracy is due to the immigrant the problem should be met promptly in all of the states, and everywhere there should be such efforts made that conditions for each year should show a marked improvement over the previous one. There can be no lagging if the welfare of the country is to be served.

VENIZELOS' ILLNESS.

That the physical condition of Premier Venizelos is bound to play an important part in determining what he is going to accomplish with the Greek government was manifest at the first heart attack he experienced. It is more clearly set forth now that he has been stricken for a second time under similar circumstances.

Venizelos was persuaded to return to Athens in the belief that he was the one man whose fiineee could straighten out the Grecian tangle. He went back with the intention of occupying a position of adviser but he was unable to prevent being placed in that important position of premier where, especially under existing conditions with various factions doing their utmost to carry the day, a strong man with good health is required. His eagerness to serve his country has not made it possible to overcome his physical limitations. On two occasions has he been warned that he was attempting something beyond his strength. It is therefore only natural that he should desire to resign and be relieved of the responsibilities in which his heart is wrapped up but his physical resources are not equal to the demands.

Looked upon as the man to bring order out of the situation, there is naturally a reluctance to permit him to resign. It is well understood what the loss of his guiding influence might mean and no doubt leaders of the respective parties have made their plans accordingly. It is most unfortunate that Venizelos' physical incapacity is handicapping the adjustment of the situation that today prevails in Greece.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

One is amazed at the audacity of Edward K. Bok. How could any man in his right mind think of doing such a strange thing as offering $100,000 as a prize to any person who would offer the most feasible plan for restoring world peace? Here is a man obsessed with the idea that the world is somehow out of joint, and is somehow laboring under the delusion that the present condition of the world hardly justifies the slaughter of more than fifteen millions of the very flower of the world's young manhood and the sinking of billions of dollars! Is he not slapping our boasted twentieth century civilization in the face? As a man of reputed intelligence did he not know that any plan big enough to smooth out the present sea of disorder must in some way involve the wicked league of nations? Ought any man be allowed to squander his own money in an attempt to bring back such a dead (?) issue? In case the plan should work what will you do with Mr. Bok?

The deficit on the balance sheet of our trade relations with the orient to the little amount of $164,000,000 in the year of 1923 is quite enough to make our political economists thoughtful. There is trouble somewhere when we pay that vast amount of money more for their goods than they pay for ours. When we think of the Orientals as backward peoples—and they are for the most part—and we the greatest producing people in the world with all our improved facilities, why is not the trade balance on our side? By making large investments in their colonial possessions in both the east and the far east, Europe has been able to greatly revive its export trade. Now Europe has been obliged to borrow largely from America, and the money received to a great extent has gone to the orient for business purposes. Is is not a little strange that Europe beats us in trading with the orient and still cannot pay interest on the money she borrows of us for that purpose?

Many years ago Ralph Waldo Emerson said this: "Write it on your heart that every day is the best day in the year. No man has learned anything rightly until he knows that every day is doomsday." As one glances over that saying hastily it would seem that the last sentence contradicted the first. One naturally inquires how there can be any "best day" at all if "every day is doomsday?" Of course that is all going to depend on the exact meaning of "doomsday." Everyday passes its sentences upon us. Is is a sentence of approval or condemnation? We are judged by what we are, by what we think, by what we say, and by what we do. If the general trend of our lives is on the up grade then our being, thinking, saying and doing are constantly improving. Now doomsday passes sentence on our going up or down and it is done every day.

"Never in the history of the world has a permanent monopoly been established." When I read that the other day I wondered if it was not a mistake. Then I began to see the monopolies that had come and gone. Men have succeeded, for a while in getting up corners on every variety of commodities but they don't last long. One reason why they go down is that it takes too much money to control the market. In order to control the market you must crush all competitors and that is mighty mean business, and no real man will do it. In business one man has just as much right to live as another, and no one man in any given community has any right to do all the business, especially if there is legitimate room for another. It is well to recognize as a business principal that the prosperity of one man depends not on the failure but on the prosperity of the other fellow.

The passing of a man of outstanding ability and influence, like the late Ex-Governor Waller, is a distinct loss to any community. If a building burns, however magnificent, it can be replaced by one equally fine and serviceable. But when the human temple is cut down, it can never be replaced. The reason is that individuality leaves no successor. Other men may be forthcoming of equal ability and worth, but they cannot fit into the places of other men made vacant by death. Thomas M. Waller was a great deal more than a brilliant, magnetic man. He was a man of far-reaching sympathies. He was not only keen enough to see worth in other men, but was very quick to express the same. His great-hearted sympathies were the basis of that glowing oratory that powerfully affected his audiences. To be a great orator one must have great feeling, and that Gov. Waller possessed in a large degree.

Somewhere in my desultory reading I have picked up the following, but do not know who the author is:

"Life's battles don't go.
To the stronger or swifter man,
But soon or late, the man who wins
Is the fellow who thinks he can."

The lines are valuable for the emphasis they put on endeavor. One need not dig down very far into his memory to find cases to the point. Have we not known men both strong and active who seemed to have little ability as prize winners? On the other hand have we not known lesser men to gain prizes simply because they believed they could? With such a belief they have put forth adequate endeavor to get the prize. Usually it is a man who thinks that he can get there who is willing to put forth energy enough to get there.

Some of our sovereign states in area outreach many of the nations of Europe, and along other lines, save that of population only, are their equal. Take, for instance, the state of Michigan which was admitted into the Union, January 26, 1837. Three times the size of Switzerland; more than twice the area of Greece; equal to the entire Balkan states with 7,000 square miles to spare. At the beginning of last century it was a perfect wilderness when these states of Europe were old. One can hardly believe that in about ninety years the state of Michigan has advanced in the arts and sciences, and in the conditions that make for betterment of human life as much, if not more, than these older states of Europe in a thousand years. It may be that Neibuhr, the German historian, was right when he said, "all states like all individuals, have their rise, progress and decay."

Not more than two weeks ago we were rejoicing over the healthy condition of our coal bins. They looked so fat and shiny, and the bottom of the bin at such a respectable distance away. Most of us said, "Here is enough to carry us into March, and perhaps some will be here to greet the robins." But alas, for the shortness of man's vision, for while we were making our usually wise calculations, Old Boreas, somewhere up in the Canadian northwest was grinning, and at the same time was whipping his lieutenants into activity, and has since poured the vials of his wrath upon the helpless people of the south, making the coal bins rattle unlike anything thus far this season. As we look at the diminishing pile of coal it makes us cry, but it is all right for it makes the ice men laugh. It is only fair to even things up a bit, for the Bible says, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy."

A ROMANTIC GOVERNMENT AGENCY.

"The recent groundings of the world's two biggest ocean liners, the Leviathan and the Majestic, show how essential to the safety of the world's shipping is an intimate knowledge of the complicated tidal and current fluctuations of the world's great harbors," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society, issued from its Washington, D. C., headquarters today, "and emphasizes the importance of one of the phases of the work of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

"New York harbor is not a single waterway, but a series of communicating ones, with two entrances from the sea. A territory larger than Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island together, drains into the Atlantic through three bays, four straits, and one great and several small tidal rivers. The fresh water from this large area complicates the problem of giving the navigator data as to flood and ebb and current so that he may safely maneuver his craft at all times.

Aids Navigation and Sewage Disposal

"The U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey has given to navigators a definite picture of the conditions they must meet in berthing their great liners; to wharf engineers the information necessary to the proper arrangement of docking facilities; and to sanitary engineers new and basic data that has an important bearing on the problem of sewage disposal.

"Working quietly on the great fundamental problems of navigation, the Coast and Geodetic Survey doesn't make much copy, and the world at large hears comparatively little of one of the most highly technical of the scientific bureaus of the United States government.

"And yet every ship that sails the seas, every passenger that comes into port, every article on the supercargo's manifest are served in a very concrete, if unsuspected, way by the Survey.

"Two things the navigator must have if he is to bring his craft with its human and material cargo safely into port—a knowledge of the tricks of the compass and a picture of channel and harbor conditions.

Vagaries of a Compass Needle

"The needle of the mariner's compass has been shown to be as full of vagaries as mid-March weather. Men used to think that it could always be depended on to point to the magnetic pole. But local affinities distract it from its proper affection in ways that are sometimes startling. If the sailor has a sweetheart in every port, the magnetic needle has a secondary attraction in many quarters. Looking at a magnetic declination chart we see deeply waved curves which proclaim loudly the influence of these affinities in weaning the needle away from the 'straight and narrow' of its true direction. Magnetic surveys on the sea in general and along the coast in particular, are a supreme necessity in the accurate guidance of ships over the trackless ocean and into the world's ports.

A Romantic Government Agency

"Examining the line of the 15 degree west declination we find it sweeping over the sea in a northwesterly direction, with comparatively small variations from normalcy until it approaches the north shore of Massachusetts. There it swings radially to the west, and as land is reached swings back until it points almost due northeast at more than a right angle to its recent position as it rounds the Cape Ann Peninsula.

Geese on "Spree" in New York

"The same condition obtains in the 10 degree west declination which sweeps over the Atlantic toward New York. Approaching the waters between Long Island and Sandy Hook the needle adheres closely to its proper direction. But when it reaches the Hudson river it is pulled around until it seems to forget all about its fundamental affection and goes on a lark that causes it to swing around through almost or quite a quarter circle from its accustomed position.

"No wonder a magnetic survey is needed to warn the mariner of the vagaries of the magnetic needle when it permits itself to fall so fully under the spell of the Great White Way that it wanders ninety degrees away from its path of sober duty.

"The need of more thorough soundings in harbors and on rocky coasts grows greater as the volume and complexity of shipping grows and the size of craft increases.

"Sounding made with lead lines can be depended on to discover the main underwater elevations, but the waters off the New England shores, the Pacific shores and Alaska abound in pinnacle rocks—Washington monuments of the sea. They rise to harbor points almost to the surface, which defiect a lead line, even though the lead may, on a slender chance, land on top of them.

"Thus it came to be that they passed undiscovered and uncharted until some ship chanced to run afoul of one of them, as the U. S. cruiser Brooklyn did in the harbor of New Bedford, Massachusetts.

How Wire Drag is Used

"Latterly a wire drag has been evolved. It is stretched between two launches or other boats which run parallel to one another anywhere from 100 to 25,000 feet apart.

"The lower wire sweeps through the water at a depth well below the keels of ships of the deepest drafts and any obstacle that rises above that depth is readily detected. A shipping of immense volume moves through the pinnacle and boulder-infested waters of the New England coast and the Survey is working aggressively with the limited funds at its disposal to finish its sweeping of these waters and to discover all such obstructions to navigation before they register their presence by tearing holes into the hulls of hapless liners.

"Mud banks and sand bars must also be watched carefully; for the unceasing attack by winds, waves, and currents upon the shore cause, particularly in stormy weather, the water to be converted into a sort of huge mill in which the material wrested loose from its position is ground to sand and deposited elsewhere, filling up channels and obstructing navigation generally.

"Automobiles and motor-boats have made heretofore inaccessible shores teem with the activities of civilization, and now knowledge of the laws of such shore evolution must be mastered and remedies found for conditions of erosion that menace life and property in the seaside communities.

"And so it happens that the Coast and Geodetic Survey under the direction of Col. E. Lester Jones, must be ever on the alert to protect shipping from the perils of demoralized magnetic needles and changing shallow water conditions."

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Abraham Believed God.

Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness; and he was called the Friend of God. James 2: 23. Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man and full of years; and was gathered to his people. Gen. 25: 8. The writer of Genesis has no diffidence in inscribing upon his grave the words an old man, and he hastens to add the reason why; he declares that Abraham's life was long because it was full. He was an old man not because his life was extensive but because it was intensive; not because it had many years but because, within its years, were compressed large experience. It is with such lives as with some American prairies, which at nightfall are noiseless wastes and at morning are filled with beautiful wild flowers; they have sprung up in the hours of a single night. Even so there are seasons, and generally night seasons, in which the process of human growth is marvelously accelerated and the flowers burst prematurely into bloom. Such lives cannot be measured by duration. Yet they do not really come short in quantity.

God brings him out to look at the stars and try if he can count their number, and it is in beholding the visible glory that he recognizes his own glory. To a man in modern times the command to count the stars would have quite the opposite effect to that which it produced upon Abraham.

It is in obedience to the command to sacrifice his son Isaac that Abraham comes before us as a distinctively religious man. The piety of his youth, beautiful as it undoubtedly was, had yet consisted mainly in a trust of the promises of God; he is now asked to trust God Himself, to trust promises, but with the seeming reversal of all His promises. The star of hope which had been guiding him from the east to the place where Jehovah dwelt fades away as he draws near to the Invisible Presence. He is called to meet God alone, without the star, to come into the holy place as the magi of an after day came into the manger and found cold and darkness where they expected to have seen a royal palace. Such is in spirit the trial of Abraham. He had accepted God for the sake of His gifts; he is asked to give up the gifts, and to accept God for Himself alone.

Our great and good Abraham Lincoln also believed God. As when before the battle of Gettysburg he went into his room and locked the door, and kneeled down and prayed Almighty God for victory. He told Him our war was His war, that our cause was His cause, but that we could not stand another Fredericksburg or Chancellorville, and he then and there made a solemn vow with God that if He would stand by the boys he would stand by Him. He wrestled with his Maker in prayer like Jacob of old. After this a sweet comfort crept into his soul, that God Almighty had taken it all into His hands and that all things would come out all right at Gettysburg.

General Rushling tells us that the president's words were uttered with great solemnity, and that they were followed by a silence in which he seemed to be communing with God, "and now his face shone as the face of Moses might have shone when he came down from Mount Sinai."

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Today is the birthday anniversary of Lieut. Leigh Wade, one of the four officers with outstanding records in army aviation who have been named by Major Gen. Patrick, Chief of the U. S. Army Air Service, to participate in the flight around the world, which starts next spring. Lieut. Wade is a native of Michigan, born at Cassopolis, in that state, in 1896. His first military service was as a private in the Michigan National Guard. When the United States entered into the World war he obtained transfer to the aviation section, Signal Corps, and was commissioned first lieutenant. Upon qualifying as a pilot, he became flying instructor with the Royal Air Force at Toronto and later in the United States Army Air Service. For a year he saw active service with the American Expeditionary Forces in France. Lieut. Wade now holds the altitude record for the Martin bomber.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

TAKES EXCEPTION TO MR. NEWTON'S STATEMENTS ON COAL.

Mr. Editor: I have been quite surprised that a speech delivered before the Norwich Chamber of Commerce on January 31, and reported in your columns on the day following, in an article headlined "Gives Clear Explanation of the Anthracite Coal Situation" has not drawn challenging replies from labor union men, from former coal miners, and from disinterested observers of the modern warfare between capital and labor in our basic industries.

The statements by Mr. Newton as reported were so sweeping that they must have raised doubts in many minds, and even a cursory examination of the speech quite convinces me that it is so thoroughly separate as to amount to virtual misrepresentation. This has led the federal government appointed a coal commission which spent $600,000 to find out the facts in the coal industry and whose reports are published and available.

Turning from the question of Mr. Newton's bias against the united mine works and for the coal operators to simple statements of fact, I cite two items. Mr. Newton stated the labor cost of one ton of anthracite coal to be $4.60. United States Senator Wheeler in a speech in Boston a few days ago stated the labor cost of one ton of anthracite to be $2.60, a difference of over 90 per cent. Again Mr. Newton stated, "The recent United States coal commission after months of exhaustive investigation states that the earnings of the ten railroad coal companies and three individual operators, producing a total of 54,000,000 tons of anthracite a year, covering about 90 per cent. of the production realized in the ten year period from 1913 to 1923 an average margin of 36.7 cents per ton." Contrast this with the statement of a member of the coal commission, Edward T. Devine in an article in the Survey for November 1, 1902, that "In 1919 the operator got 38 cents per ton, now (1923) $1.13 per ton." Going up rather rapidly isn't it?

I believe the good sportsmanship of the average American demands impartial representation of the facts in any controversy. And a large section of Mr. Newton's speech is devoted to the sins of the union miners. He said, "and nearly every serious ill from which the anthracite industry is suffering today is directly traceable to this unrestricted power of the United Mine Workers of America." Contrast this with the statement of the coal commission, "The history of the past thirty years affords conclusive evidence that the United Mine Workers of America has been the potent agency in the betterment of the miners working and living conditions and it is necessary today for the protection of the standards that have been attained."

Again Mr. Newton gave a schedule of wages for four classes of miners ranging from $3,100 to $4,000. But the anthracite miners in their statement to the United States coal commission (The Anthracite Monopoly) states, "The wages paid in the anthracite industry on the basis of an eight-hour work day range from $4.20 a day for outside labor to $5.62 for inside company miners. The working time in the anthracite industry does not exceed 273 working days. On this basis men paid at the $4.20 rate would earn annually not over $1,142.40 while the total earnings of the highest paid inside day men would not exceed $1,496 a year."

As to the living conditions of the miners, Mr. Newton spoke of the many advantages of good houses, schooling, low rentals and that many of the anthracite workers own their own homes and those who rent from their employers pay from $7.50 to $10 per month for houses that would rent for $50 to $75 in most of the small cities of the east." But Mr. Devine says "The commission through its seven field agents and through its valuable cooperation of the United States public health service made a study of the living and sanitary conditions in various coal fields. There are bright spots but on the whole the report confirms the worst that has been said about the dreary and depressing character of most of the mining towns and camps."

Mr. Coolidge does not seem to be much in doubt as to where the danger is in the coal industry and where the responsibility for the high price of coal should be lodged.

In his message to congress he recommends the findings of the coal commission and he closes with this sentence. "Those who undertake the responsibility of management or employment in this industry do so with the full knowledge that the public interest is paramount, and that to fail through any motive of self-interest to its service is such a betrayal of duty as warrants uncompromising action by the government."

In view of the importance to every New England householder of the questions raised by Mr. Newton's speech and in the interest of American fair play, I sincerely hope that the chamber of commerce may succeed in their desire, to bring to Norwich in the near future a speaker for "the other side," or better still, some disinterested person who will give a representation of the findings of the federal fact finding commission on conditions in the coal industry.

Very truly yours

New Method of Reducing Fat

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh steadily and easily without injury to the stomach or the causing of wrinkles, and without the help of exercising, dieting, or absurd greases and salves, is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat reducers. We say economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription) can be obtained of any druggist the world over or from the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., for one dollar a case, which is a decidedly economical price, considering the number of tablets each case contains. They are harmless.

Anti-Fat Campaign in 1863.

The fattest man of all history is a title that has rested undisputed on Daniel Lambert, who died in his fortieth year at Stamford, Eng., in 1809. Mr. Lambert is said to have weighed 739 pounds, almost 300 pounds more than his closest competitor, Mr. Bright, who lived in Essex in the previous century. Bright, however, was scarcely a sylph, for his waistcoat is reputed to have enclosed seven persons of ordinary size, with room to spare. One of the first recorded anti-fat campaigns was that inaugurated by William Banting, who published a pamphlet on the subject in 1863. He urged as a cure greater moderation in the eating of sugar and starch, and gained so much fame that today "banting" is common vernacular for undertaking a restrictive diet.

Strange Birds in Belgian Congo.

Strange birds make their habitat in the Belgian Congo, in the dense forest and high grass region of Central Africa. The bornbill, for instance makes a curious nest. The female lays her eggs in a hollow tree. The hole is filled up with mud, leaving an aperture, too small to allow the female to get out, but through which the male supplies food while the eggs are hatching. Weaver birds weave their nests out of strips of grass or leaves, and, although the entrance to the nest is from below, it is so constructed that the eggs never roll out. A variety of birds called grass warblers sew their nests of grass between leaves or weeds in the same manner.

Loud attire speaks for itself.

ANOTHER BIG JUMP IN STERLING EXCHANGE

New York, Feb. 1.—A "sensational" jump of 5 cents in sterling exchange, following a rise of 4 cents yesterday, took place in today's foreign exchange market on the announcement that Premier MacDonald of Great Britain had decided to recognize the soviet government in Russia. Demand bills were quoted as high as $4.35 1-8.

Local foreign exchange dealers reported that most of the buying orders had originated in London with a large percentage also coming from Berlin. One large bank is reported to have distributed several orders to buy amounts ranging from $50,000 to $100,000 "at the market," execution of these orders, the original source of which was not revealed, was largely responsible for the brisk rally.

One large dealer declared that much of the recent buying undoubtedly was due to short covering by European speculators, who apparently expected all sorts of dire things to happen when the labor government assumed control.

French and other European rates improved in sympathy, French francs selling above 4.70 cents for the first time in three weeks.

OBITUARY.

Stephen C. Culver.

Following the results of a shock suffered on August 18th of last year, the condition of Stephen S. Culver failed to change for the better and he died Friday morning at 3.30 o'clock at the home of his son on Fowler avenue.

Mr. Culver was born in Norwich on October 27, 1836, the son of Chauncey and Philula Sterling Culver and like many other young men of those days he followed the seas, becoming an expert marine engineer and mechanic. He sailed on ships that touched at many ports of the world and once was on a ship that was wrecked on the coast of Greenland. In the Civil war days he was engineer of transports and carried soldiers and supplies to many parts of the country.

After the war he was employed as chief engineer of the City of Lawrence and other boats on the Norwich Transportation Company line and later ran the old steamer Ella which fifty years ago was the most popular pleasure trip steamer on the Thames. For 35 years Mr. Culver ran stationary engines for the Edward Chappell company, but for many years now he has led a retired life, living with his son on the East Side.

In this city Mr. Culver was united in marriage with Miss Helen S. Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Young of Hadlyme, his wife passing away on Nov. 18, 1911, aged 75 years. Surviving are two children, Mrs. Fred S. Young of Worcester, formerly of Norwich, and Charles H. Culver, a member of the Norwich fire department. There are four grandchildren, three of Mr. Culver's and one of Mrs. Young. There is also a niece, Mrs. Nettie Kinney, and a sister, Mrs. Whitley.

Mr. Culver was a member of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist, and a member of Sebequonash Tribe, No. 11, Daughters of Pocahontas, and Mohegan tribe, No. 13, I. O. R. M.

Mr. Culver was ever a lover of his home, and throughout his life proved himself to be a loving husband and father. He never refused to aid in a worthy cause and in character he was honest, faithful, thrifty and eager to be of service. His many friends will learn of his death with deep sorrow, for in his loss his family has lost a loved one, and his many friends a companion.

Mrs. John C. Quinlan

The death of Nellie Corcoran, beloved wife of John C. Quinlan, occurred Friday at her home, 19 Slater avenue, where she was found about 11.30 overcome by gas in the kitchen of her home. A physician and the medical examiner who had been summoned arrived at about the same time but were too late to save her. She had been suffering severely of late an dhad apparently become temporarily deranged with the result that she prepared to end her life Friday morning.

Mrs. Quinlan was born in Norwich about 54 years ago last month, the daughter of Maurice and Ellen Corcoran. She was united in marriage to John C. Quinlan in this city and had always resided here. She was a woman who had gained a wide circle of friends who will be deeply grieved to learn of her sudden death. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved husband and aged mother, the only ones surviving her.

Miss Emiline F. Norton

(Contributed

By the death Friday morning, of Miss Emeline F. Norton of No. 188 Washington street, Norwich has lost one of its historic landmarks.

Born in 1825 into a family of strong character, Henry B. Norton and his wife transmitted to their daughters their own strong and generous individuality.

Of these, the two eldest—Emeline and Isabella—were twin sisters. The latter, Mrs. T. B. Blackstone of Chicago is the survivor, with two other sisters, the Misses Mary and Ella Norton of this city.

It has been the good fortune of the writer to know Miss Emeline since the beginning of the civil war, and to have noted her commanding efficiency in supervising the wonderful work of the women of Norwich in outfitting the recruits with clothes and conveniencies of all kinds during the long months when man came to the front faster than government could furnish their material comforts. The executive ability of Miss Norton, in collaboration with Miss Eliza Perkins whom she survived by many years, brought her into a deserved prominence despite her characteristic spirit of self effacement.

Miss Norton had been a lifelong member of the Broadway Congregational Church until it was merged into the United Congregational Church to which her membership was transferred.

She did her full share in all the activities of the Broadway church especially in its Sunday School department and very notably in its benevolent activities, far and wide. In fact, what good reputation that church or its successor has enjoyed, then or now, has been conspicuously, though without her intent, due to her modest but unfailing generosity. The world will never know all the springs from which these generous fountains came.

None but those who knew her well, could appreciate her keen sense of humor and her bright wit. Such will fully appreciate the loss of one of the noblest daughters of Norwich.

This imperfect sketch should not be closed without allusion to her long and faithful service in the work of the United Workers, a society which has contained so many severe cases of important helpers of late.

SEES NEED IN NORWICH FOR LICENSING DEALERS IN COAL

Because of evidence of short weight in coal that has been brought before the chamber of commerce, consideration has been given there to the need of licensing coal dealers in which the intent is to secure a check upon dealers who maintain no yards or scales. The coal dealers with yards have regularly qualified weighers, but the chief effect of a license would be the knowledge given to the local sealer of weights and measures of all coal dealers, and give him an opportunity to check up all coal dealers from time to time.

The proposal for a coal dealers' license, which would be by an ordinance passed by the common council, has been brought out in the January membership letter of the chamber of commerce which say that "at present there are coal dealers who buy their coal from local concerns and resell the commodity by the basket, especially to those who can ill afford to buy coal in ton lots. A recent case has come to our attention where a small dealer, knowingly or otherwise, delivered short weight coal to a customer for which he received payment for full measure."

"It goes without saying that every body is entitled to full weight of any commodity for which payment is made. We license the milkman, the baker, the gasoline dealers—why not coalman?"

Other matters touched on by the membership are the following:

Dolphin Lights — These warning lights placed on the Thames river channel have recently been swept away. The matter was immediately brought to the attention of the superintendent of the federal light house service by the chamber. With these lights gone the safety of navigating the channel to Norwich is greatly imperilled.

A communication was received from the superintendent stating that an appropriation is being sought to build rip rap dolphins which would practically make these warning signals irremovable. This federal department fully recognizes the danger and we were assured that buoys would be placed at all vulnerable points of the boat channel.

House Numbers—It is evident that there are hundreds of houses in Norwich that are not properly numbered. City employees, tradesmen, physicians and delivery men can testify to this fact. Cases are quoted where some houses are numbered in a hit and miss fashion without any regard for sequence. The proper numbering of houses of itself is a small matter, but in the economic plan of community life it is an essential element for address and delivery and delivery. This matter has been brought to the attention of our city government.

Bus Station—Busses are now being used in practically every state throughout the country for transportation purposes. Norwich has three bus lines—Colchester and Hartford; The State Hospital, Hallville, Poquetanuck, New London and Westerly. These bus lines operate on regular schedules, under the supervision of the public utilities commission, and are as dependable as the trolleys or steam cars.

New London and Hartford, doubtless other Connecticut cities too, have suitable reservations for the exclusive use of busses. Waiting rooms are maintained by the owners of these various bus lines for the convenience and comfort of the traveling public. The owners of all the bus lines operating to and from Norwich are willing and anxious to have a waiting room here if the city authorities will grant them the use of a reservation where waiting room privileges can be maintained. We should give fair consideration to the need for accommodations for the busses serving this city.

Ten new members were added to the chapter. Light refreshments were served by Mrs. Hall, assisted by Miss Emma Minnis and Mrs. Francis Evans.

Battery B Dance at Armory

The new entertainment committee of Battery B held their first dance Friday evening at the State armory with the Blue Ribbon Syncopaters furnishing the music. There were about three hundred couples in attendance. The committee has been fortunate enough to secure the services of several good teams for future dances. At one of their coming dances the "Kell Patches" Society Orchestra is to furnish the entertainment, featuring the old dances as well as the modern steps. The old fashioned dances are coming back into favor with the dancing public, and it is expected that a large attendance of the older patrons of armory dances will attend their affair as well as the younger ones.

No Injuries in Fall.

Joseph T. Mitchell of 156 Franklin street, the old Civil war veteran, who was reported to have been injured in a fall when he slipped on ice at Shannon's corner, was so little hurt that he did not find it worth while to mention his fall when he reached home. The first that the members of his family knew about it was when they saw it noted in the newspaper as Mr. Mitchell was not even limping after his fall.

HIGHWAY DEPT. RECEIVES 20 HEAVY TRUCKS

After a four week trip by water freight from the Pacific coast, a fleet of 20 heavy auto truck, allotted to Connecticut by the U. S. War Department, has arrived at the state highway department's garage and storage plant at Portland. Work is now under way to condition these cars for road work. They will take their place in the repair organization of the department within a few weeks.

The trucks were shipped from a war department warehouse at American Lake, Washington, via the Panama Canal to New York, where their ocean journey ended. Here they were taken in charge by a force of forty state employes with twenty motor truck, who completed the long trip by towing the machines to Portland.

The only cost to the state for these machines was the freight bill, the trucks themselves being received free of charge.

After a most active season a year ago when the problem of keeping roads free from snow and open to traffic was a serious one, the department this winter prepared itself for a lively season. The lack of snow, however, has resulted in a great financial saving to the state thus far. Approximately $175,000 was expended last winter to keep about 1,500 miles of roadway open to motor transportation. A further saving is expected to result from the mild winter, as the wear and tear on the state's motor trucks and snow plows during the course of an open winter usually greatly lessen the lives of these machines.

The department profiting by its previous experience, has a well laid program in readiness to prevent highway blockades.

TUBERCULOSIS DECREASED, MET. INS. CO. PRESIDENT SAYS

Haley Fiske, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, told a meeting in New York Thursday of 1,000 managers from various sections of the United States and Canada of the accomplishments of his company during 1923. He also gave figures indicating that progress had been made in the fight against tuberculosis. In the last six years he said, the Framingham demonstration, which was conducted as an experiment, had reduced the deaths from that disease to 32 per 100,000, a decline of 63 per cent. Compared with the general population in the registration area the decline in mortality of the company had been 29.5 per cent., as against 18.7 per cent. ten years ago, he said, this decline in mortality having meant since 1911 a saving of 141,609 lives and a lessening of death claims amounting to $38,200,000.

Mr. Fiske reviewed the company's housing loans for the last two years and announced that the first houses to rent at $9 a room per month in Astoria are now ready to be opened.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Parts of two skulls, some leg and arm bones—all easily contained in a bushel basket—constituted the remains of Eugene Sheedy, generally known as "Owen," and Peter Lambert, the men burned to death in Sheedy's shack on the south shore of Alexander's lake Thursday night.

The Bones were raked out of the ruins Friday morning, collected and taken to the town farm farm to await burial at the direction of the selectmen, following a visitation to the blackened ruins by Coroner Arthur G. Bill and Medical Examiner George M. Burroughs, M. D.

Identity of the men was made possibly through a statement by James McNally, the man who was arrested while in a last degree stage of intoxication just outside the burning shack, from which he barely escaped with his life. McNally told Sheriff Charles E. Ayer, who arrested him that Sheedy and Lambert were with him in the shack. McNally says his last clear remembrance before falling asleep was that Sheedy was lying on a bunk and that Lambert was sitting on the floor near the stove. McNally, who was so intoxicated when arrested that he could not or would not talk, appeared willing Friday morning, when he had recovered his senses, to tell all he knew about the terrible affair. He had awakened almost suffocating with smoke and said that the shack was burning all about him and his companions. He managed to make his way to the door and out into the open, but it was utterly impossible for him to rescue Sheedy or Lambert, who may already have been overcome. By the time McNally awakened Lambert had gotten up from the floor and had thrown himself across a bunk. With no means of fighting it at hand, the fire raged until it had licked up the shack that had been the scene of so much debauchery for nearly a decade. After inspecting the little that was left Friday morning, Dr. Burroughs says it hardly seemed possible that the bodies could have been so nearly consumed in a fire of such comparatively small nature, but such was the case. Strange, too, was the fact that the last tiny bit of fire and smoke was coming of fuel made up of dead men's bones.

Sheedy, who had lived in the shack for years, was a well known character in and about Dayville and Goodyear, where he had lived for about 15 years. One who knew him from his youth, Mrs. Charles Simmons of Goodyear, said Friday that he was born in Portland, Conn., about 70 years ago, a son of Edward and Johanna Sheedy. He came of good and respectable parents. He was married about 45 years ago, but his wife and a daughter born of the union are both dead. Sheedy's only known living relative is a sister, Mrs. William Tyler, resident in Hartford.

For many years Sheedy worked when he worked at all, in mills at Portland and South Glastonbury and later for a long period was employed in textile plants in Chicopee. At times since he came into the town of Killingly he has worked for brief periods, but he has chiefly contented himself with living at the shack and in being fed and entertained by men as irresponsible as himself—men who had "jacked up" their jobs in the mills and were bent on a holiday to last as long as the money they had earned stood up under the constant drain to meet the costs of food and liquor. When one group left the Sheedy place another succeeded it, so that there was an almost constant round of visitors there.

Peter Lambert, Sheedy's companion in leaving this world, was about 50, small, shrunken and weasened. He was by turn an itinerant mill worker and farm hand, going from place to place. He was well known in Attawaugan, where he had worked at different times, also in Putnam and West Thompson. It was said Friday that he has a brother John, who is, or was, a resident in Jewett City.

James McNally, known to the police of this territory as an occasional visitor in the courts and who told all that is known about the affair at the shack, was given 30 days in jail, on an intoxication charge, when presented before Judge Francis in the town court. Walter Kendrick, arrested near the shack early Thursday afternoon, also was given 30 days in jail, for intoxication, when he was in court Friday morning.

The following relative to W. Irving Bullard is from a Boston paper:

The annual financial canvass of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association went "over the top" yesterday at the seventh luncheon meeting of the workers who have been conducting the canvass, the total of subscriptions from the four main divisions amounting to $104,690, or $4000 over the minimum goal set.

The scene at the City club while the final reports were being made yesterday was almost a constant ovation for various leaders and workers in the canvass.

A tribute was paid to W. Irving Bullard, chairman of the canvassing organization, by the executive committee. In a speech warmly praising Mr. Bullard for his services, Arthur S. Johnson, president of the association, on behalf of the committee, presented Mr. Bullard a large silver loving cup, with a watch on top, and appropriately inscribed.

Mr. Johnson, president of the association for more than 25 years, also extended formal appreciation for the cooperation given the Y. M. C. A. While the minimum goal was reached, officials of the association emphasized the fact that money is still needed to carry forward the program of the association, and that there should be no let-up in subscriptions.

Friday morning the funeral of Henry Ouimette, 53, who died Tuesday, was held from his home on Dyer street, with a solemn high mass of requiem at St. James' church at 9 o'clock, Rev. Joseph Deschaud, M. S., Rev. Charles Kirby, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., being the officers of the mass. The body was placed in the vault at Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were Joseph Gingras, Alphonse Champagne, Alphonse Frasier, Joseph Giguere, Arsene Guimond and Alphonse Gauvin.

The funeral of Miss Sarah J. McManus was held from her home in Oneco Friday morning, with a requiem high mass of which Rev. Joseph E. McCarthy, of All Hallows church, Moosup, was celebrant at St. Joseph's Catholic church in Sterling. Burial was in All Hallows' cemetery. The bearers were J. E. McCarthy, John Ellis, Patrick Ellis, Frank Burton, William Fox, John Darby and John C. Day. Louis E. Kennedy was the funeral director.

At St. John's church in Plainfield, Friday morning a solemn high mass of requiem was sung at the funeral of Louis Jolicoeur, the celebrant being the pastor, Rev. B. F. Morrissey, with Rev. J. C. Mathieu of Wauregan deacon and Rev. Oscar Norman of Moosup sub-deacon. The bearers were Israel Jolicoeur, Kyzte Jolicoeur, William Bellevance, Fred Lavallee, Edmund Jolicoeur and John Wynn. The body was entombed at the Sacred Heart cemetery, in Wauregan. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Kennedy was elected president, to succeed herself, Mrs. Clara Nadeau vice president, Miss Katherine McCormack secretary and Miss Elisabeth Grennon treasurer. Mrs. Hugh Carragher was made chairman of the program and social committee. Other committee heads are to be named later. At the present time the club has a membership of 150. A campaign for new members is to be instituted soon. The council has a valentine party and a gentlemen's night scheduled for an early date.

PUTNAM

Filling station equipment at the Edmund Dubois property, corner of School and Providence street, will have to be removed so as to be wholly on the property of Mr. Dubois, according to a ruling of the state motor vehicle department. The communication relative to the affair has been received from the department by Corporation Counsel Charles L. Torrey. It will be recalled that there was prospect a few days ago of legal action between Mr. Dubois, a member of the common council, and the city, because Aldermen Dubois insisted the filling equipment was on his property, while the city held that it overlapped onto property owned by the city.

In the communication received by Attorney Torrey the motor vehicle department sets forth that when it investigated as to the property lines at the Dubois place, prior to the placing of the tanks, it representative was told "where the white fence is." After investigation, the department says, showed that the Dubois building was practically on the property line or within an inch or two thereof. The communication further states that it is the policy of the department to have all new tanks on private property, and in pursuit of that policy, will order that the Dubois property be removed so as to comply.

The decision of Judge Kellogg of the superior court in the case of A. W. Greene of Ohio vs. William S. Brown, of the town of Plainfield, has been upheld by the supreme court, it was made known Friday morning to attorneys in the case, which was argued at Hartford during the past month. The matter at issue had to do with the payment of two negotiable notes, that Mr. Brown gave Mr. Greene in connection with a transaction in which he purchased a herd of pure bred cattle from the Ohio man.

Mr. Brown contended that some of the cattle did not prove to be as represented, so declined to pay the notes and the suit followed.

Judge George E. Hinman will come here Monday for a special short calendar session such is usually held in the early part of February. A long list of matters is on the calendar, which was in the hands of the printers Friday. It was stated Friday that it is possible Judge Hinman may assign some cases on Monday and try them during the month.

Peter Lambert, one of two men who were burned to death in Eugene Sheedy's shack near Alexander's lake on Thursday night has lived in Putnam at various times during the course of the many years he has spent in territory hereabouts. As a general rule his work was in cotton mills, but he had been employed at times on farms, and is remembered as having been engaged in farm work at West Thompson some years ago.

Next Tuesday evening's meeting of Putnam lodge of Elks will be unique in that it has been arranged to have as many as possible of the 24 past exalted rulers of the lodge in attendance. Special honors will be shown them. It is planned by the present officers of the lodge that the past exalted rulers shall occupy the chairs. A degree will be conferred upon a class of candidates and there will be a social session following the work.

More gasoline has been sold in this territory this winter than in almost any winter season that can be recalled, it is claimed. Two or three chief reasons are offered in explanation of this —the low price at which gas has been selling, inducing more liberal buying, the open winter and the consequent increase in the number of cars in service because of snow and ice free highways. It is not claimed that the gasoline sales approach the volume reached in the summer months, but it has been surprisingly high for winter time, notwithstanding that industry is not booming as in other recent years.

A statement that a bonus would cost Windham county $2,652,000, has made a deep impression in all the towns hereabouts and the action that congress may take relative to the bonus is a subject of keen concern with a great many. While little open boosting for the bonus is heard in Putnam, it is known that there is some demand for it. And it is also evident that there is decided opposition to it. It has been a matter of very special interest that Congressman Richard P. Freeman of this district has declared himself opposed to the bonus, as is also the fact that Senator Frank B. Brandegee is in favor of it.

The February meeting of the Missionary society of the Congregational church is to be held Tuesday afternoon in the parlor of the church. Mrs. R. C. Jenkins will contribute to the program, while Mrs. C. D. Arnold and Mrs. Charles Franklin are to present a dialogue—"Depths and Shadows."

L. H. Fuller, who has been seriously ill and a patient for weeks at the Day Kimball hospital, is steadily gaining in strength and a few more weeks will restore him to normal condition, it is indicated. Mr. Fuller has been engaged in business in Putnam for more than half a century.

Numbers of changes in the location of offices of various professional men are forecasted, as the result of the completion of three new blocks, all having modern conveniences and appointments. A year ago there was a shortage of offices in Putnam, but the erection of three new buildings, all with second floors set apart for office quarters, will relieve that as well as causing something of an exodus of tenants from some of the older office quarters in the business section.

Tuesday evening brings the first meeting of the new common council since its organization in January, following the December election. There are various matters of routine business awaiting the attention of the city fathers and some new business awaiting their consideration.

Miss Agnes Young, teacher in the eighth grade, has recovered from an attack of scarlet fever and will be able to resume teaching Monday.

The body of Mrs. Carolyn Barnes, widow of Mowry Barnes, was brought from Oakland, R. I., for burial in East Putnam cemetery Thursday. Mrs. Barnes died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Roy Decatur.

John Leader of Attawaugan will be at Sarasota, Fla., where the New York Giants are to train, for the remainder of the winter. Mr. Leader went south in his automobile.

Hundreds of tons of ice for general use during the next spring and summer have been harvested this week by Putnam dealers, but the city's supply is not as yet safely housed.

Miss Edna Hall will have members of the Sunnyside club at her home for a meeting, Monday.

State vs. Ford. Attorney Davis said that he was not satisfied with the procedure in this case, especially as to constitutional questions involved, but said he would submit a statement of fact to town attorney and clerk of the district court. Judge Ferguson said the defendant would have to have a copy of the town ordinance in this case where Sabbath law is involved.

State vs. Bates. This was a case where Chief of Police Brown made charge against the defendant of having an assault on Jan. 1 with a pistol and arms on Margaret Vogelsang. The defendant had no lawyer and in answer to the complaint said, "She hit me first and pulled my hair." Judge Tuorso entered a plea of not guilty. Town Solicitor Torrey said that the services of Dr. F. Hoffman were needed to that prosecution could be had and for both hearings $200 was furnished the town court Friday.

Burdick vs Marian. In this suit Margaret Burdick sought to recover from Almeda Marian $100 for 60 days attendance as nurse and housekeeper for the defendant when she was allegedly ill March 19, 1922. Grasso vs Fiore. The plaintiff and Atanasio Grasso brought suit against Antonio Fiore, both Niles, for $91.11 for damages sustained by automobile collision on Dec. 14 at the junction of School street and Cliff ter avenue. Witnesses who testified for the plaintiff, represented by Attorney Ferguson were Patrolman George Champlin and auto repair man C. Henry Dennison and for the defendant, represented by John J. Gallagher, were Antonio Fiore, Mrs. Nelson and Richard Waters, passengers in the Fiore automobile. The Grasso automobile was coming down School street while the Fiore car with two passengers was proceeding along the left side of Chester avenue toward School street. There was a sewer excavation mound near the center of the highway, it was showing at the time and there was snow on the ground. Judge Turano rendered judgment for the plaintiff to recover $241.11 to which Attorney Gallagher took an appeal to the superior court. Court adjourned.

Don't Give Up

If you've tried and have not won,
Never stop for crying;
All that's great and good is done
Just by patient trying.

Though young birds in flying fall,
Still their wings grow stronger;
And the next time they can keep
Up a little longer.

Though the sturdy oak has known
Many a blast that bowed her,
She has risen again, and grown
Loftier and prouder.

If by easy work you beat
Who the more will prize you?
Gaining victory from defeat,
That's the test that tries you!

GREETINGS FROM SILENT PARTNER

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I think very often that I would like to write to the Corner if I could write anything interesting, but when one never goes outside the dooryard, there isn't much excitement, unless they make some cake like Mrs. Suss. I have a cactus, the name of which, I don't know, which has long leaves of various shapes and has grown from a small slip to a good sized plant; is five years old, and has never blossomed. Can anyone guess what can be the reason?

Whirlwind: Many thanks for the cheery Christmas card. I think I wasn't a very attractive Christmas present for my mother said I hardly had any hair till I was two years old, and then it was white. I think I'll be in the same condition again in a few years.

Mrs. Suss: I'm not sure but there are girls foolish enough to use green and purple paint if some one made them believe it was the fashion.

I read not long ago how many thousands of dollars were spent in the United States for rouge and powder. I have forgotten how much it was, but it seemed enormous, and it is a disgrace to America. We call this a free country, and girls, and sometimes their mothers too, are slaves to such a habit. But "old ones crow and young ones learn."

I know a mother and daughter who went into a drug store and the manager called their attention to something new in vanity cases. The daughter said: "We will look at them but mother and I have never had any powder on our faces," and the man looked his astonishment and said: "Two remarkable women!"

Thirty-Two: I have two of Stephen's books, When Life Was Young, and A Great Year of Our Lives, and they are well worth reading.

Sister Barbar: I well remember Prof. W. O. Turner. I went to church at Bean Hill where he led the singing and I believe played the organ. Yours for the Corner.

OUR LAST RIDE WITH THE "ONE HORSE SHAY"

Dear Corner Sisters: On a grey misty morning last October, Primrose and I decided to drive to the flower show in East Killingly. If it had not been our last chance to ride in the "One Horse Shay", I should have hesitated to drive so far on that kind of a day. On our way there we passed by the home of "Bee Tree" and admired her windows full of very handsome plants. We had heard that she was at Springfield fair, so did not stop to call on her.

We reached E. K. very early in the morning, long before the flowers had been arranged, or the famous clam chowder was ready. We found it hard to find a place for our horse and horses are out of style. At last, we found a shed as it looked like rain. In due time the flowers were ready for us to admire. They were very handsome and filled the church on all sides.

After we had some of the famous clam chowder, we took a walk to the little cemetery on the hill; which is very neat, and on high ground. We were sorry it was not a clear day for the view. We then took a look at our friend's bungalow. Sorry she was at the flower show so we could not call on her.

We went back to the church and had ice cream and cake and met a friend, also a Social Corner sister.

We started for home early because we wanted to call at Trudie Sweet's and I had twelve miles to drive. The days are short in October and I also had to drive along part of the way. That was our last ride with faithful old Dan as he was laid away for his long rest very soon after.

I hope 1492 will be glad to hear that we reached home after all these months of waiting to hear from us.

"LAST ROSE OF SUMMER"

THE VALUE OF TURPENTINE

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Here I am sending you a few ways turpentine can be used. Let any one who has an attack of lockjaw take a small quantity of turpentine, warm it and pour it on the wound, no matter where the wound is, and relief will follow in less than a minute. Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold turpentine, it will give certain relief almost instantly.

Turpentine is also a good remedy for croup. Saturate a piece of flannel with it and place the flannel on the throat and chest and in every case three or four drops on a lump of sugar, may be taken internally. This is one of the most valuable articles in a family, and once it has obtained a good foothold in a house, it is really a necessity and can ill be dispensed with. Its medicinal qualities are very numerous. For burns it is a quick application and gives immediate relief. For blisters on the hands it is of priceless value, searing down the skin and preventing soreness; for corns on the toes it is useful, and good for rheumatism and for sore throat, and it is the quickest remedy for convulsions or fits. It is a sure preventive against moths, by just dropping a trifle in the bottom of drawers, chests and cupboards, it will render garments, secure from injury during the summer. It will keep ants and bugs from closets and store rooms by putting a few drops in the corners and up on the shelves. It is sure destruction to bedbugs and will effectually drive them away from the haunts if thoroughly applied to the joints of the bedstead in the springtime of cleaning and injures neither furniture nor clothing. Its pungent odor is retained for a long time and no family ought to be entirely out of a supply at any time of the year.

I was glad to see more in the Corner about flowers. Wish Jane might let us know how her silent companions are getting on this winter; also if she can give us any information about the lost Donkey; if so, Joan, why so silent?

PUTNAMITES CALLED TO FRONT

Dear Members All: Our first month of 1924 is gone, and I wonder if you've all kept your good resolutions! The last two weeks sure did show that many of our writers had awakened.

Had the Lebanon club had an enjoyable time, but what about Putnam? Why don't you start 1924 right and hold meetings? With so much energy and talent you'd have a lot of pleasure. You surely could meet at each other's homes for a start. I've heard several members over in that section and Killingly, long to meet.

Pat Dixon, Flower Lover, Primrose, Last Rose of Summer, Loretta, Bee True, Viola, Twice Twenty, Mr. Twice Twenty, Marie, Anne D., Roberta, Thirty-Two, Rosalind, Mary Gusta and so I might continue the roll call. Bring them up who's who over there as you did at the lake last summer.

You see I've lived over most in vicinity and feel quite at home in Pomfret or Danielson, or Putnam. Oh, yes.

That reminds me, I saved a clipping to answer, but where is it? Think it was Sister Annette's.

I had an inspiration about two weeks before her letter appeared that it would be nice to have a sale of articles we make and help the treasury. Say a sale in May and November, of just small articles all would like to buy. I hope we can discuss it at our meeting soon.

Thirty-two: Guess again, Flower-Lover and I reamed together at college. Must write you and get our old chum, Bess's address. By the way, my 'phone just rang to notify me old Windham street school was burning. What a shame! That will be one of the landmarks missing in 1925, evidently.

Dewkist: Glad to see you again. Hope you feel better.

Agatha: Surprised? That's what they all said, but I wasn't. Sorry not to have seen you.

Think it's quite time that sisters knew Midget was the happy mother of a son last September.

Don't forget to buy a valentine for our February meeting and I'll tell you more of the plans on Feb. 9.

NEIGHBOR EVERYREADY.

SOME GOOD DON'TS

Dear Sisters: It is an old suggestion that children should not be fed up on too many "do nots", but it appears to me there should be a liberal supply for good digestion. However it's not the children that need all the "do nots", for each and all of us require constant reminders and then we fail. The Corner page would not be large enough to contain all the "don'ts" that might be used for our benefit, but it will do no harm to see a few in print. Don't exert too much haste, for it only brings waste. Don't be penny wise and pound foolish. Don't cross the bridge until it is built. Don't say "I can't," if it is reasonable until you have tried. Don't pass judgment, either favorable or unfavorable, by outward appearance. Don't suspect the stranger an enemy till there's cause for it. Don't speak once till you have thought twice. Don't disregard other people's feelings until you have put yourself in their place. Don't forget we all make mistakes, and can profit by them. Don't neglect your health, by carelessness, it's too expensive. Don't take the side of doubt, act on the side of safety. Don't ignore character when not combined with wealth or gold. Don't regret lost opportunities, there may be more ahead. (This is leap year). Don't waste desires on conditions that are impossible to obtain. Don't keep the pot of trouble boiling, let it settle and get cold. Don't forget that every cloud has its silver lining, though invisible at present. Last, but not least, don't put off until tomorrow, but write a letter to the Social Corner; if it can be done today. Don't delay.

JENNIE

CLUB NO. 2 MEETS FEB 6.

Dear Corner Sisters: True Blue and Cady are the hostesses for the February 6th dinner of Club No. 2 at the Buckingham. We will need several helpers, so those that are willing to assist please come early. And will those that promised to bring coffee please leave it at the Buckingham a day or two before hand? Then we will not be delayed in getting the dinner ready on time.

A word to those sending in letters. It is well to get them in to the editor no later than Wednesday night or by Thursday morning, if you expect to see them in print the following Saturday.

Yours for the Corner,

CADY.

ALWAYS BUSY WITH SOMETHING.

Dear Members of the Corner: Just a few lines this springlike morning. Was so glad to see so many letters last week. It shows what we can do if we only try. If only a few lines it all helps to fill up.

There was a mistake in the recipe I sent in last week for sponge cake. It should be one-half cup of hot water instead of one cup as it was printed.

I am very busy with different kinds of work; have made two bedquilts and started another, am crocheting a yoke and have a rug pretty well along. I like it hard more than one thing around to do and when I get the housework done I pick up the one I like to work on and another time some other one looks the best and in that way I get quite a lot done and take a lot of comfort working on the different things. I like to be busy with something. Of course I take time to read, especially the Norwich Bulletin, which is always full of good reading. Have had a very good winter most of the time, but wasn't it cold Saturday and Sunday? It made one feel that the sunny south would be nice for a while, but we can't all go. If we did what would become of good old Connecticut? Some of us must stay and do the work that someone has left undone. But it won't be long before the good old summer time will be here and birds will be singing, so let us cheer up and be contented. I think if we do we will find happiness.

RURAL AUNTY.

SOW KINDNESS IF WE WISH TO REAP IT.

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner: Well, it has been a little more like winter. It seemed so nice we didn't have to go to Florida the weather is so mild and not much snow. The cold only makes us poke up the fires more, pull up our fur collars more around our ears and hustle; makes us feel lively. I feel good in warm weather as well as cold. It doesn't make any difference with me. I love the summer, but try to see the good in all kinds of weather. And the same in our difficulties of problems; they could have been worse. Like the sister who had her cake run away it could have been worse, for if she had dropped it on the floor she would have lost it all. As it was she saved the part in the tin. Don't fret over spilt milk; be glad it was no worse.

I have heard of those whom folks were always glad to have come in. They always bring sunshine, a glad, cheery word or say something helpful, smooth out hard and troublesome places and leave the one visited with a smile and something good to think about. So many times a song cheers one up when things seem trying. I love to hear folks sing about their work. When mother sings much and smiles often how quickly it is taken up by the children, and others who come in the home. On a certain morning a clerk in a store did not wait on a customer at once being very busy. The customer spoke rather unkindly and how the face fell. I thought I wished I could say something to make her smile. How much better all would have been! If we sow kindness we will reap kindness and how much better to help spread smiles than shadows. We do not know the hard things others have to bear.

I wish to thank the Corner Member for the pretty calendar, too, for it is nice to be remembered each year. It means the thoughtfulness of some one and pleasure to the one receiving it.

L. H. K.: You see Cricket wasn't devoured. The spring bird't don't eat so much in the winter.

Cricket: How kind of you to write so soon. Look for a letter soon, as I am in the writing business this morning.

Jennie: That is good advice, a stitch in time saves nine times, nine many times, and farmers tools taken care of keep them from rust.

How many of the sisters are writing lately! The page is full and overflowing.

A merry heart doeth good and is better than medicine.

Best wishes to all the sisters,

SPRY BIRD

SUGGESTIONS BY CALLA LILY.

Social Corner Sisters: Don't forget Feb. 6 as our regular meeting day of Club No. 2. Those who promised butter and coffee kindly get them there a day or two before the 6th as the hostesses sometimes get extra and we have double the quantity needed. Ines and Pa will put them away for us at the Buckingham.

Kittie Lou: Can't you meet with us some time soon? Think you would enjoy it. I want to thank you for the bottle of Magic furniture polish you sent me. It surely is named right. Didn't our page look good Saturday?

Crimson Rambler: Got your card. Yes, we have a cosy back room at the store. My friends know where to find me Thursday. My son is a Lion tamer, so Thursday is his day out.

Olive: I'm going to ring your door bell some Sunday when we ride to Hartford. I call often on Priscilla. Have a niece on Bodwell street below you. Her husband is manager of a store on Main and Asylum street.

Delight: Glad to meet you on the street. Try to come to B. M. meeting of club.

Dom Pedro: That was an interesting calendar your private secretary sent me from you. Glad to get your cards on your health. Try and send a line to the Corner.

Sister Ready: Why so quiet? Are you with your aunt, Mrs. F? Can't you run up to the Corner meeting?

Rural Aunty: I tried to get the writers to add birthday dates when writing every time, as well as their pennames. It only worked for a short time. Why not try this way. Those who have a birthday in March write it with their penname in February. Then the April ones write it in March. Then those who wish can send postcards.

Fox Glove and Whirlwind: Was sorry I wasn't at the meeting when you visited Club No. 2. Come again and make yourself known to me.

Jerushy Spice: Was you up to E. H. to the 64th wedding anniversary Jan. 1st. Aren't they wonders for people of their age?

CALLA LILY.

SOME TESTED RECIPES

Dear Sisters: These are all tested recipes.

Quick Spice Cake: 2 tablespoons of soft lard or drippings, 1 1-2 cups of medium brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1 cup water, 1 3-4 cups of pastry flour, 2 teaspoons of baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-4 teaspoon cloves, 1 cup halved raisins.

Method—Put all ingredients in a bowl and beat thoroughly. Turn into a medium sized cake pan and bake in a moderate oven 45 minutes. Ice with brown sugar frosting.

Aunties' Cream Pies: This recipe is ninety years old. Make the paste for three pies, roll out and cover your plates, then roll out and cover again a second time, and bake, when baked and while warm, separate the edges with a knife, and lift the upper from the lower paste; fill with cream and put on the upper part.

The cream—Put on one pint of top milk to boil. Break two eggs into a dish, and add one cup sugar and half a cup flour; after beating well, stir into the milk just as it commences to boil—keep stirring one way until it thickens; use any flavor you prefer.

UNCLE SAM'S DAUGHTER

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: My interest in the Social Corner has increased from year to year and I would like to become a sister among you.

I was just reading a little poem by Phoebe Cary, entitled, Don't Give Up, so am sending it in.

I will take for my pen name

ZERVIAH.

FINE PREPARATION IN CASE OF BURNS

Dear Editor and Sisters: Thank you, editor, for mailing my card and letter.

Who said we weren't going to have ice for next summer? It was 8 below here this morning (Sunday.)

I didn't mean to write again so soon but I had a letter from my mother this week in which she tells of how Allings are going with her. First it seems my little nephew of three had just been in to show her he could throw his head again after a fracture in the back of his neck from a fall backwards down stairs. She was hurrying to get some cooking done for the men so she could leave for her mother's place for over night. Her mother lives in the next town. She had a kettle of doughnut fat on the fire and had just clarified it with potato when my sister came home and said she didn't see how she could look after things as her heart had bothered her badly for two days. Grandma was 90 this month and the 9th she is up and about by spells, she has other spells when she seems to be sinking rapidly.

Well, mother dipped her skimmer into the boiling fat and in her haste put it in her hand also. Now comes the part that may interest the sisters. She has a preparation on hand made of equal parts of linseed oil and limewater for burns and from the use of that finally found relief. I will vouch for that preparation myself. A few winters ago I took a kettle of boiling water out to the henhouse to thaw out the drinking dishes and accidentally turned it upside down onto my legs. The pain was such that I could not bear anyone in the roo mwhere I was.

I managed to finish getting breakfast which I had started before I went out by walking on the toes of the leg and foot mostly scalded. I suffered terribly about an hour and finally remembered this preparation of oil and limewater. I can't describe the relief. It seemed as though the burn was holding out hands to push the mixture away everytime I tried to apply it but I finally got some of it on and within ten minutes I was about again as though nothing had happened. I never intend to be without it for it is certainly wonderful how it relieves.

If any of you want to know of a fine polish for oak desks or mahogany finished bureaus, I'll recommend you to my young son. He went upstairs this afternoon and as he was unusually quiet I thought I'd better go up too. I found he had emptied a whole bottle of camphorated oil onto my bureau. I stayed to clean that up and sent him down. When I got down stairs again he was on his father's desk mixing himself up with a bottle of ink. I don't really know whether his clothes or the desk got the most benefit of the mixture—But what would we do without him?

DON'T WORRY.

HOW E. L. M. HULLS CORN

Dear Social Corner Members: As this is my first letter since New Year's I want to thank a Social Corner member for the lovely calendar, and it is nice to be remembered but the pleasure would be double if I only knew who sent it.

Thirty-two: I am going to try your recipe as I am very fond of cheese dishes.

Delight: I know how you will miss the trolley. I once had them and then I didn't.

Calla Lily: I was going to tell you to try camphor to remove the white stain. I used it with success but no doubt it was the alcohol that did the trick.

Dorinda: I would have liked to have attended the recent club meeting where you were one of the hostesses but I could only think about it.

Cactus Blossom: I too have canned pumpkin as you do. It is fine.

Roxanna Keables: How many times we see or hear the like of what you wrote and what a pit it is so many times it causes much trouble.

I am glad to see more recipes coming in as I like to try new ones. Now if anyone of you make sunshine sponge cake will you tell just how you mix it and how you have your oven. I have eaten it when it was delicious but mine is never like it.

I think it was Rural Aunty who told of hulling corn. In a few years I have been doing it a different way and have had fine luck. Take two level tablespoons of Babbits potash to two quarters of corn and cover well with water. After it begins to boil, boil for thirty minutes, have plenty of water and stir occasionally so it won't stick. Then I wash it in several waters until the hulls are removed, rubbing well between the hands. Then put in a kettle with clear cold water and boil slowly until white and tender. I always supposed you had to cook it all at once but have learned that after you have the hulls removed you can set part of it away and keep it two weeks and boil a little as you wish. In boiling it the last time I put in a pan that is broad rather than a deep one, use plenty of water and while cooking keep pan on an asbestos mat. Hope some one will try it and report. Will send Connecticut Sue a recipe next time.

April Flower 1880: I am an 1880 flower, too.

BEAUTIFUL WEATHER IN THE NORTH

Dear Corner Members: It is a long time since I wrote to the Social Corner. Have been a visitor at the meetings many times since I wrote a letter, but I have no reasonable excuse, only I did not put force enough to move in that direction. No. Wurdy Belle, I hope to come to the Social Corner meetings many times before I weed my onion bed or plant my cucumbers. We have had such a pleasant winter that it really seems short, and dont it seem nice to have the days growing longer? Am pleased when I look at the Corner letter to see so many new writers. Every week I look for Freda Wards letter, but I look in vain. What has become of her? She can't have gone south, for surely no one needs to go south with such a comfortable winter as we are having in the north. Am watching her village home every day and counting the months when I will seen the screen door hung and the pansies in bloom in her yard. Hope she has not had a fall and fractured her ribs the same as Mr. of Greene Gables. Was very, very sorry to hear of that accident. Spring will soon be upon us, as I hear Lebanon people are using pussy willows for decorations and Mr. Isadore has heard the blue birds. I have been trying Mittie's recipe for making popcorn balls. They are fine, only they don't last long.

Jerushy Spice: Did you go to church last Sunday? I did not. It was so cold I stayed in the Corner. Hope to see Delight at the next meeting. Have not seen her for a long long time. I wonder how many of the sisters lost their plants by the cold were the first of the week. I have an oleander in full bud just ready to bloom, which I think is unusual for this time of year. Best wishes to you all, hoping to see you all and Blue Bird too, at the next meeting. Hope to be able to help at the next meeting.

COMFORT.

SUFFERING FROM A BROKEN RIB

Dear Corner Sisters: I'm in a little trouble same as usual. I am having to keep rather quiet, but can use my hand to write. I have been suffering from a broken rib. While it might have been worse it is bad enough. I didn't realize what it was and let it go ten days before having any help, but I suppose I might have not known what it happened. Now you will understand so if you might be well have a chance to letter. One day I had a load of supplies come to me the Ore man, a great big fellow, jumped out saying, "Hello, Ma," put his arms around me and gave such a hug that a sad pain but never thought much about it at the time. But it grew worse and at last we investigated a broken rib. Now isn't it awful to have such a thing happen to poor Ma. But I am doing fairly well and will soon be strong and well again, I hope.

Poor Bug, she has had her hands too. She has been unfortunate in breaking some of her dishes. The Woman's club was to send her to Washington as a delegate but then she has had to give that up, but if we both get mended up good and sound we will try and get to the Buckingham the first Wednesday in February.

Some one said for me to get my mending done so I could write. It is all done, stockings and all, but I did not have many this time.

Right now I wish to give thanks for the pretty calendar received. Who ever sent them let keeps herself in the shade for no one seems to know who he is. But thank you any way. Well, it's almost time for Blue Bird to sing. Hope she'll tune up pretty soon. Don't dance too much Blue Bird or you'll surely be sick.

Once in a while Busy Bee Flies Air riding out getting some "fresh air" and once in a while I hear a word from Nicie. Get your paper and write a line to the Corner sisters. Don't let them forget the Plainfield Cornerites. I am sending a recipe for rolls, we think they are fine.

Rolls: Four cups milk, scald and when hot pour over 4 tablespoons of butter, one of salt, 5 tablespoons sugar, when luke warm add two yeast cakes, mix a stiff batter of Pillsbury flour, set in a warm place to rise, which will be in a couple of hours. Turn out on board with plenty of flour, do not knead hardly any, only just to get it so you can handle it. Roll out best you can, cut off in pieces big enough for biscuits, place in pan, let rise till light and bake quickly. They are delicious. The secret is not to handle the dough much. Try out and report sisters.

Will close hoping all the sick ones are better and with sympathy for all those who have had sorrows to bear. I remain as ever

MA OF GREENE GABLES

RUG MAKING—PRUNE CAKE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It is quite a long while since I have written to you, but here goes for a little chat. First of all I want to thank Whirlwind for the pretty birthday card she sent me. It is the first card I have received from the Social Corner sisters, and I appreciate it very much to have one of the sisters remember me on my birthday. I hope I will see the date of your birthday also, Whirlwind.

Well, sisters, I must tell you that I have been making a rug this month of January. I have quite it in two weeks. A little off and on all out of woolen rags. I finished it last week and this week I want to start another one, braided with five strands.

I wonder if any of the sisters enjoy making rugs. I just like to make them. Last week I had company from my old home town, Mrs. Lapp. Sisters, what it means to have one of your girlhood friends come to visit you and have a good chat. That is what we had, a good time for a day.

I wonder if any of the sisters ever tried to make a prune cake. I have never seen any recipe in the paper.

Prune Cake: One egg, 1 heaping cup of sugar, one third cup of shortening, 1 cup milk, 2½ cups flour, 2½ teaspoons of baking powder, ½ teaspoon of salt, teaspoon of cinnamon and one cup of prunes. Soak and stone the prunes the same as you would for pies, then cut in pieces and roll them in flour, before you add to the dough. This is very good with whipped cream.

A happy New Year to all.

ROSY POSY.

BRAN MUFFINS

Social Corner Sisters: If I had written the Corner as many times as I have thought of it there would have been a good many letters.

I enjoy reading the letters and wish I could write some as interesting.

What a beautiful winter we have had so far, but my! it is cold now—real zero weather. I have tried several of the Social Corner recipes and like them.

I am sending my recipe for bran muffins. I have used it for a long time.

Bran Muffins: Two cups Post's bran, one cup white or graham flour, two tablespoons molasses, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon baking powder, salt, mix with sweet or sour milk very soft. Bake in hot oven.

I hope someone will try them and will like them.

With good wishes for the Corner.

FRANCES ADEL.

OBSERVERS ANNIVERSARY BY WRITING

Dear Editor and Sisters: This letter is to celebrate the first anniversary of my joining the Corner. It was a year ago that I wrote my first letter. I only regret that I didn't write long ago. I have read the letters for a long time, but just think what I missed by not going to the meetings and getting acquainted with all the good people!

Balsam Fir: Many thanks for the card. I was much pleased to think one so far away remembered me.

Hope Primrose and Last Rose of Summer can call when the traveling is better. Why not come in the Jarrett which Primrose rode and taken the place of the one horse shay?

Wasn't it good to see our page rover flowed this week? (Keep on. Maybe the editor will give us two pages if we need it.

Sorry to know Amy is sick. Hope she will improve rapidly.

Best wishes to all.

NEIGHBOR EVERREADY'S SISTER.

RESOLUTION REGARDING YELLOW RIBBON

Dear Social Corner Family: It won't be long before another Corner anniversary comes around and I as a veteran writer look back with pleasure on our progress. I am going to wear my yellow ribbon hereafter, when out anywhere and see how many take notice. I tried the cold water cake by Malvina and it was good.

I sent Crimson Rambler a card Christmas. Guess she got it as I am included in the invite, (thanks), Joan, March 21st.

Sister Jemie: You are wise to the gossips. Too true but how sad, like the foolish virgins. No one escapes the serpent tongue. Bad wishes like chickens come home to roost.

Yours till the ink fades.

J. M. T.

WHO KNOWS?

Dear Editor and Members of the Social Corner: I am writing to ask if any of the members know the verses which begin with this:

Two travelers of conceited cast
As o'er Arabia's wilds they passed

Now talked of this and then of that
Of the Camelion form and nature.

The verses were printed in a school reader 60 years ago. If some one knows the verses will they send them to the Editor of the Social Corner for publication? With thanks.

CROSSED SHOES CURE CRAMPS

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Brothers: Am I too late for a New Year's letter? Well I haven't written a letter for such a long time I hardly know how. I presume I am almost forgotten but hope not entirely. I do truly feel like an entire stranger. There are so many new sisters to become acquainted with. We are a large family of Social Corner sisters and brothers. I wonder how many there really are. Does anybody know? I have been a member eight or nine years. At that time I think we only numbered about fifty. It is surprising how we have grown.

A short time ago two Social Corner sisters called on my next door Social Corner neighbor. I surely expected a little social visit from them. They would only have had to walk a few steps through the yard to my back door, but they did not come and I was awfully disappointed. I guess they had gotten their good resolutions. I haven't been to a meeting since my mother died which is over a year ago, but hope to attend our anniversary meeting which is soon.

Would some of the sisters like a simple remedy for cramps? My mother suffered greatly at night with cramps in her feet and ankles. Some one told her that if she would cross her shoes when she took them off at night she would have no more trouble. My mother tried it and we all laughed whenever we saw her crossed shoes, although she assured us that the cramps had departed. Some time afterwards while away from home I was suddenly seized in the night with a violent cramp in my right foot. I tried everything quietly so as not to disturb the family. Suddenly I thought of crossing my shoes which stood near. I crossed them and the cramp magically disappeared. Since then I always cross my shoes like mother did.

Our mothers all have lots of simple little old fashion remedies which sometimes are more helpful than a doctor's prescription.

I had a birthday a while ago and I want to thank the dear sisters that remembered me so kindly and I also want to thank those that remembered me on Christmas. I wish the Social Corner sisters and brothers a happy and prosperous New Year.

Delight and Marigold: I hope to see you both at our anniversary meeting.

Joan says write or you will lose your name and be forgotten, and I guess he knows, and so does yours truly.

NEEDLEWORK BOOK SUGGESTED

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: After a long silence I will try and do my bit toward filling up the Corner page. I very much enjoy reading the letters each week.

I think it was Mayfare who suggested having a sale of fancy articles at one of the Social Corner gatherings as a means of adding money to the treasury. I would like to suggest another way of making a little money for the corner, and that is to have a Social Corner Needlework Book printed. A great many of the sisters are very much interested in tatting, knitting, crocheting and all other kinds of needlework, and I think we recently had a request for bedquilt patterns. If each of the Social Corner sisters would contribute directions for making a few of their favorite laces or other articles of plain or fancy needlework, with the name of the contributor printed after the directions, I am sure we would have enough patterns to make a large sized book and one that would be appreciated by many of the sisters.

A large number of books could be sold if each sister should buy a book for herself and sell some to her friends. Would like to hear what some of the other sisters think of this idea.

As it is still January I do not think it is too late to wish you all a happy and prosperous New Year.

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP

Members of the Social Corner: So many complain of not having good luck with cream of tomato soup, I wish you would try my way.

First, I make a creamy sauce—the white sauce is made with 1 tablespoon each of butter and flour to each cup of milk. Prepare in a double boiler. I put 2 tablespoons of butter then gradually add two tablespoons of flour, stirring constantly. When perfectly smooth add 2 cups of milk, little at a time, mixing thoroughly. When the milk has cooked about ten minutes add one fourth spoon of salt and about one eighth spoon each of pepper and paprika. Then I move the white sauce to the back of the stove, keep the cover on and let the steam cook it until it is done.

Now I take a sauce pan and use 2 cups of canned tomato (get a good brand) one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon of pepper, one or two slices of onion (cut thin), 1-2 teaspoon of dried celery. Simmer gently for 10 to 15 minutes move from the stove and strain through a sieve.

Place two tablespoons of melted butter in a sauce pan and gradually add the tomato purie a little at a time, stirring it all the time. Cook until it thickens; then add one-eighth teaspoon of baking soda and beat up well at this point. Add the tomato sauce to the white sauce a little at a time, stirring the tomato sauce thoroughly into the white sauce. Heat this soup up well and serve hot.

WATCHING OPPORTUNITY TO "TUNE IN"

Dear Social Corner Editor: I extend sincere thanks for the little desk calendar.

I am somewhat in arrears in my obligations to the Social Corner as I have not written anything since last winter. I am like "Jo" in "Little Women." I have to have a scribbling fit. Then again I imagine the new writers are strangers to me and I cannot write little personal letters. They sound forced. When I can "tune in" and get good results I will send a line to the Corner. Until then with best wishes for the new year, I am a loyal member of the Social Corner.

ENID.

AIDS FOR CONNECTICUT SUE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I read Connecticut Sue's request and thought while I happened to know a little about asthma and T. B. would send this right in.

To steep Mullein leaves take about three tablespoons of Mullein leaves powdered to one pint of water. Steep on back of stove all the afternoon.

I never have made tea but once and that was for whooping cough. But it could be used for tea with good results. Take four times daily, ½ cup.

I have used it for injection and, simmered in benzalated lard it cures the piles.

For T. B. a friend of mine used the expressed juice of hoarhound (the herb) and mixed it with a half pint of new milk. She drank it every morning; and it worked wonders because she persevered in it.

Frequent washing—bringing the blood to the surface by rubbing—was another one of her helps.

For an asthmatic cough the syrup of squills in small doses is good. If there is not too much a simple remedy. (Everything tea is excellent.) The yolk of one egg about, 5 tablespoons of granulated sugar, 1 tablespoons of honey stirred to a cream and then when you have a bad cough beat one drop of milk and pour on it and drink it hot.

The following is a good recipe. Two tablespoons molasses, one teaspoon each camphor, castor oil and paregoric. These should be shaken until thoroughly blended. This is certainly grand, to take when you feel the asthmatic cough coming on.

Another remedy is to pour 1 pint of molasses over a turnip (hollowed). Let it stand fifteen minutes, then take the syrup, squeeze the turnip and take it warm.

Another recipe we have used in our family calls for 5 ounces honey, 4 ounces molasses, 7 ounces vinegar. Mix and simmer over the fire fifteen minutes; then remove from the fire and add 2 drachms of wine of opium. Dose, tablespoonful every 2 hours.

These are all old fashioned recipes about 90 years old. My great grandmother used them.

Here is an excellent plain cake and also I use this recipe for tea cakes. Plain cake: One cup sugar, beaten to a piece of butter size of walnut, 3-4 cup milk, 1 3-4 cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons of baking powder 1 or 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cream tartar.

Cream butter and sugar until it is well blended. Add milk, flour, baking powder, salt and lastly add well beaten egg. Stir well.

Flour should always be dry and well sifted for this cake.

Another Plain Cake: One cup sugar, 1-2 cup milk, piece butter size of an egg, 2 eggs, one and one half cups a pinch of salt.

Cream butter, add sugar, yolks of eggs, then milk, stir altogether thoroughly, then add flour and last add the whites of eggs beaten very light. Bake as layer cake or loaf.

Calla Lily: I will send you something that will remove white stains from furniture the next time it comes over.

A GOAL FOR 1924

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: I wish you one and all a happy New Year.

Happiness comes from doing our best, so let us press on to the end of the year trying to do our best and to bring happiness to others.

Many have said I am making no New Year resolutions; I should not keep them if I did, so what's the use. Others will make them and keep them a short time, while still others will make them and like their fellow men will break them but many of them will continue to make a few more. One does not have to wait until New Year's to make them. Any one can make them as often as we break them and rise above the broken and unkept ones as we do above troubles, sorrows and difficulties by just pressing on and on. We will feel at times disappointed when undertakings don't work out as we intended, or we are misjudged; but let us let courage and faith point out the way to persevere and proceed and keep our contact with ourselves to do the best we can not only for ourselves but for others. We cannot expect a bright, glad and prosperous New Year if we are unwilling to do our very best to make it so.

We can lend a hand every opportunity offers. We can be bright and cheerful and endeavor to make others so, even when surrounded by troubles and difficulties, and to speak kindly and softly when we feel like saying otherwise. If we do this each day, the days throughout the year would be joyous and happy. We do not all have the same obstacles and difficulties to overcome, but in order to win and make the other a happy one, not alone for ourselves, but for others, we must try to do our best throughout the whole year to press on, to go forward regardless of obstacles.

We do not all have the means to help others or to do as we would like, but let us give a helping hand in various ways when ever we can, to give kind words and smiles all along the way.

We must let our hearts be filled with love. We must look for the faults and seek the good traits for it has been said that everyone possesses good qualities if we will only search and find them. So let us do this during 1924, and, I believe we will find happiness in so doing and pass a happy year.

I wish to thank the Corner member for my calendar.

I also wish to thank each of you who remembered me. If I do not mention all I thank them just the same. Theododea, Huldy, Aunt Mehitta, Variety No. 1, Peggy Anne, Olga, Social Corner Member, Practical Polly and White Clover for their Christmas greeting card or gift.

I want each Corner member to feel to know that I think of them very often.

Best Wishes,

DIANA.

WHEN PUTTING RODS THROUGH CURTAINS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I am not a member, but a reader of the Social Corner page. Saw one of the sisters advised using a piece of chalk and a thimble on the end of a curtain rod when putting up freshly ironed curtains so must tell you my way which is original.

When the curtain is ready for the rod take a silver table knife, insert the handle in the hem, hold up the curtain and the weight of the knife will carry it through. Then the rod will slide in easily. Try this the next time you do your curtains.

Best wishes for the Corner.

ENTHUSED BY INTERESTING LETTERS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I must write again, if only a few lines to help keep our page full, there were so many interesting letters last week. I see Agatha has written, and about time, I think.

Nightingale: I'm sure I would be glad to see you with Midget and I think I know who you are, but not quite sure. Didn't you recognize same time Midget did?

Aren't we having lovely weather. It is just like spring here today. Best wishes to the Corner.

KEEPING BUSY WINTER EVENINGS.

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: This makes my second letter to the Corner this year. I can't promise to keep it up at this rate, but letters have so interested me lately I thought I would like to have grandmothers and elderly ladies tell us how they spelled these long winter evenings. Besides sewing, reading and writing letters, I have finished two braided rugs, one nine strands and one with seven, cut out and pieced patchwork blocks for pickup work and am making scrapbooks. Also through the year I cut pieces from papers and magazines and save them for winter evenings to paste them in books. I have one book full of

SOCIAL CORNER

Well, from The Bulletin Social Corner page—poetry and letters—which is more interesting than any autograph album, for it not only gives the author's pen names but reveals something of their individuality. Among them are several letters of these who have dropped on. One letter from our editor is especially interesting, as it explains what the Social Corner stands for and how to make it interesting and helpful to the family and the home. It was written last March for the thirteenth anniversary and would do much good to be used once every year. I have also a smaller book for recipes and household hints. I don't know whether these books will interest anyone after I am gone, but they interest me and I like to read them sometimes.

Brushy Spice: I was about to call you up through the Corner to see if you were waiting for a big snow storm for inspiration when I saw your letter.

Rural Delivery: I saw the skunk on the Social Corner page and wondered why there were so few letters but did not see the joke until I read your letter closer.

Twice Twenty: What you gave your husband for butter reminded me of what I once gave mine for a cough but I will tell that another time.

Olive: We missed you at our last meeting. Hope you will try to be here the next time.

Do you ever stop to think what a numerous family we are, scattered all over eastern Connecticut? I never had so many friends in all my life until since I joined the Corner five years ago.

Best wishes to the editor and all the sisters and brothers, if there are any.

LITTLE SISTER.

SUGGESTS SHOWER FOR KATHERINE

Dear Social Corner: Just a line to say thank you for the pretty calendar from Social Corner Member. How nice to be remembered every year!

I want to tell the Social Corner members that "Katherine" is ill at St. Joseph's hospital and cards addressed there to Mrs. Lillian C. Loomis will reach her all right.

Let's give her a shower.

Hope the members will remember that the next meeting of Club No. 1 is Donation day.

Was glad to see such a full page in the Social Corner last Saturday, even if it does do my bit very often.

Best wishes and a happy New Year to all.

HUMAN HEART NEVER SATISFIED.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I have been thinking of writing for some time, but as some of the sisters know, was quite sick for a time, then lately have been quite busy trying to get things back in order again.

I wonder if any of the sisters ever get tired of doing housework, the same monotonous tasks to do over and over each day. Before I was sick I often used to wish that I could have just one day with nothing to do. Thought if often I had cooked a meal, if I could only sit down to the table and eat, and not have any of the after-cleaning to do, if I could just only sit and rest my tired aching feet, how perfectly satisfied I would be. Then when I was sick, I had to rest, but after a few days found myself wishing I could just manage to and work again.

After all it is the same old story, the human heart is never satisfied We are ever hoping and longing, trying to grasp and reach hold of some things far beyond our reach, and yet how thankful each and everyone of us ought to be for our health and strength. I feel so thankful that I am able to be up and doing my work again, and is it not our duty to be happy and contented in the place where God has put us and just do our very best with what ever task He has given us, no matter how obscure or humble it may be?

The words in the Psalm of Life, that poem by Henry W. Longfellow, come to me at this time.

"Tell me not in mournful numbers,
"Life is but an empty dream!"
For the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem.

Not enjoyment and not sorrow,
Is our destined end or way;
But to act that each tomorrow,
Find us farther than today.

Le us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.

I would like to pass on a very good recipe for cooking pork chops. I have tested it and found it to be very good. Some of you sisters try this when you are tired of frying them the old way.

Pork Chops with Dressing: Six pork chops, one-half onion chopped fine, one and one-half cups bread crumbs, one-sixth teaspoon pepper, three-fourths teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter, one-fourth cup hot water, one beaten egg. Mix bread crumbs, butter, seasonings, water and eggs spread over pork chops. Put chops in pan close together, add a little water to cover bottom of pan, and bake in a moderately hot oven one hour, basting occasionally.

Hoping to see you all at our next monthly gathering, and wishing the editor and all the best of success, I am as ever,

BLUE BELL.

HOW TO MAKE MULLEIN TEA.

Dear Social Corner Editor: Seeing a request from Connecticut Sue for a way to use mullein leaves, I thought I would answer it. I have an herb book which gives the names of all kinds of herbs and what they are used for.

Mullein leaves are used for coughs and are smoked for asthma. It is also one of the best herbs when steeped and used as a tea for making new blood. It can be steeped by putting a pint of water in other than a tin vessel, add half an ounce of the leaves and let them steep slowly on the back of the stove. Keep it covered and do not let it boil. Let steep from three to four hours. Drink a wineglass full three times a day.

Will use my old name when Corner was first started.

RESOLUTIONS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: How many will keep the resolutions that we made! We can all try. That is the best we can do. You know in these days so many of our thoughts are taken up and we think there is plenty of time for all things that we let them slip before we know it. I like to read the sisters' letters. What a nice letter Calla Lily had the last time she wrote!

Primrose's loaf cake is fine. I try a great many of the sisters' recipes. They are always good. I hope all of the sisters that are sick are on the road to recovery.

Wishing all a prosperous New Year.

WINDHAM BLUE BELL.

THE GEORGIA PLANTATION RUG

Dear Corner Sisters: Get your doll rags, as the children say, and let's make a rug. This rug I speak of is called a "Georgia plantation rug." Any material, the veriest scraps, can be used. To arrange an attractive design each color can be kept together though the basket may obtain all shades of that color.

The material is cut in strips, preferably on the bias about an inch wide and the strips may be utilized in any length from an inch to several yards, without sewing them together. You may take an old skirt and cut it round and round with good sheers without wasting a bit of it. With a stout needle and strong waxed thread proceed to gather the strips through the center until these "strings" are about a yard long. Then the thread is securely fastened. After the cloth is tightly gathered the material is twisted to twirl the gathers on the string so that the edge of the gathered cloth stands out on every side to form the pile of the rug. If gathered loosely it is softer.

You can coil these strings in a big oval and sew them to each other, thus making a thick reversible rug, or you can sew them to a rectangular foundation—and have the colors disposed in masses. The "strings" for the border you can "gather" of bit and bit colors, set off by a row of black, and the effect is quite pleasing. The predominating color could be a rich peacock blue, furnished by some kind of discarded clothing. However, if the desired shade is not at hand, do not hesitate to resort to the dye pot. There are in reality only three colors—red, blue and yellow; with touches of white or accents of black these primary colors will give beautiful effects. There are two old fashioned plain dyes that have the merits of fastness and cheapness. They are the indigo and walnut. The former will give you all the shades of blue, and the latter will give you glorious browns, golden, greenish and green, when used in conjunction with indigo. A rug in blues, browns, golden, greenish and green would harmonize in a living room or dining room.

By steeping the bark of the walnut tree or the hulls in water until very dark you obtain the dye. If used when green the color will be yellowish brown.

When plants do not thrive bury a small piece of beefsteak close to the roots—or lay a piece of potato on the surface of the earth in the pot near the roots. If there are worms in the pot they will come to the meat or potato to eat and thus be removed.

If your ferns are not doing well give them weak coffee twice a week. Take what is left from breakfast, and an equal quantity of warm water and pour around the roots while warm.

ETHELYN.

SUGGESTS MORE DISCUSSIONS.

Dear Social Corner Editor: I am sure you will have to enlarge your paper if so many sisters write as many nice letters as last week. I have just finished reading them and must pronounce them all good. It is so pleasant to think we are such a large family and are helping and entertaining not only each other but so many outside the Corner.

I am pleased to hear from those who have gone to Florida and wish I might have been there through the cold snap.

Now we have become good cooks as so many can testify who attend the gatherings, why not devote a little space to discussion of public questions, the immigration problem, the enforcement of prohibition? I heard a man say this last week he wished it could have transpired 25 years ago; he would have had a good home now only for drink. If it is hard to enforce the prohibition law, but right will prevail in time, and I think we shall be a temperate nation, as well as a prosperous one.

The young people are being educated to save, which is most commendable for money is most desirable. Poverty is next to illness the hardest thing in the world to endure, and in this glorious country of ours, there is little need of poverty. The young should be taught the value of money by earning it and if it is earned a little hard, so much the better. They know how they got it and will be more apt to save it.

It is rather late for me to thank some one for the pretty calendar but it was justly appreciated. Will write again when Twice Twenty gets after me.

INSPIRED BY THE MANY LETTERS

Dear Sisters of the Corner: Am going to have a chat with you this lovely morning before I start the duties of the day. What a nice winter we are having! This morning it is grand. One wishes she might stay out of doors for awhile. One sister remarked that the weather was more talked about than any other topic. I cannot agree with her wholly; especially in a small town or village. I hope none of you will think I am writing too often. I was much pleased to see the page so completly filled. It seemed to be an inspiration to me to write and help the good work go on.

Bumblebee: When are you? Hope you will write soon. We certainly had a fine time at Club No. 1 although the road was rough and weary. Yet our hearts kept bright and cheery.

Sally Sycamore: Glad to hear from you.

May, B.: I often think of that day and hope we shall meet again soon.

Esmeralda: Glad you and yours attended the reception.

Olga: You have a fine residence, didn't dare to call. Am sending a good recipe.

Mix a mile of smiles with a bushel of good wishes. Throw in a barrel of sincere friendliness, add a score of hand shakes, fill the remaining space with good deeds, pack each ingredient with warm Christian love, stir well with prayer. Serve in large quantities to every one you meet. Let us all try it.

Yours for the success of the Corner.

Dear Editor of the Social Corner: Reading the letters of sisters in The Bulletin I find I have many friends in the Social Corner and would like to join. Will take for my pen name

GLAD TO SEE CLUB No. 3 ACTIVE

Dear Social Corner Friends: Big thanks to the member who sent a dainty little calendar. I keep them all and enjoy looking them over.

Annette: I was glad to see your letter. Never shall forget the party at your pleasant home and our place cards—and "the big watermelon that hung in the well."

Whirlwind: Do you possess the quality expressed in your name? I was very glad you wrote and gave us the real name of Old Timer as I had met her, but did not know she was a Corner member.

Am very glad that Club No. 3 has woke up. Was wondering why they did not have meetings. It has not been my good luck to attend one of them yet, but I live in hopes.

We certainly are having lovely winter weather, and I can't understand why so many go to Florida. I am one with Dorinda. I know I should be homesick down there. We have all heard of the roving Yankee.

Crimson Rambler: Never mind if they have taken off the trolleys. I'm still able to walk.

Winnie: Your recipe for soft gingerbread is like mine except I dissolve the soda in two teaspoons of vinegar and measure my flour—two and one-half cups of flour.

Cricket: Your letter of bygone days brings to mind a neighbor we had when I was a little girl (a Mrs. Stanton). She made cheese and many are the times she gave me some of the curd to eat. Cottage cheese comes as near to it as anything we have these days if a good quantity of sweet cream as added.

Flower Lover: I, too, am a flower lover; it is one of my hobbies. They are a comfort to one who loves them.

Rhody Louise: Come to the Buckingham to our meetings and then find out "who is who." Perhaps we are old acquaintances.

To all who are sick and shut in I extend my sympathy. If one feels well the very act of living is in itself true enjoyment.

Best wishes to all.

CREAM PIE AND PLAIN CAKE RECIPES

Dear Friends of the Social Corner: Have been thinking today I would write a few lines and tell you what a pleasure I have found a fountain pen to be. Was thinking how nice they were, for elderly people to use if one's hand is weak. One can manage a fountain pen better than the pen which has to be dipped into bottle or ink well. Since I was ill my hand has been weak and I could not write with a pen, though I did use a pencil, but at Christmas I received a fountain pen and find I can write very easily with that. Do not know what it is that makes the difference whether it is the pen-point or the holder. Anyway I can write with it, but now comes the part which isn't so pleasant. As I was preparing to write this letter and was standing near the table where I would sit to write I took the cap off of my pen, and how the ink did fly. My pen is a self filler and I have proved it to be a spatterer also. Have not had that happen before but I guess by the time I get those ink spots out of my table cloth I will know more about a fountain pen than I did before. I was glad to see so many nice letters last Saturday and it's quite like old times to see the recipes once again. I always use Kitty Lou's pie crust made with milk, also. True Blue's fudge sauce. Will send my recipe for cream pie and plain cake, which some one may like. I do enjoy reading about the trips the sisters have taken. I went for a nice ride last month and had what my son calls a "short ride". We drove one hundred and four miles. We went to Woonsocket, R. I., and as I had never been there before found it all very interesting and enjoyed every moment of the ride. Its the first ride I have had since last September and it did seem good to get out again. As I have been a shut-in for more than two years, the only enjoyment I have is when I can go out in the auto. Sometimes when I have an invitation to go, I am not able to get from my door to the street, then I must stay at home until I have another chance to go.

Cream Pie: Have your crust ready baked. When I make pie I bake an extra crust, then during the week if I want cream pie it's half done. Cook in double boiler, 1 large cup milk, dissolve in a bit of water a heaping tablespoon corn starch, add to milk let cook two or three minutes, take 2 tablespoons of sugar and yolks of 2 eggs, pinch of salt, beat together, then add to milk in double boiler. Let cook until thick enough; then add teaspoon butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla, beat and pour into crust. Sometimes it is lumpy when cooked (depends on corn starch used) but as it cools it comes smooth. Take whites of the eggs, beat stiff, add 2 tablespoons granulated sugar, few drops vanilla, pour over sugar, set in oven to brown.

Florence's Plain Cake: 1 cup sugar, pinch salt, teaspoon vanilla, 2 eggs, beaten, 1 cup flour, with teaspoon baking powder. Mix all together, then add 1-3 cup milk, with tablespoon of butter (or lard) which has just come to boiling point, beat the batter three minutes and bake. Sometimes one needs to use more flour, the recipe calls for, though if the batter is thin it is all right. When I make this cake I put the milk and shortening on the stove. When I begin to mix the cake, then it's ready when I want it.

Hope the Sisters will have good luck with both recipes

FAVORITE SUBJECTS FOR PICTURES

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: This year I received another calendar from a Social Corner member. It has a picture of sheep, my favorite subjects for a picture. Thank you for remembering me.

BETSY TROTWOOD

ENJOYING THE BEAUTIES OF THE WOODS.

Dear Social Corner Members: Well, I was pleased to see the page so well filled last week. Primrose sure did herself proud by getting so many letters from Club No. 4.

Student: Just after getting your request for help, I needed some myself. One of my best begonias, the pond lily, one of the largest, suddenly began to wilt and drop leaves just as yours did. I knew what the trouble was so I went at it. I put some sulphur in the top of the dirt and poured quite warm water down through. The next day leaves wilted just the same. Next I put lime (land) on top and watered. Now both these things are splendid for little white worms, that is what I thought the trouble to be. As neither took effect I spread some newspapers on the table in the kitchen, dumped the plant out and began to look through the soil. I found two large angle worms and about 14 or 15 small ones. No wonder the poor plant wilted! You know the angle worms feed on the tiny new white roots of a plant, suck the juices out of the roots and of course the plant soon wilts and dies. I had some soil in the cellar so threw the old out, and I did enjoy throwing out those horrid things that were trying to destroy my beautiful begonia. So if you follow the same course I think you will rescue yours. Look on top of the pot and perhaps you will see tiny little curls of dirt in files as though forced through a small tube. That is a sure indication of angle worms. Fish worms my hubby calls them. Wish you luck. My ferns are too near the steam radiators. Therefore they are turning yellow here and there. But they are really lovely. If I had been at that social where they toasted the Corner bride, I should have made her sing the "Cat Song." How about it Neighbor Everady?

C. E. S. thinks we should send in new recipes, so here is one I always have good luck with. It is so easy also.

Cream Cakes: Break two eggs in a cup, fill cup up with sour cream, add to one cup of sugar in mixing bowl. Then add one and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon baking soda, one-half teaspoon cream of tartar, flavoring to taste. We like almond, vanilla or a grating of lemon or orange rind. Mix all together and beat well. Bake in moderate oven. Use any kind of frosting.

What a warm winter we have had so far until this last cold snap! Just before Christmas we took a long ride—hubby and I. We certainly did have a good time. That is, what we call a good time. Everything was so lovely in the woods. We got out, parked the car and took a long walk through the woods. We gathered a great pile of ground pine and saw lovely ferns as green as though in summer and mosses, oh, such lovely mosses. There was a lacy one with fine branching growth just like a dainty feathery fern, a soft velvety moss, that made one want to caress it with the hands, a spiky kind with little red tips, gray feathers standing up just reaching for your attentions. Another moss stood up stiff and green with little horizontal branches like miniature pine trees. Oh, lovely, always something to find in the cool woods. Finally we came out on a path and stood on a tiny little bridge or culvert and there, winding along through the trees mostly at that point, hemlocks and pines, was water as clear as glass, but not so calm. It was just dancing and singing—this little stream. The stones beneath on the bed were just simply smothered with moss and a tiny green watercress plant looking like watercress. We stood and looked and looked. Then we looked at each other. There was really nothing to say. We both felt the same way, so we just stood awhile and let the beauty and calm and the slight whispering sound of the breeze in the trees, fill us with peace and contentment. We hated to leave, but we had to, so back to the car we trudged with our burden of greens. When we reached home we felt we had spent the time well. No matter what the season there is always something to find in the woods. If nothing else, if there is nothing tangible to enjoy. There is always that feeling of deep peace. One forgets all troubles, all strife both great and small, and just remembers to be glad one is alive. Well, this is so long I know it will never be printed. The editor will simply say. To the waste basket for yours. Anu poor Primrose waiting for a "better" letter from my pen. To tell you the truth, but don't let it go any further, the pen very often runs away with me.

A FLOWER LOVER.

PRESTON CITY

The Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church met Wednesday afternoon and accomplished much work.

The cottage prayer meetings are well attended, and of deep interest. Thursday evening Mrs. Ella Bennett opened her home to those attending and Mrs. W. D. Hetherington ably led the meeting. Next Thursday evening the prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Parker.

The people of this town, needing ice, have begun the work of cutting and housing it. It is clear good ice about nine inches thick.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Stopped her Suffering and Restored her Health

Momence, Illinois.—"I surely can recommend your medicine to other women who have female weakness, as it has helped me very much in every way possible. I was working in a dining room in town, and sometimes I could not do my work; had pains in the lower part of my body and had to stay in bed. One of my neighbors told me what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and it has surely done wonders for me. I hope all women who suffer will take my advice as the Vegetable Compound has done so much to bring back my vigor and strength."—Mrs. ALBERT E. DESCHAUD, Momence, Illinois.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 9 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."

That is 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by druggists everywhere.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

ON AN ERRAND FOR NAPKINS

"Why don't you sing?" asked Little Jack Rabbit, one bright morning, looking up at the tiny canary bird in her gold cage.

"Because you haven't given me my breakfast," answered the pretty yellow bird.

"Dearest me!" exclaimed the little bunny, "did I forget? I've polished the front door knob and filled the woodbox. How could I have forgotten you?"

"You have," twitted the tiny bird, "but I'll excuse you just this once, but, please, again, don't be a dunce."

Well, well, well, if my typewriter hasn't forgotten to make a verse out of this pretty rhyme. What shall I do? Buy a new one with a lettuce leaf dollar bill?

Just then the Old Red Rooster hopped up on the back porch and began to crow. My, what a lusty crow. It echoed clear over to Danny Fox's little stone house on the woody hillside.

"This or That" asked the old gentleman Bunny's Little Housekeeper.

"Wish I could catch that old bird," thought the crafty robber fox, "he'd make a good dinner, although he is tough."

"Hello, little rabbit," said the Old Red Rooster, peeking in through the door, "where's mother?"

"Over at Cousin Cottontail's," answered the bunny boy, "She'll be back in a minute or three; she hopped over to borrow some turnip tea."

As he finished speaking, in came Lady Love, her pink sunbonnet half off her head, blown back no doubt by Billy Breeze as he whistled through the trees.

"Wish you'd hop over to Uncle Lucky's," said the pretty rabbit lady to her little son. "Tell him Cousin Cottontail needs four more napkins for her dinner party."

Away went the little rabbit, hipperty hip, hipperty hip, down the path through the brambles and up the Old Cow Path. Pretty soon, not so very far, he came to Uncle Lucky's little white house on the corner of Lettuce avenue and Carrot street in Rabbitville.

But, dear me. The dear old gentleman bunny had gone to Lettucemere on business and Little Miss Mousie was so busy she could hardly stop to listen.

"Cousin Cottontail wants four napkins," repeated the bunny boy for the second time.

"Pink or blue?" asked the old gentleman bunny's little housekeeper, opening the linen closet. Maybe she'd like flower-bordered ones."

"I don't know," replied Little Jack Rabbit. "Mother just said four napkins."

"Very well," sighed Little Miss Mousie, "These will do, I guess," and she handed him four pretty yellow napkins with white daisy flowers in the corners.

Then away hopped the bunny boy to Cousin Cottontail's snug little cottage under the Old Brush Heap in the corner of the Old Snake Fence.

"Glad you came in time," said that kind lady rabbit "I am having a tea party this afternoon for the grown-ups. You can stay if you wish." But the little bunny said no, he'd rather play with Timmie Meadowmouse, and he went clipperty clip, hipperty hip into the next story.

COMEDY — CONCERT ORCHESTRA — NEWS

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Forming a half century ago occurred [illegible] the close of the present week, Saturday night and early Sunday morning, January 26th, the severest cold of the winter season of the year [illegible] weather ending in harvest weather, warmer, pleasant and [illegible] a foretaste of coming spring.

On Saturday of this week the river was frozen over and [illegible] were sliding on the ice Monday. The river was frozen over and closed to traffic on Sunday fifty years ago.

A heavy storm visited the city during the week and electricity was imported [illegible].

Other interesting items taken from the issues of 1874, including the week [illegible] a few interesting items, is published in the following columns:

Monday, January 27, 1874—The store of Putnam & Peckham on Water street [illegible] burst open about three. Friday night and thieves entered the Dime Savings bank by the door and tried [illegible] entrance to the place by burrowing through the wall. Being stopped by the brick wall on the inside the [illegible] broke down the stairway and finally gained admission to the store.

[illegible] C. Fowler opened an eel the other day that measured thirty-nine and one half inches long and twelve inches around the body.

Many local people are interested to learn that Rudolph B. Hooker and Sumner B. Anthony are to speak at the Universalist church next Friday evening [illegible] the subject of woman suffrage.

H. G. Mahon of Ledyard shot an Esopus redtail that measured seven feet from the nose to the tip of the tail. Several other large hawks have been captured lately along the coast and many miles from Connecticut waters.

Tuesday, January 27, 1874—Ward has [illegible] news of the death of Miss Kate Cronin, one of the "Three Successful Girls," in Denver City, Col., recently. Rockwell, the druggist, died [illegible] week, and was the entire [illegible] Julia, who is still living, and [illegible] Scotchtown, N. Y., is another of the [illegible] "Three Successful Girls." She was also a visitor to the Bulletin for a number of years. The sisters [illegible] Miss Rockwell, whose sister-in-law [illegible] will recollect.

[illegible] have been given by the war department of the creation of a new [illegible] on Block Island harbor. The beacon is on the northeasterly end of the ledge. It is built of granite, 15 courses high, 10 feet in diameter at the base, 7 feet in diameter at the top, and carries that distance above high water mark. It is surrounded by a shaft and cage of iron, twenty feet in height.

The oldest stone bridge at Trading Cove is now entirely completed and in use by the public. It was built by James Crawford and cost about $4,000. It is an ornament to that portion of the town.

The laying of the ice skirt road recently on cold weather claims upon the [illegible] that when winter has set in cold [illegible] it is time— at least, for the present.

Wednesday, January 28, 1874—Tuesday the Second Second Baptist church in Waterford was dedicated. The dedicatory [illegible] of worship now [illegible] from date. The dedicatory service began at 1 o'clock with the [illegible] by the Rev. M. F. Allen of Groton. The scriptures were [illegible] by Rev. B. B. Lyon of Montville, prayer was offered by Rev. M. Bolton of Preston City, and the dedicatory [illegible] was preached by Rev. [illegible] of Mystic. A number of [illegible] people attended the services.

Col. I. W. Carpenter the popular [illegible] of the Greenville Rod company, intends to begin gardening in the [illegible] reservoir. He is at it already in [illegible] and of fine quality.

The trail of the Water street burglar leads to New York, but little hope [illegible] his capture.

Thursday, January 29, 1874 — Colchester [illegible] to have created a [illegible] over the question of the patent of the Tremaine [illegible], for which James D. Merry of [illegible] is the principal party [illegible] in these [illegible]. Mr. Merry [illegible] nearly all the railroads in [illegible] the interest involved in suit [illegible] fifty million dollars. The [illegible] a committee last year visited [illegible] the invention but there is [illegible] will be as to whether it has [illegible] or not. The matter will be [illegible] this week.

The [illegible] Globe varnish on display in the store of J. F. Barrows [illegible] through in the last two months [illegible] sixteen pounds to a little over two and one half pounds. This was [illegible] thus beautiful that the imitation is [illegible].

At a meeting of Uncas encampment officers [illegible] H. Gardiner at his house on the East Side last evening [illegible] a nearly [illegible] was enjoyed.

The window of S. A. Goldsmith's millinery store was smashed last night by a drunken man who leaned [illegible] head against the window. Nothing was lost but the man was taken to the station and made to pay for the damage he had caused.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Crose celebrated their silver wedding anniversary last evening at their home on Williams street. Many valuable gifts of silverware were received by the happy couple.

Friday, January 30, 1874—Thirty-one years ago last September a gentleman deposited with the Norwich Savings society of this city $175. Since that time he has neither withdrawn nor added anything to that account. Today the balance at the bank to his credit is $1,111.11, showing an accumulation of interest on the $175 of $936.11, equal to a dividend of about 535 per cent on the original deposit.

At a meeting of the Delancy Engine company No. 5, held last evening, the following officers were elected: William P. Myers, foreman; J. F. Romaine, first assistant; P. H. Hickey, second assistant; George W. Roberts, clerk; George C. Sweet, treasurer.

Pickerel catchers are now out in force every day but thus far no very large hauls have been reported.

Capt. Mack of Essex, who has often come to Norwich to bring coal on the A. S. Hazard, was recently struck by the boom on his vessel. His dog seeing that something was wrong acted in such a manner as to attract the attention of the crew, which came to the assistance of Capt. Mack, who was given good attention and will recover.

Saturday, January 31, 1874— Capt. O'Farrell of Hartford has finally won a game from Private Smith of Norwich, and now Hartford papers are clamoring for the right to claim the championship. Private Smith formerly beat O'Farrell three straight games in the first series and took one of the three games in the second series. Norwich people fail to see where Hartford gets the claim for championship honors.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS FIRM.

New York, Feb. 1.—Stock prices displayed a firm undertone in today's active market despite considerable bear selling and profit-taking in various sections of the list. Establishment of new high record for all time by American Can at 122 5-8 and a further rise in U. S. Steel common to 107 1-4, the highest price since last April, were among the features although both stocks cancelled their gains and closed at small fractional losses.

Speculators for the advance were encouraged by the further increase in the federal reserve ratio, which brought it to the highest level since the spring of 1917, and a report of unprecedented railroad traffic in January. Rails made a better general showing than the industrials, Southern Railway creating another new record price at 47 5-8 while the St. Louis Southwestern issues advanced about a point each, buying of all being based on speculative expectation of an early resumption of dividends.

Independent steels showed consistent strength on reports of increased operations and higher earnings. Bethlehem closed nearly 2 points higher at 60 7-8; Crucible and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe each moved up 1 3-4 and Gulf States and Republic closed more than a point higher. Tobaccos developed temporary strength but were unable to maintain their gains in the late wave of profit-taking although American Tobacco closed 1 1-2 higher at 154 3-4 after selling a point above that figure.

Testimony before the senate committee bringing the names of former cabinet officers into the oil inquiry resulted in a renewed attack on the Pan-American issues, each of which closed about 1 1-2 points lower. Rubbers still felt the depressing effects of tire cuts, Kelly-Springfield showing a loss of nearly 1 1-2 points at the close. Pacific Oil and Standard Oil of California were heavily sold at the close, each dropping about 2 1-2 points, on reports that the latter might be compelled to give up its holdings in the area under senate investigation.

Some of the high spots in the industrial list included Houston Oil, Otis Elevator, Fisher Body and South Porto Rican Sugar, up 3 to 4 points.

A further remarkable rally in sterling, which carried demand bills above $4.35, an overnight gain of 5 cents, was the feature of the foreign exchange market. French francs again sold above 4.70 cents, other European rates improved in sympathy.

Call money opened at 4 1-2, dropped to 4 1-4 and thence to 4, reflecting the passing of month-end requirements for funds. Time money continued firm with the market still on a 4 3-4 per cent. basis. The commercial paper market was dull, prime names commanding 4 3-4 per cent.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Feb. 1.—Bond prices pressed firmly upward today, with a strong undertone in all parts of the list, and renewed trading activity in French municipal issues which recorded gains of from 1 to 2 points. Serbian 8s again led the entire market in turnover, but, after advancing to a price 10 points above last week's low yeilded a part of their gain.

Pronounced strength of Liberty bonds set several issues to new high marks, and the rise was accompanied by a widening demand. Heavy buying of the treasury notes developed, traders explaining that their more distant maturity was an attractive feature and that "switching" operations into this issue were taking place.

The improved outlook abroad for a settlement of the reparations questions and prospects for a resumption of trading relations between France and Germany, together with the rise in exchange rates, helped the French bonds. United Kingdom 5 1-2s of 1929 also were in demand as sterling advanced, and gained a point.

Buying of railroad issues was well distributed and prices generally moved up, the greatest strength being displayed in the obligations of roads such as Seaboard and International Great Northern, in which favorable developments had been reported during the week.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—With striking unanimity, wheat, corn and oats today all over-topped one or more previous high price records for the season. Active speculative buying was largely responsible but was later offset in part as a result of sales to realize profits. Wheat closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 5-8c higher, May $1.11 1-2 to $1.11 5-8 and July $1.10 1-2 to $1.10 5-8. Corn made net gains of a shade to 3-8 @ 1-2c.

In oats the outcome varied from 1-8c decline to 3-8c advance and in provisions the close ranged from 7c off to a rise of 17c.

Likelihood of crop damage had much to do with encouraging the purchase of wheat. Alternate intervals of thawing and freezing weather was the principal factor in this respect. It was reported that snow covering had disappeared from the greater part of the winter crop belt, leaving the plant exposed to any severe drop in temperature. Damage complaints were said to be already coming in, based on past experience. According to a generally accepted authority, the late sown wheat was in most danger, the early crop being well-rooted. A sharp advance in foreign exchange also was a bullish influence, as tending to augment the buying power of Europe.

Fresh strength in the corn market developed chiefly from reports of bad condition of country roads and because of prospects that rural stocks of corn stood in hazard of deteriorating under present adverse weather conditions.

Unusual scarcity of oats was reported, especially at St. Louis and Minneapolis. Besides, there was much closing out of spreads in oats between here and Winnipeg.

Irregularity in the provision market came through packers selling lard, whereas commission houses bought ribs.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Feb. 1.—Curious cross currents of prices characterized today's curb market with the major currents of prices characterized today's curb market with the major activity on the downward side.

Atlantic Lobs preferred broke 6 5-8 points when a block of 3,300 shares was thrown into the market. New York Trahair dropped 5 and losses of 3 to 4 points were recorded by Prairie Oil & Gas, Standard Oils of Ohio and Nebraska, and Eureka Pipe. Cumberland pipe advanced 4 points in response to the higher dividend and Chesebrough Manufacturing jumped 15 points on a scant turnover. Solar Refining and Swan and Finch also were strong. New Mexico land was active and strong in expectation of important oil developments in the Holbrook field, the stock touching a new high at 8 1-4, the day's sales totalling nearly 19,000 shares.

A sharp jump of 2 5-8 points in Dubilier Radio in further reflection of reports of record operations and earnings was the feature of the industrial list. Liggett & Myers issues, which were the weak spots yesterday, rallied briskly and then forfeited most of their gains. Gillette Safety Razor and Durant Motors were heavy.

What To Do For Frail, Feeble, Old People

"When age begins to thin the blood all the vital functions slow down and impair the health. In such cases," says Dr. Emil Sauer, "I know of nothing better than true organic iron."

"What old people need most, is something to put back the iron in their blood. Without iron nothing you eat does you any good. Your food merely passes through you. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food."

"For old people who feel their former strength slipping away, I always prescribe Nuxated Iron, which contains iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and like the iron in your blood. It is a true tonic, blood and body builder, and in my own practice, I have had aged people tell me that they felt years younger after in only a few weeks' time."

Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Emil Sauer, may be had of any good drug store. Try taking two tablets three times a day for two weeks, and if you do not feel years younger with new strength, energy and health, your own druggist will gladly refund your money.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

POETRY

Second May Day

The wind and ground has on quite a chill,
It's hard to tell just what to do,
The sun in the heavens he blew his bugle
Blow!

Bugle, he called, and blew, and blew,
Then the ground was checked and said
"Oh, no!
We will have cold weather for six weeks more."
And the sun in his hole spit he stayed his nose.

Though bitterly rose his cold wind blew
And people resisted that winter did through.
The ladies walked out in winter clothes dressed
Two poor little lambs began to sneeze and sneer.

In his hole the ground hog turned in his sleep
And laughed at the thought of Winter's deep
Then the north wind blew, oh, blew, cold!
And the people began to shiver and scold

But the ground hog turned in his cozy warm bed,
Stroked his chin whiskers, and chuckled
and said,
"The flip and the sniffle, the sneeze, the complain
Perhaps you'll believe when I tell you again."

He rang up his telephone under the hill,
Saying, "Don't call me up till the 10th day of March."

—Reed Tate Bonds.

The Dreamer

I would not sell my dreams for all the gems
And gold
I count my dreams my soul's immortal heritage, begotten from divine
Immutable decree far above the sin'en the rapture of the free.
My dreams have scaled the heights impassable, and I was unafraid.
Have cleared hands with their wherein the silent played
Have felt the mystic power of bud and flower and sunset gleams.
O, every heart, life, were a changeless
Fleet sound its head or Wild, nasturtiums, burning red have found my dreams.

—Herbert Randall in Boston Transcript.

"So your daughter's married. Let's see, I expect you found it very hard to part with her?"

"Hard! I should think so. Between you and me, my boy, I began to think it was impossible!"—Alnwick Guardian.

"Yes," remarked the gentle groom, "they separated. He liked a fast liver, and she was rather a slow poke."

"I see," observed Miss Cayenne, "incompatibility of temper."—Washington Star.

"There is one thing, Bridget," said the mistress, "that I insist upon. If you break any dishes, come and tell me at once."

"Sure, ma'am," protested Bridget, "I can't be runnin' to ye every minute of the day."—Chicago News.

"If you think there's something wrong with your heart, why don't you consult a specialist?"

"I'm afraid he would say it was something fatal."

"Oh, nonsense! He wouldn't be an awfully good doctor."—Boston Transcript.

"Would you like some views of the hotel to send to your friends?"

"Sir," said the disgruntled guest, "I presume it will be better for me to keep my views to myself."—London Tit-Bits.

"I have just thought of an easy way to get rich quick," said the president of the music publishing firm.

"Fine," replied the vice president. "What's the idea?"

"Let's pick out some good lunatic asylum and get the inmates to write songs for us."—Baltimore American.
